New Boot, Shoe and Leather Store in Allentown.
RONEY & GOOD

Have lately entered into Partnership in the above business, and have taken the large and spacious house on the corner, directly opposite the Odd Fellows' Hall, in Hamilton street.

They inform their former customers and the public in general, that they intend doing business on a more extensive scale, than has ever before been done in Allentown. They keep from 40 to 50 hands in employ, by which means they will be able to furnish customers work at the shortest possible notice. Their stock on hand at present comprises a very large assortment of Gentlemen's Superfine, Patent Leather, French Morocco and besides a large lot of course mens' and boys' boots.

Their stock of Ladies shoes is indeed very large, as they intend to be able to fill out large orders (from country merchants) among which can be found every possible style of dress shoes, such as Jenny Lind's, Buskins, Lace Boots, Jenny Lind Boots, Polkas, Slippers, Ties, Gaiters, Kossuth, Excelsior, Strap.

All the above styles are manufactured of Patent Leather, Kidd, Morocco or Lasting. The shoes of every variety and styles plain and fancy colored.

They manufacture with a view of furnishing stock to merchants from the country in any quantity, and they will warrant all the goods they manufacture to be of better material and more durable; and at prices less than they can be purchased in Philadelphia.

A full assortment of shoe findings, of every description. Also all kinds of Leather, Oak and Hemlock tanned sole leather, Kip, Calf and French Morocco, Kid, Patent Lining Leather, all of which will be sold at city prices.

They invite merchants and customers from the country to give them a call, examine their large stock of goods, and we assure them they will not go away dissatisfied. We say again, remember the place—opposite the Odd Fellows' Hall, in Hamilton Street, Allentown.

Neatly executed at the "Register" Office.

The School-Master.

Jeremiah Paul was a short, round personage, with a quick, I had almost said, a spiteful little grey eye, a bald head in front, and a short still one behind. He was a wonderful man to look at, and his history was no less so than his person. At one period he was the village school-master, rare pedagogue and learned; it is said, not only familiar with Dilworth's Spelling Book and Psalter, but also with such difficult mathematical problems as are comprehended in the abridgement of Ptolemy's Arithmetic. It may be readily supposed that such a ripe and rare scholar would not be called to remain long in obscurity. His talents were not of an order to bide a moment, and accordingly in his fortieth year, he was favored with the office, and enriched with the emoluments appertaining to no less a dignity than a Justice of the Peace.

But we are getting ahead of our story, and with the usual permission, we will go back a few years, and introduce him to the wife of Mr. Paul. She was in common character, a great, good-natured, hard-worked woman, who used to attend school on purpose, to use her own phrase, "to get some for Jerry." And, being she was a plain one. She used to bounce in and out whenever she pleased; she pinched the boys, asked the price of the girls, and finally to such a pitch did her authority arrive, that she even presumed to lay hands on the nicely adjusted cue of the declining himself.

Jeremiah was leaning over his desk, in a musing attitude, engaged in profound mathematical calculation, respecting the probable value of the tenant of his landlord's pig sty when this outrage took place. He had already placed the subject in a half dozen different positions before his own eyes, and was just on the point of commencing his calculations to the Legislature of a state, upon which his elbow was resting, when a vigorous jerk at the hairy appendage of his pericranium, started him half upright in a minute, and drew from him a cry not unlike that of the very animal which was the subject of his scientific cogitations.

Jeremiah did not swear, for he was an exemplary and church-going pedagogue; but his countenance actually blackened with rage and stormy around him; and the ill-suppressed laughter of his disciples added not a little to his chagrin.

"Who! who! who! I say." He could articulate no more. He was nearly choked with passion.

"That great ugly girl there who pinches me so," said a little ragged urchin, with a dirty face.

Jeremiah confronted the fair delinquent, but it was plain from his manner, that he would rather have undertaken the correction of the whole school beside, than that of the incorrigible offender in question. His interrogating glance was met by a look in which it would have been difficult to say whether good nature or impudence predominated.

"Did you meddle with my cue?" said the domineer; but his voice trembled, his situation was peculiarly awkward.

"—I—what do you suppose I want with your cue?" and a queer smile played along her mouth, for a pretty one she had, and what is worse, the dominie himself thought so.

Jeremiah, seeing that he was about to lose his authority, heemed twice, shook his head at such of the rogues as were laughing immediately at their master's perplexity, and reaching his hand to his female said—

"Give me your hand, Miss." His heart misgave him as he spoke. The fair white hand was instantly proffered, and as gently too, as that of a modern belle at a cotillon party. Jeremiah took it; it was a pretty hand, a very pretty hand, and then her face there was something in its expression which seldom failed to disarm the pedagogue's anger.

He looked first at her hand, then at her face, expressive of a roguish confidence then at his female, a heavy instrument of torture, entirely unfit to hold companionship with the soft fair hand held in derance before him. Never, in all the annals of his brierchen authority had Jeremiah Paul experienced such perplexity. He lifted up his right hand two or three times, and as often withdrew it.

