Allentown Academy.

J. N. GREGORY, A. M., Principal.

Mrs. Emily Dunbar Gregory, Teacher of Vocal and Instrumental Music.

Miss Jane Gregory, Principal of the Female Department.

The Fall Term of this Institution will commence on Wednesday the first day of September next. In making this announcement the trustees cannot refrain from expressing their firm conviction that the Academy is now in most efficient hands. Better advantages in all the branches of a thorough education have never been offered to this community. The satisfactory result of the Spring term which has just closed, commenced and carried on as it was under embarrassing circumstances incident to the introduction of new preceptors and a comparatively new system has convinced us that the Institution will ere long become one of the best in Pennsylvania. Parents wishing a school where their children will be well governed and correctly taught the English language, where their sons will be well prepared for College or Mercantile life, will do well to patronize this our own Institution.

Remarkable Case.

A most extraordinary case of premature burial, says a Paris letter, has just occurred in the commune of La Vache, in the Drome, of which a near relation of the victim, inhabiting Lyons, has written a full account to one of the leading journals of that city.

It seems that the deceased, named Marie Victoire Paradis, aged about 20, had been gradually declining in health for about six months: that on the last month, at 10 o'clock in the evening, she appeared to breathe her last. Her father, mother, a young cousin of 18, and other friends standing at her bedside, had no doubt of her being dead, and in the course of an hour, the assistants proceeded to lay her out, when to their horror her mouth was seen to open. They went on, however, with their melancholy task, and got her at last wrapped in a winding sheet.

The next day the friends proceeded to bury her, but as she was a member of the Immaculate Conception, in which the dead are always carried to the place of burial in an open coffin, with the face uncovered, and the deceased was seen to open her eyes which so terrified the bearers that they set down the coffin and called upon one of the superiors of the order, to whom they related what they had seen; but when the superior arrived on the spot, the girls eye's were closed, so she laughed at their terror, and ordered them to proceed to the cemetery. The young woman's eyes opened again at the gate of the cemetery; but the burial still went on. The coffin was shut and lowered into the grave but when a few shovels full of earth had been thrown in a knocking was distinctly heard inside the coffin. This knocking grew louder as the grave was filled, and at last, the sexton, half dead with terror, threw down his shovel, and ran home, where he took to his bed, in which he still remains. Her friends now had the coffin dug up and opened; but seeing that the corpse gave no signs of life, they had it buried again, and proceeded to fill up the grave, when the knockings were again heard louder than ever.

The coffin was now taken up a second time, and carried into the church, where it remained until the 12th. A doctor, who was sent for from Valence, opened a vein from which the blood flowed abundantly.—Incredible as it may seem, even this fact was not considered as conclusive of death not having taken place, and the poor girl was buried for the third time; the same knocking being again heard as distinctly as before, when the earth was beginning to be thrown in. But the assistants nevertheless looked upon her as dead, and this time the burial was completed, notwithstanding the knockings. Some eighty of the persons at these extraordinary proceedings hereupon drew up and signed a petition to the prosecuting General of the Republic, who immediately visited the spot.

His first care was to prohibit all access to the graveyard, and it is to be hoped that the coffin will be opened and the position of the deceased ascertained. But as yet nothing farther has transpired upon the subject. It is really hard to believe that ignorance and prejudice can still be so strong; and that after so many well authenticated cases of the seeming extinction of life, in cases of trance, swoon, catalepsy, &c., where, nevertheless, the patients, though apparently dead for days, and even weeks have yet been restored to life by the judicious perseverance of enlightened nurses of those around them, a young woman in the prime of youth and surrounded by relations and friends should have been thus stupidly consigned to the most horrible death, of which the imagination can conceive!

Sham Dignity.

Among the thousand deceptions passed off on our shrewd rascal race let me direct your attention to the deception of dignity, as it is one which includes many others. Among those terms which have long ceased to have any vital meaning, the word dignity deserves a disgraceful prominence. No word has fallen so readily as this into the designs of cant, imposture and pretence; none has played so well the part of verbal scarecrow to frighten children of all ages and both sexes. It is at once the thinnest and most effective of all the coverings under which duncedom sneaks and skulks. Most of the men of dignity, who awe or bore their more genial brethren, are simply men who possess the art of passing off their insensibility for wisdom, their dullness for depth; and of concealing imbecility of intellect under haughtiness of manner. Their success in this small game is one of the stereotyped satires upon mankind. Once strip from these pretenders their stolen garments—once disconnect their show of dignity from their real meanness—and they would stand shivering and defenceless, objects of the tears of pity, or targets for the arrows of scorn. But it is the misfortune of this world's affairs, that offices, fitly occupied only by talent and genius, which despise pretence, should be filled by respectable stupidity and dignified emptiness, to whom pretence is the very soul of life. Manner trumps over matter, and throughout society, politics, letters and science, we are doomed to meet a swarm of dunces and windbags disguised as gentlemen, statesmen and scholars. Coleridge once saw at a dinner-table, a dignified man with a face as wise as the moon's. The awful charm of his manner was not broken until the muffins appeared, and then the imp of gluttony forced from him the exclamation, "Them's the jockeys for me!" A good number of such dignitarians remain undiscovered.

It is curious to note how these pompous gentlemen rule in society and government. How often do history and the newspapers exhibit to us the spectacle of a heavy-headed stupidian in official station, veiling the strictest incompetency in the mysterious sublimity of carriage, solemnly trifling away the interests of the state, the dupe of his own obstinate ignorance, and engaged, year after year, in ruining a people after the most dignified fashion! You have all seen the inscrutable dispensation known by the name of the dignified gentleman; and embodied tediousness which society is apt not only to tolerate, but worship; a person who announces the stale commonplaces of conversation with the awful precision of one bringing down to the valleys of thought, bright truth plucked on its summits; who is so profoundly deep and painfully solid on the weather, the last novel, or some other nothing of the day; who is inexpressibly
