

A Painful Scene.

A painful scene was witnessed yesterday in the Court of Oyer and Terminer, on the occasion of the sentence of Samuel Cowperthwaite, for killing Policeman Miller. The prisoner is quite a young man, and has nothing in his appearance indicative of the badness of heart which he has manifested on more than one occasion. Being told to stand up for sentence he arose in the dock and with a sad countenance said:

I would like to make a few remarks before the sentence of the Court is pronounced. When I came here I did not expect mercy, but the just sentence of the law. I cannot, however, believe that your mind like that of the jury who tried me, was with-out prejudice. My former position in this Court has influenced your minds upon my case.

When I left the prison for my first offence I resolved to live a correct life, and set up a small business. I avow here my innocence of any intent to take away the life of either persons whom I killed. It was nothing but the folly of youth in the first instance and intoxication in the second, that have brought me to this. My object in speaking to your Honor is particularly to express that I had no intent of killing this officer. I was drunk. This crime has been brought upon me by no intent of my own but by thoughtlessness and intoxication. Fate seems to be against me. That is all I have to say.

Judge Kelly replied. I first became acquainted with you, Cowperthwaite some years ago, in this Court. You occupied then a position you occupy now. You had then, as now, been convicted of killing a fellow being without notice, prematurely, by your violence, sent before the judgement bar of God. You stand before me a mere youth in appearance—a gentle, respectable youth—yet this is the second time you have been convicted of homicide. I know something of the influences that were exercised upon you during the period to which you were formerly sentenced.

I know something of your career since you left the Penitentiary; and when you left that institution there were those that loved you, and sought by every means in their power to win you to the paths of rectitude. Yet a momentary thoughtlessness has brought you to where you are, in taking the life of Miller. Had you, when leaving the Penitentiary, have followed the course of virtue, and mingled in the society of good men, this would not have been as it is—but you were to be about the Engine houses.

Prisoner—I have had no connection with engine companies since I have been out.—The suit to which you allude was brought against me though the prejudice of an enemy.

Judge—Again on the day of this homicide, you had gone with some rowdy young men over the river. You had become drunk with them, returned to the city, and previous to this murder you had assaulted a young man who was standing quietly on the footway.

I say to you that I have no other feeling towards you than that of profound commiseration; but finding that good influences cannot restrain in you this passion for murder, the law must try her power to protect society from the effects of your folly. You will be confined for a long period of time, and will again have ample opportunities for reflection upon past crimes and it is my wish that you may yet be reclaimed. Hence the sentence of the court is, that you undergo solitary confinement in the Eastern penitentiary for the period of eight years.

Prisoner—Oh, say death—death would be sweeter. Since I am now an outcast from society I wish no longer to live. I call God to witness that I had no intent to take life.

Judge—The sentence is passed now, and further remarks is unnecessary.

The earnestness with which the prisoner delivered the last portion of his remarks, and the seeming agony of heart with which they were uttered, made a sensible impression upon all present.

Folks that don't have Newspapers.

Henry A. Wise once boasted in Congress that there was no newspaper published in his district. This led to an inquiry in regard to its intellectual condition, and it was found that half or nearly half the white population could neither read nor write. It would seem that parts of Virginia are as much in the dark as ever, for although over a month has elapsed since the Presidential election, we have seen it stated, within a day or two, that there are still five counties in that State that have not yet been heard from! Whether the natives of those secluded districts have voted at all, or whether they have succeeded and set up for themselves, are matters of conjecture. The Philadelphia Bulletin suggests that an Expedition, something like that now fitting out for the Pacific, be sent with a view of opening an intercourse with this domestic Japan.—It should be provided with a specimen of a railroad, a locomotive engine, magnetic telegraph, and above all, a printing press, and files of northern newspapers. It is a matter of doubt, whether the people of these five counties have heard of the abdication of Louis Philippe, or the discovery of California gold. They have certainly not heard of the death of Wellington, the re-establishment of the French Empire, or the election of Pierce and King.

Gen. Scott.

A Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune, speaking of Gen. Scott, says: "His proud form was never more erroneous nor his eagle eye brighter than it is to-day. He stands alone amid the wreck—grand unconcerned, like a light-house after a dreadful storm. His bosom has been often bared to the storms of war; his heart's blood has always been ready if his country's altar required the sacrifice, and he would to-morrow, if war should come, leave his fire-side, and his family, and, forgetting all ingratitude received, join the army, and lead it to victory. A truer, more patriotic heart than that old bosom carries, never beat."

Jubilee of the Mormons at Salt Lake.

