Miss Jane Gregory, Principal of the Female Department.

The Fall Term of this Institution will commence on Wednesday the first day of September next. In making this announcement the trustees cannot refrain from expressing their firm conviction that the Academy is now in most efficient hands. Better advantages in all the branches of a thorough education have never been offered to this community. The satisfactory result of the Spring term which has just closed, commenced and carried on as it was under embarrassing circumstances incident to the introduction of new preceptors and a comparatively new system has convinced us that the Institution will ere long become one of the best in Pennsylvania. Parents wishing a school where their children will be well governed and correctly taught the English language, where their sons will be well prepared for College or Mercantile life, will do well to patronize this our own Institution.

Poetical Department.

In Vain. In vain! in vain! those blighting words, How sadly on the heart they fall! Like croaking of ill-boding birds, Turning its sweet delights to gall, One voice rings ever in the ear.

One thought is dwelling in the brain; From youth to old from year to year, That all our toilsome life is vain.

Oh, love hath many a graceful flower, And hate has many an evil eye, And hope full many a promised dower, And fear has many a death to die.

Its season of distress and care, Joy hath his night of revel-care, His season of distress and care, Sorrow her wreath of verdure bare, And these—are they not all in vain!

All that philosophy hath taught, All that the grind aspires to know, That heaven-led genius ever caught, Of beautiful, above-below—

All that the earthborn soul would seek, Of worldly spoil and worldly gain, That action plants or truth can speak, In vain!—how are they all in vain.

All he who nightly searched the skies For the lost Pleiad, turned away With fainting heart and aching eyes, Unblest, unlighted by its rays—

So man through life is bound to crave Some good he never can attain. His destined goal—an 'unthought grave, His epitaph—"Life is vain."

MARRIAGE FEE.

I once heard a little incident, said to have occurred to a venerable clergyman of Philadelphia city, now no more, but who if named would be instantly recognized, as familiar to many; and as it appeared somewhat interesting to me, I narrate it.

It occurred some thirty years since, at which time our reverend friend was called upon to officiate at the nuptials of the only child and daughter of the most wealthy retired merchant of this place, then residing a few miles in the country.

The time which had been appointed for the wedding, proved to be a chill, rainy day towards the latter end of the month of September; the rain having commenced falling on the night previous, continued throughout the day. The roads were in a miserable condition the rain falling upon them still heavy with dust, rendered them almost impassible in mud. This was anything but a pleasant prospect for the doctor, but weddings you know, must not be delayed, nor do clergymen, generally, in the least desire if they entertain a peculiar partiality for the ceremony.

They find pleasure in uniting "two good hearts," and they find profit in it. So, braving the weather, the doctor had no reason to complain, and rain or shine he was bound to go. Accordingly a horse and carriage was procured, and the doctor, fully equipped for the journey, was soon on his way to the scene of his bridal festivity.

At the country mansion all was in readiness against his coming, and when he reached there some time after night fall he found the bride and her lover already awaiting him. It was not necessary to lose any time, and the doctor was not long in entering upon his appropriate offices. The necessary preliminaries being speedily arranged, within a spacious hall, richly ornamented, and in the presence of a gay and numerous company, the doctor pronounced the nuptial ceremony.

The scene was unusually affecting and to the doctor himself. The bride as we have said was an only child, and aside from her education and accomplishments, upon which every attention had been bestowed, she possessed qualities of heart which endeared her to all.

She was amiable and affectionate; and these traits, combined with sincere and early piety, had won the reverence of old gentlemen's highest friendship and esteem.

To one thus interested in the happiness of a bride, the joy attendant upon the celebration of nuptials is never unmingled with tender emotions, and tears of parental sympathy trickled down the pious countenance of the old gentleman, as at the conclusion of the ceremony he invoked the smiles of heaven for the future happiness of the newly wedded. Nor was he alone in these feelings a solemn stillness for a while prevailed the whole company; yet like a transient cloud in the morning, it was soon dispelled, leaving all bright and cheerful as before.

Shortly after the ceremony was over, the doctor prepared himself, without delay, for home; so taking an affectionate leave of the bride, and her happy partner, he ordered forth his vehicle. Not a word yet had been said concerning the marriage fee; as for himself, he was too much absorbed in reflection to have given a thought upon the matter.

