No-we will give the preference to one, who although she may be educated and refined, knows well that "worth makes the man." And now is there any good reason, why a lady placed in these circumstances, should be considered to have lowered herself a whit beneath her friends, who perchance have married, one lawyer, and another mer-¶---6w chaot ? Let us see wherein the difference consist. We will suppose the farmer possessed of a competence, or in other words, "well off in the world," to us a homely expression, and the lawyer. or merchant, as it may be similarily situated. Where is the "Why of course the farmer's wife has to live in the country-that is reason enough, savs one, "her location, excludes her from will put up the Apparatus, at but a trifling association with the better part of society, who are found in large places," True every thing required for permanent lights at him must live in the country. If one's happiness depends upon constant interchange of visits, and an unceasing routine of fashionable gaiety; one who lives in the country with these tastes, must either remain ungratified, and unhappy, or her taste and habits of feeling must hange. But gratifications of this sort are by no means an essential part of happiness, But a more serious reason, and one which is oftener brought as an objection to the situation of a farmer's wife, is this. In order to discharge her dutics satisfactorily and creditably to herself and family, she must do an immense amount of hard work. By the way, this objection is viewed differently, by different individuals. There are those who look upon all physical labor as degrading,

"How singular and unfortunate it is," ex-work so hard as the farmers' wives. That circumstances often require this it is useless to deny. But that a women is constantly to work, and have no leisure, because she is the farmer's wife, I do deny. A man who owns a small farm red to hire much help so that the labor of his wife, is not very great. One who owns a larger one, and is required to hire help, "out of doors," if he manages as he ought, with economy and skill, also be able to hire all needful assistance "in doors.". Where a man owns a large farm, and is still unable to him all needful for his wife we infer that there is an exception, and is not the general rule. Bad management, an avaricious disposition, or anything which tends to increase the burden of the wife are wrong management somewhere, and this makes not necessarly the result of tilling the soil, but these same habits and traits of character would exhibit themseles in any other situan tion in life, and of course the result would be the same!

An Editor in Heaven.

Under the above caption a Southern newspaper gives a long obituary of a brother of the quill, from which we extract the closing paragraph.

Are we not also glad that such an editor is in heaven ? There the cry of "inore copy" shall never fall upon his distracted ears. There he shall never be abused any more by his political antagonist, with lies and detractions that should shame a demon to promulgate. There he shall no more be used as a ladder for the aspiring to kick down as they reach the desired height, and need him no more. There he shall be able to see the immense masses of mind he has moved, all unknowing and unknown as he has been; a clap of his thunder stolen ; and there shall be no horrid typographical errors to set him in a fever. We are glad the editor is in leaven.

'Ma,' said a little girl to her mother, tde men want to get married as much as the vomen do?"

"Psha ! what are you talking about ?" 'Why, ma, the women who come here, are always talking about getting married, the men don't do so.',