The following interesting letter was written from Salt Lake City, last July by a Wisconsin overland traveler to California, to his mother in Milwaukee:

I arrived here during a grand jubilee of the Mormons. They were celebrating the anniversary of the arrival of the pioneers, who first planted their colony, and, I believe, first discovered the valley. The procession was magnificent. I will give it to you as I saw it; Marshal of the day presiding, followed by flags, band, and a large painting exhibiting the pioneers of 1848, crossing the upper ferry of Plate River. Pioneers then followed—Pen and scribe (every sermon is taken down, in short hand, and inscribed in the Big Book)—men with the different implements and tools, of almost every art and profession in the world; forty old men and flags; forty old women representing Mothers in Israel, their flag being inscribed with—Our Children are our Hope; twenty-four young men with their banner, motto—Union and Liberty; twenty-four young ladies (Daughters of Zion); twenty-four boys; twenty-four girls, band, soldiers, and eighteen bishops, bringing up the rear. I am quite confident there were seven thousand persons present altogether it was a sight well worth seeing, out amidst these hills. In the evening balls and parties prevailed all over the city.

Brigham Young is the Prophet, Sec. Rev. and head of the Church. He is assisted by two Councilors, twelve Apostles, and eighteen Bishops. The Prophet (and under Whig rule) the Governor, was present with some of his wives, who came and went in a large elegant open carriage. He has living with him in the city in one house sixteen wives and thirty children. Each wife, with her progeny, living in her separate furnished apartment, and spins, sews, weaves, &c. &c. All this is true; I went over the premises with a view to entertain you for an hour, and I believe saw pretty much everything.

The person I heard with has two wives. Dr. Richards a Councilor, has six and all of them good-looking, healthy women. Thus you see, polygamy is openly allowed and supported by these Mormons. A man, having a right to as many wives as he can find and support, takes a fancy goes to a justice and swears he is able to support her, and the marriage comes off with due ceremony—and so it goes on, as he grows richer, without limit. A Mormon moving into the Valley, gives one-fourth of his property to the Church, and one-tenth of his productive industry, yearly, whatever it may be.

The city contains a population of six thousand souls and, in the whole valley, there are probably fifteen thousand, which will be largely increased this season. There are warm and hot springs here, the last at boiling heat. Salt is manufactured from the Lake water, which yields one bowl of salt from three of water. There are also mines of coal and iron. Lumber is scarce—$50 per M. The city is watered by more than one hundred streams brought from the neighboring mountains, of the purest water.—This country is certainly as beautiful and fertile as any I ever saw. They raise all we do in Wisconsin, and in far greater proportion. Vegetables are peculiarly excellent, and after the hard bread and bacon of the plains, taste very well I assure you.—The Mormons I find quite kind and obliging. Brigham Young is a fine looking man, resembling a little Judge H. His wives are mostly pretty, and the little legitimates, whom the people here call young prophets are all good looking and go well dressed.

A Western Judge.

The following well authenticated incident is said to have occurred in a magistrate's office not a thousand miles from Cincinnati:

The said office was about twelve by fifteen feet. Across one corner of the room was a slender pine picket fence, that separated the dignitary from the applicants for justice, and the rubble of lookers on. At a small desk thus enclosed, sat the dispenser of the mighty law. During a trial for some trivial amount, the defendant thought he was aggrieved by some remarks of the magistrate and plumply told his honor that he had!

Magisterial, as well as personal dignity was of course highly offended; and the squarer told him that he must retract. The accused said that it was his candid opinion, and that he could not and would not take it back.

Quicker than the lightning's flash, the Squire was on his feet his brass-bowed spectacles were thrown on the little desk and in a voice of thunder he exclaimed:

"Gentleman, this court is adjourned for five minutes, till I whip this blame rascal!"

Before the words were fairly out of his mouth, he had leaped the barricade, and in much less than five minutes, he gave the offender a pair of black peppers and started a spigot of claret, to the astonishment of all the by-standers. The magistrate walked deliberately back to his little desk, adjusted his spectacles and coolly announced that the Court was again in session.

Portable Flour Mill.

Mr. JAMES M. CLARK, of Baltimore, is now exhibiting in that city, a patent portable flour mill, of his own invention. It would seem impossible that all the machinery requisite for grinding and bolting, so as completely to separate all the products, of the grain from each other, could be confined within so small a space. The separation is into five different portions, known respectively as extra and superfine flour, middlings, shipstuf and bran, each of which is deposited in its own receptacle. And yet, strange as it may seem, the whole is done with an upright cylinder, only three feet high, and not exceeding two and a half in diameter. The application of power is direct and the whole apparatus is simple.

Vice President King.

The Hon. Wm. R. King, Vice President elect passed through Baltimore, the 6th inst., on his way to Washington. He came in the Norfolk boat. His health is good.

Funeral of Wellington.

Late news from England states that the funeral of Wellington was the absorbing topic in England.—Parliament had declared the day a legal holiday. Troops were assembling in London from all parts of the kingdom, and an immense crowd was expected in the metropolis.

It is scarcely credible the number of persons who have availed themselves of the approaching holiday, and the cheap excursion trains, to visit the metropolis, with the object of being present at the ceremony.—Along the whole route of the funeral procession the windows and balconies are rented at one to five pounds sterling per seat; and even the graveyards are boarded over and fitted up as amphitheatres to witness the spectacle. Eight hundred men have been working night and day in St. Paul's Cathedral in completing the decorations, and detachments of troops are arriving from all the garrisons in the country. For some days past the body of the Duke has been lying in a state at Chelsea hospital; and such has been the crowd of persons striving to gain admission, that numerous casualties occurred, and two or three persons were crushed to death. The total expense of the spectacle is estimated at one hundred thousand pounds sterling.

