Valuable Real Estate,
Tavern Stand,
Store and Private Dwelling
FOR SALE.

The undersigned offers for sale the following very valuable real estate, to which the attention of capitalists is invited:

No. 1. A Commodious Tavern, and tract of land, situate in Salisburg township, Lehigh county, near the Borough of Allentown, at the junction of the public roads leading from Saugon, Salisburg, U. per Milford and Lower Macungy townships to said Borough, on which is erected
A Large and Convenient HOTEL.

(now occupied by Mr. William K. Klein) with extensive Stabling, a plentiful supply of the best water before the door, and every thing necessary for the convenience and comfortable accommodation of travellers and strangers. This Tavern Stand in addition to advantages arising from its position as above mentioned, is in the immediate vicinity of two of the best established Merchant and Grist Mills in this section of country, the trade of which is now, and will continue to be a source of great profit to the owner or occupier thereof.

Adjoining the Tavern House, is a new and very large and convenient situated 15 feet in front by 71 feet in depth, finished in the best manner, for Stock raising, with all the necessary sawing, counting, drawing, hoisting machine, &c. for carrying on that business. Its location as above described will sufficiently indicate its value as a place of business.
Brick Building,

No. 2. A Tract of Meadow Land,
Of the very best quality, in the rear of the above mentioned property, containing two and three quarter acres. This is perhaps the only piece of Meadow Land along the Lehigh, that will be of great value for many years.

No. 3. A Brick Dwelling,
A new and well finished two story brick house, near the above mentioned property, with very convenient Stabling, and other necessary outbuildings, required for the necessary accommodation of a family, erected on a lot, which is 30 feet in front, by 150 feet in depth, and in the highest state of cultivation. There is a well of the best water near the kitchen door with a chain pump. The floors and chamber are neatly papered, and the whole a peerance of the property is that of a comfortable and very elegant private dwelling.

The above property will be sold together or separately to suit purchasers. Terms reasonable. But little cash capital being required.

If the property is not sold by the 25th of December next, it will be rented away by Auction for one year from the first of April next.

Private Sale
OF Valuable Town Property.
The undersigned wishes to dispose of his Town Property
and convenient two story
Dwelling House,
situated on a lot of ground, situated on the west side of Allen street, in the Borough of Allentown, near the Market square, adjoining on the north by a lot of Ephraim Grinn, on the south by the lot of widow Schantz, on the west by a public alley, and containing in front 20 feet, and in depth 230 feet. Thereon is erected a new two story Brick house, with a two story kitchen attached. There is also a wash kitchen on the premises. For beauty and convenience there is no better property in Allentown and persons wishing to purchase in Allentown will do well to examine it before they purchase elsewhere.

The conditions will be made on very accommodating terms. Persons wishing to view the property can do so by calling upon the owner.

TABLE HOTEL.
The subscriber respectfully informs his friends and the public generally, that he has taken the newly erected three story brick tavern of Jesse Grimm, at the north west corner of Market Square, in the Borough of Allentown, called
THE EAGLE HOTEL.

The House is known as one of the most spacious and convenient in the State—none more so out of Philadelphia—and contains 41 rooms. Therefore, feels assured that he can accommodate satisfactorily all who may favor him with a call.

His TABLE shall at all times be supplied with the best season and the market afford, and the Bar with the choicest Wines and Liquors.

The Beds and Bedding, together with all his furniture being entirely new, the patrons of this house may rely upon finding those two great essentials—cleanliness and comfort.

The Stabling is large and commodious, and as he will have none but kind and attentive Ostlers a due regard will be had to the proper entertainment of the House as well as his master.

In short, the subscriber intends to spare neither pains nor expense to keep his house in the best manner, and he therefore respectfully invites the public to give him a liberal share of patronage.

BOARDERS will be taken on reasonable terms, and as the rooms are spacious and well adapted to their wants, they can be accommodated in a satisfactory manner. Families from town or county accommodated with Boarding.

JAMES W. ESBACH.

EMPORIUM OF FASHION!
Edvard Stetter,
Takes this method to inform his friends and the public in general, that he has opened a new and fashionable
TAILORING ESTABLISHMENT,
in Allentown, in the new building of Mr. Peter Weikel, corner of Market Square and Allen street, where he will be ready to receive those who may favor him with their custom, to whom he will feel great pleasure.

