Allentown Academy.

J. N. Gregory, A. M., Principal. Mrs. Emily Dunbar Gregory, Teacher of Vocal and Instrumental Music. Miss Jane Gregory, Principal of the Female Department.

The Fall Term of this Institution will commence on Wednesday the first day of September next. In making this announcement the trustees cannot refrain from expressing their firm conviction that the Academy is now in the most efficient hands. Better advantages in all branches of a thorough education have never been offered to this community. The satisfactory result of the Spring term which was just closed, commencing and carried on as it was under embarrassing circumstances incident to the introduction of new preceptors and a comparatively new system has convinced us that the Institution will ere long become one of the best in Pennsylvania. Parents wishing a school where their children will be well governed and correctly taught the English language, where their sons will be well prepared for College or Mercantile life will do well to patronize this our own Institution.

TERMS AND VACATIONS.

The Academical year, commencing the first day in September, is divided into four terms of eleven weeks each. The vacations are as follows, one week at Christmas, two weeks at Easter, and five weeks preceding the first of September.

TUITION FEES.

Primary Studies, per term $4.00
Common English Studies, do. $4.50 and $5.00
Higher English Studies with Classics, do. $6.00

French, per term $5.00
Music, do. 8.00
Use of Piano, " do. 2.00
Fuel for the winter, " do. 5.00

Pupils who remain less than two terms will be charged one dollar per term in addition to the above prices.

No pupil will be received for any period less than one term.

Pupils, at the commencement of each subsequent term, will be expected to give notice to the Principal, if they do not intend to remain during the whole of it, otherwise they will be charged for the whole.

Deductions for absence will be made only when caused by sickness, and extending through one-half of a term.

Tuition bills should be settled at the end of each term; no bills must remain unsettled longer than two terms.

JOB PRINTING,

Neatly executed at the "Register" Office.

Gen. Scott's Speech to the Germans.

Among the many slanders which the political enemies of General Scott—for personal motives he cannot well have—are circulating through the country, in order to defeat his election to the presidency, there is one which came to his notice, for the first time, during his brief stay a few days ago, at Columbus Ohio. It appears that Judge Heyl representing a number of the German citizens of that place, waited upon Gen. Scott, and called his attention to a paragraph in the Westbote, a German paper, printed in the city of Columbus, stating that he had "tied to one tree and flogged fifteen Germans, while in the City of Mexico." The article also accused him of having cruelly hanged others.

The Ohio State Journal, speaking of the event, says that the old hero, on learning the fact, was highly excited, and drawing himself up, with heightened color and flashing eye, indignantly repelled the charge as false and malignant. His speech on the occasion—which has been upon our table for several days, but excluded from earlier notice by other pressing matters—was a most triumphant vindication of his whole course of administration while in occupation of the Mexican capital; and as a specimen of eloquence alone, most effectively puts to blush the miserable insinuations that he is deficient as an orator. The mendacious attempt to misrepresent him in the matter referred to, and to make him an object of hatred and resentment with a large body of our population evidently aroused his feeling to an unwonted degree; and while thus moved, he uttered an impassioned and forcible defence against a dastard calumny, that discovers in him more power as a speaker than even his friends were aware he possessed. We quote below a passage of the speech, which will suffice to convince all persons of the lofty and righteous principles which actuated Scott in his government of the army while in the valley of Mexico, and of his ability, on an emergency which sufficiently stirs the faculties of his mind, to deliver, without preparation, an argument worthy, in literary style and logical force, of the most practised orator. In reply to Judge Heyl and the large crowd of persons who surrounded him at the moment, Gen. Scott said: "New, and before unknown to me, are such things as have now been told. They surprise and pain me. They at once concern all that I value personally, and aim a blow at all that wherein I know myself. I have the highest pride in my met with charges of injustice and cruelty, while leading an American army through Mexico, and while participating alike in its trials and its triumphs!

"Gentlemen: It was my lot to lead an American army upon a foreign field. I went, resolved to sustain, in the fore front of my progress, the high-life water-mark of our own American Civilization, in all its moral and civil virtues. The standard of our own and not the practices of that foreign country, was the standard which I sought for the government of men's passions and the control of the license and excesses of war. Alike to Americans, whether native or of foreign birth, and to Mexicans, I declared my purpose, and exhibited my principles of action.

"I promulgated the martial code. I deemed it necessary, I could do nothing without it. I announced the spirit of our progress, and held amenable to punishment all who forgot manhood and threatened to bring shame upon our flag—dishonor our arms—or a reproach upon our virtue! All knew the law was over them. Every man of them knew he would be held as answerable for the vile misdeeds against the laws of God and man as if he were then upon American soil.

