Poetical Department. Where is thy Home !

Where is thy home !! I asked a child, Who in the morning air

Was twining flowers sweet and mild, In garlands for her hair. 'My home,' the happy heart replied, And smiled in childish glee, Is on the sunny mountain's side,

Where soft winds wander free." Oh, blessings on thy artless youth, And on its rosy hours,

Where every world is joy and truth, And treasures live in flowers. Where is thy home?' I asked of one Who bent with flashing face.

To hear a warrior's tender strain, In the wildwood's secret place. She spoke not, but her varying check The tale might well impart-The home of her young spirit meck

Was in a kindred heart. Ab, souls that well might soar above, To earth will fondly cling, And build their hopes on human love, That light and fragile thing.

Where is thy home !' I asked of one. He was a pilgrim grey, Who came with van and furrowed cheek, Slow musing on his way.

'My home,' the happy man replied. Upturned his hely eyes, The land I seek thou ne'er hast seen-My borne is in the skies." Oh! blest thrice blest, the heart must be To whom such thoughts are given,

A Whisper to Gentlemen. Jupiter Ammon! don't I wish I was a man, just to show the masculines how to play their part in the world a little better! In the first place there ain't a mother's son of you that has got as far as A B C in the art of making love, (and I've seen a few abortions in that way myself, as well as the rest of the sisters.) that is among the things that were, after you were out of your picket and trowsers. What a splendiferous husband I (Fanny should make, to be sure! had Providence mly ordained it! Do you suppose when the mother of my glorious boys wanted a sixpence to buy their shoe strings, I'd scowl at her like a hyena, and pull my porte-monnia out of my pocket as if I were drawing a tooth? Do you suppose, when her blue eyes grew lustreless, and the rose paled on her fair clieck, trotting round the domestic treadmill day after day, that I'd come home at night, sulky and silent, and smoke my cigar in her face till her eyes were as red as a r.bbit's? or take myself off to a club or a game of nine-pins, or any other game, and leave her to the exhilerating process of darning my stockings? Do you suppose that I'd trot along like a loose pony at her side, in the street, and leave her to keep up with me or not as her, strength would permit? Do you suppose I'd fly into a passion, and atter words to crush the life from out her young heart, and then insult her by offering a healing plaster in the shape of a new bonnet? And don't you suppose when the nuniversary of our wedding-day came the auniversary of our wedding-day came and is forgotten, without being missed from-round I'd write a dainty little note and leave the breach. Do you suppose we have cultivated our minds and improved the bright and glorious gift of intellect, to the best of our capacity, to minister only to your physical wants?— Not a bit of it! When that is over we want something rational. Do you ever think of that you selfish wretch! when you sit with your feet upon the mantle-piece, reading the newspaper all to yourself, or sit from ten-time till ten o'clock, storing the ashes

Manner of Educating Girls.

As women are in danger of superstition, we must try to enlighten and strengthen' their minds. We must accustom them not to admit things without authority. Nothing is so painful as to see people of intellect and piety shudder at the thoughts of death. A woman ought to know how to resist weak fears, to be firm in danger, and to feel that a Christian, of either sex, should never be a coward; the soal of Christianity, if we may so call it, lies in the disregard of this life, and the love of another. There are several faults which are common to girls brought up in indolence and timidity; they are capable of a firm- and steady conduct; there is a good deal of affectation in those ill founded alarms, and those tears that they shed so easily. We must begin by treating them with indifference; we must repress our too tender love, little flatteries, and compliments. We must teach them to speak in a concise manner. Gennine good taste consists in saying much in a few words, in choosing among our thoughts, in having seme order and arrangement in what we relate, in speaking with composure; whereas, woman in general are enthusiastic in their language. Little can' be expected from a woman, who does not know how to express her thoughts with correctness, and how to be silent. Girls are timid and full of false shame; which is a source of dissimulation. To correct this, we must lead them to discover their thoughts without disguise; when they are tired, to say so; and not oblige them to appear to enjoy books, or society, while fatigued by them. When they have unfortunately acquired the habit of disguising their feelings, we must show them, by examples, that it is possible to be discreet and prudent without being deceitful, and tell them that prudence consists in saying little, and distrusting ourselves more than others not in dissembling speeches. Simplicity and truth excite more confidence, and succeed better, even in this world, then dissimulation. What is there more delightful than to be sincere, tranquil, in harmony with our conscience, having nothing to fear and nothing to pretend; whereas, she who dissembles is always agitated, and under the necessity of hiding one deception by a hundred others, and yet, with all these efforts, she never fails to be discovered; sooner or later she passes for what she is.

We should never coax children; if we do' we teach them to disguise the truth, and they never forget it. We must lead them from playful children often spoils them. We teach them to say every thing that comes into their minds; to speak of things of which they have no distinct idea. This habit of judging with precipitation, of speaking of things without understanding them, remains during the rest of their lives, and forms a very defective order of mind. We should never laugh at anything which is in any way associated with religion, be-fore children. We sometimes indulge ourselves in ridiculing the devotions of a simple mind, but we commit a great fault in so doing. We should speak of God with seriousness and reverence, and never trifle upon' sacred subjects. In matters of propriety we must be careful before children.

Selfishness Unchristian.

Live for some purpose in the world .-Act your part well. Fill up the measure of your duty to others ;-Conduct yourself so as that you shall be missed with sorrow when you are gone. Multitudes of species are living in such a manner, that they are not likely to be remembered a moment after their disappearance. They leave behind them scarcely any traces of their existence, but are forgotten almost as though they had never been. They are, while they live, like one pebble lying unobserved amongst unillions on the shore; and when they die, they are like that same pebble thrown into the sea, which just ruffles the surface, sinks it on her toilet table, to let her know I was the rich, wanted by the poor, nor celebrated by the learned. Who has been the better of their life? Who has been the worse for their death? Whose tears have they dried up? Whose wants supplied? Whose miseries have they healed? Who would unbar the gate of life to re-admit them to exis-tence? Or what face would greet them back again to our world with a smile.--Wretched, unproductive mode of existence. Selfishness is its own curse—it is a starving vice. The man that does no good, gets' none. He is like the heath in the desert neither yielding fruit, nor seeing when good cometh, a stunned, dwarfish, miserable