He is in the regular receipt of the Fashion Plates, after which he cuts and makes up; he superintends himself, and can therefore stand good for the work he turns out, and his prices will be cheaper than any other establishment in town.

He returns his thanks to his old customers, and feels confident that the durability of his work and the moderate prices will induce a further continuance of their support.

Miscellaneous Selections.

THE FIRST BABY.
My old school-fellow, Mary Thornly, had been married nearly two years when I made my first call upon her, in the capacity of mother.

"Did you ever see such a darling?" she exclaimed, tossing the infant up and down in her arms. "There baby, that's mar's old friend Jane. He knows you already, I declare." Said the delighted parent as she smiled at a bright ring which I held.—
"You never saw such a quick child. He follows me with his eyes all about the room. Notice what pretty little feet he has, the darling footy-toosies," and talking both feet in one hand the mother fondly kissed them.

"It is certainly very pretty," said I, trying to be polite, though I could not perceive that the infant was more beautiful than a dozen others I had seen. "It has your eyes exactly, Mary."

"Yes, and daddy's mouth and chin," said my friend, apostrophizing the child; isn't it precious?" And she almost smothered it with kisses.

As I walked slowly homeward, I said to myself, "I wonder if when I marry, I shall ever be so foolish. Mary used to be a sensible girl." In a fortnight afterwards I called on my friend again.

"How baby grows," she said; "don't you see it?" I never knew a child to grow so fast. Grandma says it's the healthiest child she ever knew."

To me it seemed that the baby had not grown an inch; and to avoid the contradiction I changed the subject. But in a moment the darling mother was back to her infant again.

"I do believe its beginning to cut its teeth," she said, putting her finger into the little one's mouth. "Just feel how hard the gums are there. Surely that's a tooth coming through. Grandma will be here to-day and I'll ask her if it isn't so."

I laughed as I replied: "I am entirely ignorant of such matters, but your child really seems a very fine one."

"Oh, yes; everybody says that. Pretty, pretty dear!" And she tossed it up and down, until I thought the child would have been shaken to pieces; but the little creature seemed to like the process very much. It is crawling at his mother? It's laughing isn't it? Precious, nippy, little dear. What a sweet precious it is!" And she finished by almost devouring it with kisses.

When I next called, baby was still further advanced.

"Only think," said my friend, when I had made my way to the nursery, where she had laid herself from morning till night, "baby begins to eat. I gave it a piece of meat to-day—a piece of red boiled beef steak."

"What! said I, in my ignorance, for this did look wonderful; the child eating beef steak already?"

"Oh! laughed my friend, seeing my mistake, "What a dunce you are, Jane! But wait until you have babies of your own.—She says you eat beef steak, darling," added the proud mother addressing the infant, "when you only suck the juice. You don't want to choke yourself, do you baby? Eat a beef steak! It's funny, baby, isn't it?"—And again she laughed—laughing all the more, because the child sympathetically, crowded in return.

It was not many weeks before the long expected teeth appeared.

"Jane, Jane, baby has got three teeth!" triumphantly cried the mother, as I entered the nursery. "Three teeth, and he is only nine months old! Did you ever hear of the like?"

I confessed that I had not. The whole thing, in fact, was out of my range of knowledge. I knew all about Dante in the original, and a dozen other fine lady accomplishments, but nothing about babies teething.

"Just look at the little pearls!" exclaimed my friend, as she opened the child's mouth. "Are they not beautiful? You never saw anything so pretty—confess that you never did.—Precious darling," continued the mother, rapturously hugging and kissing the child, "it is worth its weight in gold."

But the crowing miracle of all was when baby began to walk. Its learning to creep had been duly heralded to me. So also had its being able to stand alone, though this meant. I found standing with the support of a chair. But when it really walked alone, the important fact was announced to me in a note, for my friend could not wait till I called.

"Stand there," she said to me, in an insulting voice. "No, stoop, I mean how can you be so stupid!" And as I obeyed, she took her station about a yard off, holding the little one by either arm. "Now, see him," she cried as he tottered towards me, and finally succeeded in gaining my arms, though once or twice I fancied he would fall, a contingency from which he was protected, however, by his mother holding her hands on either side of him an inch or so off. "There, did you ever see anything so extraordinary?"—He's not a year old either.

