Allentown Academy.

J. N. GIBSON, A. M., Principal.
Miss Emily Dunder Gregory, Teacher of Vocal and Instrumental Music.
Miss Jane Gregory, Principal of the Female Department.
The Fall Term of this Institution will commence on Wednesday the first day of September next. In making this announcement the trustees cannot refrain from expressing their firm conviction that the Academy is now in most efficient hands. Better advantages in all the branches of a thorough education have never been offered to this community. The satisfactory result of the Spring term which has just closed, commenced and carried on as it was under extraordinary circumstances incident to the introduction of new professors and a comparatively new system has convinced us that the Institution will ere long become one of the best in Pennsylvania. Parents wishing a school where their children will be well governed and correctly taught the English language, where their sons will be well prepared for College or Mercantile life, will do well to patronize this our own Institution.
TERMS AND FACILITIES.
The Academic year, commencing the first day in September, is divided into four terms of eleven weeks each. The vacations are as follows, one week at Christmas, two weeks at Easter, and five weeks preceding the first of September.

Livery Establishment.

This establishment takes this method to inform his friends and the public in general, that he has lately purchased the Livery Establishment formerly owned by George Bessler. He has completely re-fitted the large stock of HOUSES, CARRIAGES, &c. His Horses are gentle and all good travellers; his vehicles mostly new and of the latest style, and such as have been used are repaired and repainted in the best manner. He continues the business at the old stand in William street, in the Borough of Allentown.
He will always be prepared to furnish his customers at the shortest possible notice with safe and gentle horses, good carriages and careful drivers if requested.
Families can be situated at all times with vehicles to their particular taste.
His charges are reasonable, and in order to continue the high credit he has heretofore gained of being the best livery establishment in Allentown, he will leave nothing undone to keep on hand the best and safest horses, the neatest and most splendid carriages, and sober and careful drivers.
His charges are very reasonable and hopes by strict attention to business to satisfy all those who may favor him with their custom.

The Millers Daughter.

The miller's daughter thine she's fair,
The miller's daughter thine she's fair;
There's pearls in her braided hair,
While none at all hath Ella Cline.
The miller's daughter she has gold—
She vainly thinks I'll mate her mine;
But never, never shall be sad
The love I bear to Ellen Cline.
The miller called me yesterday,
To drink his daughter's health in wine;
The goblet filled, cried I, "Sarah,"
Oh chap, we'll drink to Ellen Cline!
She's lovely, simple, fair, and young,
She tends herself her father's kine;
There's music on her sighing tongue,
Truth in the heart of Ella Cline.
The miller he looked greff rough;
He looked at me—looked at his wine—
His daughter turned her head a-whif,
And sneered at me and Ellen Cline.
Since that I never crossed his door;
Since that I never drank his wine;
He has his daughter still in love,
And I am blessed with Len Cline.

How to Get a Wife in India.

The following mode of obtaining a helpmate, appears wonderfully convenient and satisfactory. All the delay and ceremony which precede matrimony amongst us, are avoided by this system:
When a man in a decent rank of life wishes to marry, and can prove that he possesses the means of maintaining a wife, it is customary for him to apply to the mistress of the Byculla school, state his wishes and qualifications, and inquire into the number and character of the maturing girls. An investigation immediately follows as to his eligibility; and if all promises satisfactorily, he is forthwith invited to drink tea with the school-mistress, upon an appointed evening, to give him an opportunity of making his selection. The elder girls are then informed of this intended visit, and its purpose; and those who desire to enter the matrimonial lists condescend and signify their wish to join the party. Frequently four or five competitors make their appearance on these occasions in the mistress's room. The gentleman who is doing his best to make himself universally agreeable, yet contrives in the course of the evening, to mark his preference to one particular lady. Should these symptoms of budding affection be favorably received, he tenders his proposals in due form on the following morning. But it often occurs that the selected lady does not participate in the fianceman's sudden flame, in which case she is at perfect liberty to decline the honor of his alliance, and reserve herself for the next tea party exhibition.
We have known instances where an amorous old gentleman from an out-station presented himself three successive times at these soirees, in the hope of obtaining a wife to cheer the solitude of his up country residence; but all in vain, the young ladies unanimously rejected him with the highest disdain, wondering how such an ugly old fellow could have the impudence to think of a wife! But a very different reception is given to a dashing young sergeant, or smart looking conductor; their attentions are never repulsed, and the announcement of the chosen intendeds, "as Miss Squeers would say, is anticipated with the utmost impatience by many an anxious young heart. The wedding speedily follows, the bride's modest "roussseau" being provided from the funds of the establishment, and every girl in the school cheerfully contributing her aid in the manufacture of dresses.

