N. D. KNIGHT
Manufacturer of Improved Chain Pumps.
ALLENTOWN LEHIGH COUNTY.
The undersigned takes this method to inform the public generally, that he continues to manufacture the new and Improved Chain Pumps with Iron Curb, for which he has just got out a new pattern and is now prepared to fill orders for same. A constantly increasing demand for these Pumps, resulting in part from the great improvements we have lately effected in their construction, affords substantial evidence of their superior adaptation to the public wants. We, therefore, have no hesitation in saying that they give better satisfaction to purchasers, are more economical, and do their work more rapidly and with less expenditure of labor than any other Pumps in use. Their operation gives motion to the water, and thus effectually prevents it from becoming stagnant and impure. They are made so as to be readily put in operation, even by experienced hands—can be put together at the Factory or sent away in parts, as customers prefer; and they can be easily and cheaply transported to any part of the country.
He trusts the low prices for which he offers his Pumps, will be an inducement to those who want the article to give him a call.

AMERICAN HOTEL,
AND
GENERAL STAGE OFFICE,
Corner of Hamilton and William Streets, ALLENTOWN.
John Y. Bechtel
Announces to his friends and the public, that he has purchased the stock and fixtures of the above named Hotel recently occupied by Jonathan Kolb. The house is one of the largest and most convenient Hotels in the borough, and its location, in the immediate vicinity of the Court house and public offices, makes it a desirable stopping place, as well to the men of pleasure as of business. The proprietor therefore, assures the public, that he is now ready to accommodate all who may honor him with their custom, in the best manner.
His TABLE will always be supplied with the best the market affords; the BAR with the choicest wines and Liquors; the BEDS and ROOMS are clean and comfortable; and, in fact, everything is arranged with a view to the convenience and comfort of his customers.
In short, he has determined to spare neither means nor expense to make his house equal to any in the country, and he therefore respectfully solicits a share of the public patronage.
The Allentown and Pottstown, and the Easton and Reading Stages, start from this house. It is also the stage office for the other lines that leave Allentown.

In Allentown.
Shaffer & Hunter.
Respectfully inform their friends and the public in general, that they have lately bought out the Stock of Mr. John Reiser, and will continue at the old stand, in Hamilton Street, between the Allentown Hotel and J. B. Moser's Apothecary Store, where they are prepared to execute all orders in their line of business. They also inform the public that they have just returned from Philadelphia with a large assortment of Ladies, Misses & Gentlemen's Gum Shoes.
They also keep on hand of their own manufacture, a general assortment of extra fine and coarse Gentlemen's Boots, Monroes and Shoes.—Also, Ladies' and Misses' Morocco and Prunella Gaiters, Booties and Shoes. Boys and Childrens, Boots and Shoes—all made of the best material, of their own selection. They will warrant all their work, and orders will be executed at the shortest notice, and in the neatest manner. The hands in their employ are of the best that can be found, both in the Ladies' as well as Gentlemen's branch of the business.
The assortment they keep on hand is very extensive, comprising every article that may be called for in their line.
Persons who are in want of a pair of good Boots or Shoes, an article highly necessary to keep your feet warm and dry, will do well to give them a call, before purchasing elsewhere, as they do not intend to charge anything for showing their goods.