To Manage a Rearing Horse.

In preference to the dangerous experiment of pulling a horse backward, I recommend the following method: Whenever you perceive a horse's inclination to rear, separate your reins and prepare for him.—The instance he is about to rise, slacken one hand, and bend or twist his head with the other, keeping your hands low. This bending compels him to move a hind leg, and of necessity brings his fore feet down. Instantly twist him completely round two or three times, which will confuse him very much, and completely throw him off his guard. The moment you have finished twisting him round, place his head in the direction you wish to proceed, apply the spurs, and he will not fail to go forward; if the situation be convenient, press him into a gallop, and apply the spurs and whip two or three times severely. The horse will not perhaps, be quite satisfied with the first defeat, but may feel disposed to try again for the mastery.—Should this be the case, you have only to twist him, as before, and you will find that in the second struggle he will be much more easily subdued than on the former occasion; in fact you will perceive him quail under the operation. It rarely happens that a rearing horse, after having been treated in the way described, will resort to his trick a third time.—[Sportsman.]

ANOTHER SCIENTIFIC WONDER.—Pepsin? an artificial Digestive Fluid Gastric Juice. A great Dyspepsia Cure, prepared from Rennet, or the fourth stomach of the Ox, after directions of Baron Liebig, the great Physiologist Chemist, by J. S. Houghton, M. D., No. 11, North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Pa. This is a truly wonderful remedy for Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Liver Complaint, Constipation, and Debility, curing after Nature's own method by Nature's own agent, the Gastric Juice. See advertisement in another column.

Philadelphia Market.

The unfavorable state of the weather suspended out of door business, and there is but little doing. The scarcity of vessels, and high rates of freight to Europe, have a tendency to retard operations in Breadstuffs. 1000 barrels of Flour sold for export at $5.12. Small lots for the supply of the retailers and bakers sell at $5.12, 25, and extra at $5.50, 75. RYE FLOUR is firm at $1.25. CORN MEAL is in demand, and 1200 barrels Pennsylvania sold at $3.50 per barrel. GRAIN—There is but little WHEAT offering, and holders demand an advance.—We quote white at $1.16, 1.17. A lot of Southern red sold at $1.12 per bushel. No further sales of RYE. Corn dull and according to dryness, with sales of 500 bushels at the latter quotation. CLOVERSEED is less active. Sales at $5.75. FLAXSEED is scarce in demand.

Great Hat, Cap and Fur Store IN ALLENTOWN.

Wm. Keck,

Truly thankful for the liberal patronage heretofore extended to him by his friends, and a generous public, requests a continuation of that patronage from them and that they should now call, and examine the most extensive stock of HATS, CAPS AND FURS, that has ever been brought to the public, at his established and lately refitted Hat Emporium, one door East of Schurman's Store, in west Hamilton street.

He has just returned from the City of Phila., with the latest Full style of Hats and Caps of all kinds and varieties. The Ladies he would particularly invite to an examination of his new and select stock of Furs consisting of MUFFS, BOAS AND TIPPETS, of Fitch, Lynx, Genet, Stone-martin, Silver-martin and Siberian Furs, Swans-down all splendid in quality, superb in appearance and cheap in price.

The people of this neighborhood, have found it expensive to go to the great neighboring cities. Hereafter, to think themselves in either of them, will be very cheap. They will merely have to call into the above mentioned Hat store, observe the late improvements, and hear of the uncommonly low price, when at once, their imagination will impress them with the belief that they stand in one of the best and cheapest Hat stores of New York or Philadelphia.

Call, see, examine, judge, inspect, choose, price, and buy for yourselves.

TO HUNTERS.—Highest cash prices paid for all kind of furs.

EAGLE HOTEL.

The subscriber respectfully informs his friends and the public generally, that he has taken the newly erected three story brick tavern of Jesse Keck, at the north west corner of Market Square, in the Borough of Allentown, called

THE EAGLE HOTEL. The House is known as one of the most spacious and convenient in the State—none more so out of Philadelphia—and contains 44 rooms. He therefore feels assured that he can accommodate satisfactorily all who may favor him with a call.

His TABLE shall at all times be supplied with the best season and the markets afford, and the BAR with the choicest Wines and Liquors.

The Beds and Bedding, together with all his furniture being entirely new, the patrons of this house may rely upon finding those two great essentials—cleanliness and comfort.

The Stabling is large and commodious, and as he will have none but kind and attentive Ostlers a due regard will be had to the proper entertainment of the House as well as his master.

In short, the subscriber intends to spare neither pains nor expense to keep his house in the best manner, and he therefore respectfully invites the public to give him a liberal share of patronage.

BOARDERS will be taken on reasonable terms, and as the rooms are spacious and well adapted to their wants, they can be accommodated in a satisfactory manner. Families from town or county accommodated with Boarding.