"You will not strike me?" said the girl. There was an artless confidence in these words, and the tone in which they were uttered, they went to the heart of the pedagogue. Like Mark Anthony before the beautiful Cleopatra, and the fierce leader of the Volsci before his own Virginia, the dominie relented.

"If I pardon you for this offence, will you conduct yourself more prudently in future?"

"—I hope I shall," said the prudent young lady, and the master evinced his affectionate solicitude for the welfare of his pupil by pressing the hand he had imprisoned, and the fair owner expressed her gratitude for such condescension, by returning the pressure.

They were married just six months afterwards. So much for beauty in school discipline.

"CUFFY, is that the second bell?" "No massa, dat's de second tringing of the fuss bell. We habn't got any second bell in dis hotel."

Great Balloon Ascention.

Mons. PERIN, a Frenchman, made a fine balloon ascention at Bridgeport, Ct., a few days ago and has published an account of it. His balloon was 70 feet in diameter, and the boat attached was twenty feet long. In it besides himself were Mons. Giesgrave Reepart, of France, and Mr. Wood, of Bridgeport. Sixty-four men held the ropes until the signal was given to "let go." He says—

"With the rapidity of an arrow we went, in a few minutes, to the height of 10,000 feet. We yet heard the huzzas which were sent to us from our friends below and felt the vibration in the ropes of our balloon.— We now saw the cities, villages, woods and rivers, as an unsurpassed landscape. In a beautiful firm of green we saw the public buildings and churches of the city of Bridgeport, whose domes and towers and spires, gilded by the sun, shone like gold and pearls beneath us. We saw the city of New Haven, with its pleasant greens, and on the other side the village of Fairfield, West-Rochelle, and a thousand other scenes of domestic tranquillity and happiness so highly favored by the Creator of the world.

"For beneath us, shining like molten silver, lay Long Island Sound, dotted with vessels, which appeared like specks upon its bosom, while Long Island appeared in the distance, and far beyond, the broad expanse of the ocean. We observed the direction of our currents—it was the fifth time we changed them—and we found a constant current, 15,000 feet from the earth, from east to west which would take us over the American continent; a current known already to extend over 13,000 miles. Below and about 4000 feet from the earth, is a current in the opposite direction, which would take us to Europe in less than four days, if it were the will of the Supreme Being. At the height we now were (13,000 feet) the balloon appeared to us like a vast rug, framed by the azure. It threw its large shadow on the clouds, and gave us the image of an aerial Venice. I threw out more ballast, and we ascended nearly as far as it is possible for human beings to exist; we had reached the height of 22,000 feet. The earth appeared a chaos—thermometer at 9 below zero. The cold was intense; a heavy hail storm, held in the air by a power unknown to us, but probably an electric power, enveloped us, in a thrilling and awful manner. Respiration was almost impossible, and we could not hear each other speak.

"One of our companions, being benumbed into a profound sleep. We left so weak that my other companion and myself were hardly able to open the valve. At last we succeeded in opening it, and we descended rapidly to an altitude of 13,000 feet. The imagination of the exalted to such extreme height, grows vivid and warm, as the body becomes dull and chilled. For us no reality no limits, were existing. The dreams of Bernardine and St. Pierre were realized; universal peace seemed to be on earth, and the whole globe were United States. But a strong condensation of the gas brought us back to the reality of terrestrial objects, and we descended to the ground.

We landed at River Head, L. I., fifty miles from Bridgeport, and ninety from Brooklyn, where we found the kindest assistance from the inhabitants."

Plowing Clover in for Wheat.

A writer in the Farm Journal, in Millin county, who signs with the initials J. W., offers the following as his experience of the value of Plowing in Clover for Wheat.—It is worthy the attention of the general farmer:

In the summer of 1849, I had a small field of 41 acres in clover which I pastured a while, and then let the clover grow until it was fit to cut for seed. With a large plow and three strong horses, I plowed it, then harrowed it effectually, and it lie under until the 28th of September when I seeded it. In the harvest of 1850, I cut 135 dozen of wheat, which yielded 165 bushels or 367 bushels per acre.—It did not require to be seeded with clover the next season again, and the Wheat now looks fine, although a part was winter killed. It is proper to state that the crop of wheat that was on it before the clover was plowed down, did not exceed ten bushels per acre.

"Of what is cider made?" "I don't know sir." "What a stupid boy. What did you get when you robbed widow Upton's orchard?" "I got a licking, sir."

"Sir WALTER SCOTT tells us a story of a gentleman, who, irritated at the misconduct of his servant, said, 'John, either you or I must quit this house.' 'Very well, sir,' said John, where will you honor be going to?"

"Daddy," said a young hopeful, "let's go up to the nine pine alley and roll." "Roll I boy what do you know about rolling?"

"Me know about? Why I can roll your darned eyes out in less than ten minutes."