Sin Found Out.
There was once a boy, whose father sent him to ride a few miles upon an errand, and told him particularly not to stop by the way. It was a beautiful and sunny morning in the spring; and as he rode along by the green fields, and heard the singing of the birds as they flew from tree to tree, he felt as light-hearted and as happy as they. After doing his errand however, as he was returning by the house where two of his friends and playmates lived he could not resist the temptation just to call a moment to see them. He thought there would be no great harm if he merely stopped a minute or two, and his parents would never know it. Here commenced his sin. He stopped, and was led to remain longer and longer, till he found he had passed two hours in play. Then, with a troubled conscience, he mounted his horse and set his face towards home. The fields looked as green and the skies as bright and cloudless as when he rode along in the morning; but oh, how different were his feelings! Then he was innocent and happy; now he was guilty and wretched. He tried to feel easy, but he could not; conscience reproached him with his sin. He rode sadly along, thinking what excuse he should make to his parents for his long absence, when he saw his father at a distance coming to meet him. His father seeing that some accident had happened, had left home in search of his son. The boy trembled and turned pale as he saw him approaching, and hesitated whether he had better confess the truth at once and ask forgiveness, or endeavor to hide the crime with a lie. Oh! how much better it would have been for him if he had acknowledged the truth; but one sin almost always leads to another. When this kind father met his son with a smile, the boy said, "Father, I lost the road and it took me some time to get back again; and that is the reason why I have been gone so long."
His father had never known him to be guilty of falsehood, and was so happy to find his son safe, that he did not doubt what he said was true. But, oh, how guilty, and ashamed and wretched did the boy feel as he rode along. His peace of mind was destroyed. The boy went home and repeated the lie to his mother. Having committed one fault, he told a lie to conceal it, and then added sin to sin, by repeating and persisting in his falsehood. What a change had one short half-day produced in the character and happiness of this child! His parents had not detected him in sin, but he was not, on that account free from punishment. When he retired to bed that night, he feared the dark. He was guilty, and of course wretched. The first thing that occurred to him on waking was the lie of the preceding day. He could not forget it.
Thus things went on for several weeks, till one day the gentleman at whose house he had stopped, called at his father's house on business. So soon as his boy saw him come into the house, his heart beat violently and he turned pale with the fear that something would be said bringing the whole truth to light. The gentleman, after conversing a few moments with the father, turned to the little boy and said, "Well, how did you get home the other day? My boys had a very pleasant visit from you." Can you imagine how the boy felt?
You could almost have heard his heart beat. The blood rushed into his face, and he could not speak, and he dared not raise his eyes from the floor. The gentleman then turned to his parents and said, "You must let your son come up again and see my boys. They were disappointed when he was there a few days ago, for he only stayed about two hours, and they hoped he had come to spend the whole day with them." There the whole truth was out; and how do you suppose that boy felt? He had disobeyed his parents, told a lie to conceal it, had for weeks suffered the pangs of a guilty conscience, and now the whole truth was discovered.—He stood before wise parents, overwhelmed with shame, convicted of mean falsehood.
The boy was all the time suffering the consequences of his sin. For many days he was enduring the reproaching of conscience, when the knowledge of his crime was confined to his own bosom. How bitterly did he suffer for the few moments of forbidden pleasure he had enjoyed? The way of the transgressor is always hard.—This guilty child, overwhelmed with confusion and disgrace, burst into tears, and implored his parents' forgiveness. But he was told by his parents that he had sinned not only against them but against God.—The humbled child went to God in penitence and in prayer. He made a full confession of all, to his parents, and obtained their forgiveness; and it was not till then that peace of mind was restored.
When persons are detected in one falsehood, they cannot be believed when they speak the truth. One day this little boy was sent to a shop to purchase some articles for his mother. In his haste he forgot to stop for the few pence of change which he ought to have received. Upon his return home his mother inquired for the change.—He had not thought about it before, and very frankly told her that he had forgotten it entirely. How did his mother know that he was telling the truth? She had just detected him in one lie, and feared that he was now telling his mother another. "I hope, my dear son," she said, "you are not again deceiving me." The boy was perfectly honest this time, and his parents had never before distrusted his word. It almost broke his heart to be thus suspected; but he felt that it was just, and went to his chamber and wept bitterly. These are the necessary consequences of falsehood. A liar can never be believed or depended upon.—It matters not whether he tells truth or falsehood, no one can trust his word. How much safer then is it to be sincere and honest!

Strive to preserve your heart free from guile. You will then fear no detection.—You can lie down at night in peace. You can awake in the morning with joy. Trusting in the Saviour for acceptance you can die happy.—Moravian Miscellany.