"For crimes they suffered—for such crimes as were in your own Ohio—a land of law—would have brought down upon them severe penalties, and with equal justice. Some did suffer death! But their trial was fair, impartial, and upon the same principles of solid law upon which they would have been adjudged guilty, here, among you. Do some say I hanged fifteen Germans, and that others were arraigned and flogged without cause or trial? Gentlemen, I know nothing of it! It is false—an invention, gentlemen—a lie. Gentlemen, you see me excited. But is it not for cause? For one who, for fifty years, has scarcely walked, rose, slept, or eaten, or given taken a cup of cold water in the field, the town or the camp but that his thoughts were of his country—her virtue—her renown—her honor; to be thus assailed it is monstrous—it is intolerable!

"Gentlemen, I did, with a high hand sustain the law, which, with uprightings in my heart I determined to sustain. I did hang for treason! I did hang for rape! I did hang for treason! For gentlemen, let me again say, I not only carried with me, but I resolved, with every resource I could command, to sustain fearlessly and effectually, in its virtue and its choicest blessings, not only to my own command but to the defenceless and peaceable Mexicans, that civilization—yes, that Christian civilization, of which I was proud to believe that army might appear a worthy representative.

"But, gentlemen, I was no respecter of persons, American or Mexican—native born or foreign born—whoever knew the law and obeyed it not—whoever, reckless of his own responsibilities and the rights of others, trampled under foot and set at naught the law that was over all, I punished. I did hang for the crimes stated, and I would have hung a hundred seekers of innocent blood and violators of female chastity, if so many had been the offenders; and for this perverted and mishaped, I am made answerable to a charge against which my eyes feel revolts, and which my whole nature and my whole life rebel!"

"What citizen can read this strong, frank, earnest, refutation of a base attempt to injure and defame Scott, without at once detecting that integrity of soul which never speaks thus until it is fully and deeply wronged? Who does not now feel that the charge so bravely and eloquently repelled, was utterly false and malicious? And who of the friends of Scott will not rather rejoice that while the occasion served to display intellectual capacity heretofore denied him by those who are striving to depreciate him in the opinion of the people, it also gave him a fitting opportunity to declare the enlightened and elevated principles which made the rule of his civil and military administration in a conquered country, and firm, courageous, impartial manner in which he executed and enforced the discipline he had prescribed for the critical conditions of affairs over which he found himself chief in command and in responsibility. Indeed, could he be, as in the case cited, directly confronted with the countless calumnies which at reckless and desperate opposition are inventing against him, they would all be as signally refuted and the one which he encountered at Columbus, Ohio.

Travelling over Muddy Roads.

Portions of Ohio were formerly notorious for muddy roads. At some seasons of the year a mile an hour was considered good progress. Something of an idea of the mud may be formed from the following anecdote.

A traveler was riding on horseback near little Union meeting house, where the mud was so deep that his feet touched the "hollo-l" on either hand. The struggles of the poor horse to draw his feet out of the soft clay were of course desperate, and he could not make more than a mile and a half an hour. The traveller soon came up with a man who was standing on the fence, with out coat or hat, and with a fence rail was plugging the huge mortar-bed as though endeavoring to sound its depth.

"Why, what's the matter?" exclaimed the equestrian, "you seem excited and out of breath. Are you merely ranting yourself?"

"Bless ye, no," said the fence man, "I've lost my wagon and team somewhere along here, and I am trying to see if I can find 'um."

"The traveller could only give the unfortunate man his sympathy, and proceeded on.

The Oak Quilted.

A swell clerk, from the city of New York who was spending an evening in a country tavern, cast about him for amusement. Feeling secure in the possession of the most money he made the following offer:

"I will drop money into a hat with any man in the room. The man who holds out the longest shall take the whole and treat the company."

"I'll do it," said an old farmer. The cockney dropped in a quarter—the countryman followed with a "Bungtown" copper.

"Go on," said the cockney.

"I won't," said the farmer, "take the whole and treat the company."

"The other day while over in Jersey city, a tall, long legged, big, flat-footed six foot Vermontian came up to us, with a rush holding in his hand a pillow-case, well filled with 'homo affairs and fixings' and also gnawing away at a large cake of ginger bread. He looked as though he was a hulk.

"Can you tell me, sir what time the cars come in?"

"The cars sir?"

"Yes sir?"

"The cars, sir, come in right after the locomotive."

"Down went the pillow case—off went his coat—was full of fight—4 Punch."

"Father is there plenty of water in the sky?" asked an inquisitive child.

"No. Why do you ask such a foolish question?"

"Cause you said there was a plenty of shooting stars, the other night."

"Whiskerettes is the name of the game. John bush catches 'em the ladies wear 'em checks in plates."

"Where the plunkers ought to grow. They are formed by drawing down a ball of hair from the temple, and curling it up to the shape of a man's nose or a cat's tail with extra kink in it."

"I have thousands of copies of the 'Satan's' have been published in the Norwegian language."