The Little Chip-Gatherer.

"Will you please give me a drink of water? said a little boy at the door of one of our citizens, on a warm day.
It was mid-day, and the weather was exceedingly warm. The door opened near the dining-room, and the dinner had just been placed upon the table.
"Come in my little fellow," said the gentleman of the house, while the boy, he waited.
"I thank you, sir, but I have some chips here, and wouldn't like to leave them."
"Bring them into the entry, and come in. Have you dinner?"
"No sir, I haven't; nor I didn't have any bread, because I'm sick, and I have been tearing my hair out. I have now just got some chips, and a fire with, and shall go home to get some soup."
"Soup! Then you're a cook, too, eh?"
"Yes I got some cold meat last night and it will make her good soup."
"Come my boy, sit down first and eat a good dinner with us—you will feel better."
The boy laid his stomach up in a corner, and after some coaxing, seated himself and ate heartily. He said, but little, and rose to go.
"I am very thankful, sir," said he and a tear stood in the little fellow's eye, "I wish I could pay you, but I'm stammered, but I am very poor and haven't got anything." He brushed the drop from his cheek, and turned to take his hat; but a smile played on his lips as he glanced at the chips, and added, "O, I forgot—I have got two baskets of good clean chips here, and if you will take one of them I shall be very glad; I can get another. You have been very kind to me, and they will be so handy, ma'am," said he, turning to the lady, "for you to kindle your fire with. Shall I leave them?"
"No my good boy; keep them, and take this too," said the gentleman, as he handed him some change. "When you are in need come to me again."
The poor little fellow seemed most

Playing the Piano aridow it is Done.

The other evening, we were at a party of a friend of ours, and among the lot was a gay Miss, who had just returned from the boarding school, when after any solicitations and apologies, she seated herself at the piano, looked to the right, then to the left, leaned forward, then backward, and began. She placed her right hand about midway between the keys, and her left about two octaves below them. She now pulled the right to a brisk center upon the treble notes, and her left to the left. The left then the way back, and right pure and like hammer. The right turned and repeated it is time, hopped over it, and flung it entire of the track. It came in again, however, behind the left on its return, and passed in the same style. They now became high, muffled at each other, and met furiously one middle ground. Here a most awful condition for a short space, when the right wiped off all of a sudden as we thought fair vanquished, but we were in error in the Jack Randolph's cautious us it had only fallen back to a stronger position. It hopped upon two back keys, and commenced the note of a rattlesnake. This had wonderful effect upon the left, and placed the doctrine of snake charming beyond dispute. The left rushed toward it repeatedly, but seemed invariably panic stricken when it came within six feet of it, and invariably retired with a tremendous rodown the bass keys; continued its assault, sometimes by a zigzag movement, but all attempts to dislodge the right from its straggled proved ineffectual; it came close up its adversary and expired. Any one, or her no one, can imagine what kind of noise the piano made during the conflict. Cynic it is that no one can describe them, and therefore we shall not attempt it. The Alle ended; Miss Jane moved as though she would have risen, but this was protested against by a number of voices at once.
"One song, my dear Jane," said Mrs. Small, "you must sing that sweet old French air you used to sing and which Madame Pignispinski is so fond of." Miss Jane looked pitiful at her mamma, and mamma looked 'sing' it Miss Jane; cordially she squared herself for a song; she brought her hands into a capus of tone in fine style, and they seemed to perfectly recon- ciled to each other; then commenced a kind of cology, the right speering treble very softly, and left resplend bass very loudly.
The conference had been kept up until we began to desire a change upon the subject, when our ears cast, indistinctly, some very curious sounds, which appeared to proceed from the lips of Miss Jane; it seemed to be a compound of a dry cough, a grunt, a hicough, and appeared to us as interpreters between the right and left. Things had progressed in this way for about fifteen seconds, when we seemed to direct our attention to Mr. Ross. His eyes were closed, his head swung gently from side to side, a beam of heavenly complacency rested on his countenance, and his whole man gave irresistible demonstrations that Jane's music had made him feel good all over. We resolved from contemplation of Mr. Ross's transport, to whether we could extract from the performances any thing intelligible. When Jane made a flycatching grab at half seven keys in a row, and the same instant fetched a long dung hill-cock crow, at conclusion of which she grappled at us my key with the left. This came over us like a wram bath, and over us like a roof of bamboo briars. Our nerves had not covered until Miss Jane repeated the moment, accompanying it with the squeak, pinched cat. This threw us into an ague, but from re-