The "fee," however, such as it was, had not been forgotten; but Mr. E., the bride's father after accompanying and assisting him into his carriage, placed in his hands a little package, containing as he said, "a present," for himself, and a "little notion," for his wife. The doctor presuming of course, that it was his fee and no doubt a rich one, which was thus modestly tendered, accompanied with some small token for his wife, thanked Mr. E., accordingly, and the court-esties of the night, being exchanged, the doctor lost no time in regaining his home.

Imagine, now, the gentlemen, after two hours ride through rain and mud, well drenched and bespattered, sitting by his fire-side opening with the eager assistance of his wife the above mentioned package. Imagine also, if possible, the surprise and disappointment of both, as contrary to their lowest expectations of either, in lieu of a $50 note and a handsome lace cap, the package was delivered of a plain neck-cloth and an unpretending pair of gloves.

Now, fortunately for our friend, the doctor of all things he knew best how to brook disappointment. It is characteristic of the profession in general; hence his share of the disappointment was soon smothered, and he contented himself with the reflection that his services had been well repaid all ready, in having been rendered to one whom he felt most happy in serving.

Not so with his wife. Like most of her sex; eye, and all of her kind disappointments were not in the least agreeable to her; besides, on this occasion, as she was personally interested, her's was by no means small. The marriage of Miss E. had long been in contemplation and as long had the doctor's wife been anticipating a rich fee for her husband, which according to good-natured agreement existing between them in relation to the above marriage, they were to divide equally; and no marvel is it that she had magnified her share into "something very handsome."

For sometime she was speechless with vexation and disappointment. She knew not how to vent her feelings; she felt hurt as well as vexed and disappointed.

"Certainly, I am greatly at a loss to account for this," at length she exclaimed, recovering her-self, "surely I never would have expected this from Mr. E."

"Tut! tut! my dear," returned the doctor, "I am sure it's not worth the while grieving about it."

"Indeed I think it is," rejoined his wife somewhat vexed, and tossing at the same time the gloves from her. "I'm sure your ride through the mud and rain was itself worth ten times as much."

"Well, well," said the doctor, "I am very well satisfied and see no reason why you should be otherwise."

So saying he was in the act of spreading out the neckcloth to examine its dimensions, when, lo! a hundred dollar note dropped upon the floor.

By touch of a magic wand the doctor had converted the cambic into a silken scarf, the surprise of his wife could not have exceeded what she now felt. She knew not what to say first. No time was lost, however in re-obtaining the gloves; and if her surprise was great before, it was in no degree diminished when a ten dollar note was discovered snugly stuffed in each thumb and finger.

"My patience! did you ever!" shouted the old lady in ecstacy.

"Ha! ha!" laughed the doctor. "But let us drop the curtain on the happy doctor and his wife.—Amer. Signal.

Butter in Winter.

Many people complain of being unable to make yellow butter in winter. Some cows will yield yellow butter at all seasons, others not at any season, much however, depends upon the kind of food given to the cow. I think the freezing of milk takes the color out, and injures the butter. I prefer setting milk where it will not freeze till the cream has all risen; next to that, I like the practice of scalding the milk till the minute bubbles begin to rise from the bottom of the pan, and let it stand from twelve to eighteen hours, when the cream will be all at the top in a rich mass that may be cut; hence the name "clotted cream," which always yields a large quantity of butter in proportion to its bulk, with a very little churning. I have seen a bowl of this cream converted into butter by stirring with a common table spoon in three minutes. The butter has a peculiar sweetness, and the cream is considered a great delicacy, particularly among English people, eaten with fruit at dessert.

Any desired shade of yellow can be given to winter butter, without in the least injuring the flavor, by grating an Altringham carrot into a little milk and straining into the cream. I mentioned this kind of carrot because it is higher colored and consequently less of the juice is required. A little practice must regulate the quantity. The yolk of a fresh egg, well beaten, to two quarts of cream, will produce the same results.

A lawyer once asked a Dutchman concerning a pig "in Court."

"What ear-marks had he?"

"Vell, ven I ear-marks acquaint mit de bock he had no ear-marks, except that he had a short tail!"

At the Cleveland fair grounds a man exhibited a horse with five feet—a calf with two heads, and a sheep with five horns and as many tails.