A RICH STORY.
The Spirit of the Times has some correspondents, so it has; numerous fellows who write for the fun of it, and to excite fun in others. And they succeed, too, and with the aid of the tallest of editors, the real Porter, make, the Spirit the "greatest paper published."
One of them tells the adventures of a bashful "lover" as follows:
His name was Dauphule; we used to call him Jackass, for short. Heaven help me if he should see this story; I hope he does not get the Spirit.
Among many of his misfortunes, for he was cock-eyed, red haired and knock-kneed; he numbered that inconvenient one of bashfulness; nevertheless he was fond of the ladies, although, when in their presence, he never opened his mouth if he could help it, and when he did speak, he used both hands to help him; in fact, he was a man of "great action."
Jack, one warm day, fell in love; he had just graduated at College, and began to think he must seek the ladies' society; he was getting to be a man, and it was manly to have a "penchant."
So Jack fell in love with the sweetest, liveliest, most hoydenish girl in the square; but how to tell his love? there was the rub: He had heard a good deal of the "language of the eyes," and he accordingly tried that but when he looked particularly hard at the window where Miss Emily was in the habit of sitting some person on the other side of the street would invariably bow to him, thinking he was endeavoring to catch their eyes. He has despised expressive eyes ever since then.
At length Jack obtained an introduction through his sister, and with her he called several times, but she was obliged to leave the city for a season, and as each interview only increased his ardor, he determined on going it alone.
Long before the hour fixed upon by custom for an evening visit, he found himself arrayed in his best. Blue coat, metal buttons, black cassimer pants, (said pants being a leetle tighter than the skin,) and a spotless vest.
The journals of the day state, as an item of intelligence, that the thermometer ranged from 75 to 80 degrees. Jack swears it was a hundred.
As the hour gradually drew near, Jack found courage and perspiration oozing out together; and he almost determined to pull off and stay at home. He concluded, however, he'd take a walk past the house and see how he felt.
By the time he reached the mansion he firmly concludes not to go in, but on casting his eyes toward the parlor window and perceiving no signs of life, he thought it was probable that no one was at home, and since he had proceeded so far, he would proceed farther, and leave his card.
No sooner determined than concluded.—In a reckless moment he pulled the bell; the darned thing needn't make such a cussed noise.
The door was opened as if by magic, and the servant girl politely asked him in; Miss Emily was alone in the parlor, and would be delighted to see him.
O Lord! here was a fix! Go in a dark parlor with a pretty girl alone. It was too late to retreat, the girl had closed the front door, and was pointing into the parlor where Miss Emily was.
Being perfectly convinced that no choice was left him, into the dark room he walked; or slided.
All was perfect chaos to his eyes for a moment; then from the deepest gloom came forth an angel voice, "bidding him welcome and draw near." To obey the order was but the work of a moment, as he supposed, but he little dreamt of the obstacle fate had thrown in his way. He knew full well that the stream of Love had many ripples, but full grown spugs entered not into his head.
Judge then of his astonishment on being tripped up almost at the fairone's feet; by a fat stool with plethoric legs, which chance or a careless servant had placed exactly on his road to heaven.
The girl who had opened the door, and who had just been told that she had forgotten it entirely. How did his mother know that he was telling the truth? She had just detected him in one lie, and feared that he was now telling his mother another. No sooner determined than concluded.—In a reckless moment he pulled the bell; the darned thing needn't make such a cussed noise.

The door was opened as if by magic, and the servant girl politely asked him in; Miss Emily was alone in the parlor, and would be delighted to see him.
O Lord! here was a fix! Go in a dark parlor with a pretty girl alone. It was too late to retreat, the girl had closed the front door, and was pointing into the parlor where Miss Emily was.
Being perfectly convinced that no choice was left him, into the dark room he walked; or slided.
All was perfect chaos to his eyes for a moment; then from the deepest gloom came forth an angel voice, "bidding him welcome and draw near." To obey the order was but the work of a moment, as he supposed, but he little dreamt of the obstacle fate had thrown in his way. He knew full well that the stream of Love had many ripples, but full grown spugs entered not into his head.
Judge then of his astonishment on being tripped up almost at the fairone's feet; by a fat stool with plethoric legs, which chance or a careless servant had placed exactly on his road to heaven.
The girl who had opened the door, and who had just been told that she had forgotten it en-