By this time I began to be considerably interested in "baby" myself. He had learned to know me, and would begin to crow whenever I entered the nursery; and I was therefore, almost as delighted as my friend, when for the first time he pronounced my name.

"Djane," he said, "Djane!" His mother almost devoured him with kisses in return for his wonderful triumph of the vocal organs; and when she had finished, I, in return smothered him with chresses.

I never after that smiled even to myself, at the extravagance of my friend's affection for her baby! The little love had twined himself around my own heartstrings. How could I?

"And now that I am a mother myself I feel less inclination still to laugh as others may do, over that mystery of mysteries, a mother's love for the baby."

The Passionate Father.
"Come here, sir!" said a strong, athletic man, as he seized a delicate-looking lad by the shoulder.

"You've been in the water again, sir!—Hav'n't I forbid it?"

"Yes, father, but—"

"No buts; hav'n't I forbid it—hey?"

"Yes, sir, I was—"

"No reply, sir! and the blows fell like a hail-storm about the child's head and over his shoulders.

Not a tear started from Harry's eye, but his face was deadly pale, and his lips firmly compressed, as he rose and looked at his father with an unflinching eye.

"Go to your room, and stay there till you are sent for! I'll master that spirit of yours before you are many days older."

Ten minutes after, Harry's door opened, and his mother glided gently in. She was a fragile, gentle woman, with mournful blue eyes, and temples slightly transparent.—Laying her hand soothingly upon Harry's head, she stooped and kissed his forehead.

"The rock was touched and the waters gushed forth.

"Dear mother," said the weeping boy. "Why didn't you tell your father that you plunged into the water to save the life of your playmate?"

"Did he give me a chance?" said Harry, springing to his feet with a flashing eye.—"Didn't he twice bid me be silent, when I tried to explain? Mother, he's a tyrant to you and me!"

"Harry, my husband and your father." "Ever had but blows and harsh words!—Look at your pale cheeks and sunken eyes mother."

"It's too bad, I say; he's a tyrant, mother," said the boy, with clenched fist and set teeth, "and if it were not for you, I would have been leagues off long ago.

"And there's Nellie, too, poor sick child! What good will medicine do her? She trembles like a leaf when she hears his foot-step. I say it's brutal, mother!"

"Harry, (and a soft hand was laid on the impetuous boy's lips) 'for my sake—'

"Well, 'tis only for your sake—yours and poor Nellie's, or I should be on the sea somewhere—anywhere but here."

Late that night Mary Lee stole to her boy's bedside, before retiring to rest.

"God be thanked he sleeps," she murmured, as she shaded her lamp from his face.—Then kneeling at his bedside, she prayed for wisdom and patience to bear uncomplainingly the heavy cross under which her steps were faltering; and then she prayed for him.

"No, no, no!" said Harry, springing from his pillow and throwing his arms about her neck, "I can forgive him what he has done to me, but I never will for what he has made you suffer; don't pray for him; at least don't let me hear it."

Mary Lee was too wise to expostulate.—She knew her boy was spirit-rose under the sense of recent injustice; so she lay down beside him, and resting her fearful cheek against his, repeated in a low, sweet voice, the story of the crucifixion. "Father, forgive them they know not what they do!" fell upon his troubled ear. He yielded to the holy spell.

"I will!" he sobbed. "Mother, you are an angel, and if I ever get to heaven, it will be your hand that has led me there!"

There was hurrying to and fro in Robert Lee's house that night. It was a heavy hand that dealt those heavy blows on that young head.

The passionate father's repentance came too late—came with a word that his boy must die.

"Be kind to her," said Harry, as his head dropped upon his mother's shoulder.

It was a dearly bought lesson! Beside that lifeless corpse Robert Lee renewed his marriage vow; and now when the hot blood of anger rises to his temples and the heavy word springs to his lip, the pale face of the dead rises between him and the offender, and an angel voice whispers—"Peace! be still!"

A MAN being commiserated with an account of his wife running away, said: "he wanted commiseration when she was back."
