Carrier's Address to the Patrons of the Lehigh Register, January 1, 1853.

Must I again atone my harp and sing
My New Year's lay, to all my patrons dear?
Oh, with what speed, doth times' uniring wing
Waft us from day to day, from year to year!
But Time, though stern, no partial favor shows,
He, all alike with even swiftness rows.

The man that revels in his store of wealth,
No longer years, nor brighter suns can have,
Nor fresher air, nor sweeter draughts of health,
Than he—earth's poor and lowly care-worn slave!
Ah, all alike must feel his withering rod,
And bow their knees before his sovereign nod.

Yes, e'en talents he disrespects in man
The mightiest gift that he can boast below;
Oh Time! a nation wept the bitter tears of pain,
When thou laid'st the greatest of our country low—
The giant WEBSTER and the god-like CLAY—
Bright stars by night, and brilliant suns by day!

Their lofty eloquence which oft has thrill'd
The souls of men, as with electric fire,
And words which erst in calm debate have chill'd
The threatening passions of disunion's ire,
Are hushed in death—no more their tones will move
A nation's heart with ardent patriot's love.

Their deeds shall live on history's brightest page,
As long as freedom keeps her vigils here,
And men in deeds of prosperous arts engage
And honest toil and industry revere,—
Long as Plymouth, Concord, Bunker-Hill shall be
Sacred to the worshippers of liberty!

The reigning planet of last year has press'd
In sooth, the world to strange and wondrous deeds;
France has wrought itself a crown and feels blest,
And laughs, while young unhonored freedom bleeds;
And we've made a President of Mr. PIERCE,
While for SCOTT'S worth rang the deafening cheers.

But let that pass—the ballot box 's supreme—
We stick to what we voted, "right or wrong"
We're sovereigns, our wish is law, we deem
Our rulers only fit to govern us as long
As they behave—like good and faithful men,
Or terms expired, then we put 'em out again.

Great land! beneath the sun there's none like thee;
All that is noble, brave and great is thine,
Thou art the home of peace and liberty—
Sweet freedom's sun doth here bountifully shine,
And cast its blessings with an even hand
In rich abundance o'er this happy land.

FRANKLIN chained the lightning, MONROE gave it speech,
FULTON harness'd steam and laughed at tide and wind;
And when a country's stubborn we will teach
It in this age of wisdom how to mind
Its business, nice and civil, like a man,
For instance, what we do with rude Japan!

Some clever orators, poets and divines
Do flourish in our country, native born;
And we'll soon export our classic works and wines,
As we do our yankee clocks, and fish and corn,
And save a Dickens trouble, to teach us how,
To eat our dinners and to make a bow!

I love thee, ALLENTOWN, fair city of the hill—
Around thy feet, the sisters Lehigh glide,
And Worman's spring doth in abundance fill
Each household goblet with its crystal tide;
Pure as the fountain Eden's rosy bower,
When love was young and blessed each fleeting hour.

We owe DANKOWSK much, for he does rule,
And cheer the dark and gloomy—visaged night,
The ACADEMY and Mr. KESSELER's school,
To spread around us intellectual light.
And Mr. LOCUMAN for his art divine,
To snatch our features from the grasp of time.

But above all that grace our happy town,
We owe the ladies most, dear heavenly creatures!
Who does not love them, and in heart bow down?
To worship their elysium-borrowed features,
But at times they throw cold water and dismay,
On some, I heard a poor old bachelor say:

"I've felt full many a heart-ache in my day,
At the mere rustling of a muslin gown,
And caught some dreadful colds, I blush to say,
While shivering in the shade of beauties frown,
They say her smiles are sunbeams—it may be—
But never a sunbeam would she throw on me."

But take her all in all she is a sun
That lights man, through his prosperous noon,
And when his night of care comes stealing on,
She is the soft and sweet caressing moon;
And if she errs, let not your anger rise,
Ere too forgot herself in Paradise.

But this is New Year's day and all should feel
Happy and joyous and forget all care,—
My naught kind reader on thy bosom steal
To mark the New Year's joys that nestle there;
And while thou sit'st enthroned bright scenes among,
Be liberal minded when I breathe my song.

SONG.

May this be a year of pleasure—
Of sweet prosperity—
All fraught with rarest treasure
For thee kind friend for thee!
May the sweetest dews of heaven—
Its brightest, gentlest ray,
Cheer thee from morn to even,
Through each succeeding day.

Thy morning dreams of glory,
Which rest upon thy heart,
Be ever beaming, o'er thee,
Their elysian joys impart;
And ever friends be smiling
Around thy earthly way,—
Thy hours with wit beguiling
Bright as a sunny day.

And woman's love caress thee
With all her heavenly art,
And ever cheer and bless thee,
With never changing heart;
And may every hopeful flower
Thy ardent soul create,
Be formed into a bower,
That never, never fades.

Growth of the United States.

In a letter to the National Intelligencer, Mr. William Darby, who has devoted much attention to the subject of the statistical history of the United States, makes the following remarks on the growth of the country. He says:

These periods have been three.
First Original colonization and progress to the revolution, commenced in 1775, and terminated in 1783.

Second period. Accession of Louisiana and Florida; which, in all statistical principles, we may regard as enchainments of the same course of events, and also without any material error, as so nearly equal to that of 1783 as to justify the assumption of their equality.

The third and most extensive accession was that by which the domain of the United States was extended to the Pacific coast of North America, from the Mexican to the Russian boundaries, completing a connected sovereignty from ocean to ocean—a sovereignty with internal and external advantages of position and extent never before combined on the earth.

In a comprehensive view of the subject, we have before us a continent spreading over temperate latitudes from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean, and comprising three millions four hundred thousand square miles of that continent: and in its relative position the United States embraces the middle or temperate latitudes, occupying very nearly, on North America, similar latitudes, with, and in extent not materially differing with all Europe, and, as will be shown in these papers with a resident population amounting in 1850, to upwards of twenty-three millions, and increasing at a ratio of one-third decennially, or in plainer terms gaining one-third in cash ten years.

The law of progressive population in the United States of North America, which any arithmetician can verify with the data afforded by the several decennial enumerations from 1790 to 1850, contains, we boldly assert, one, if not the most important fact, in the history of the world. The existing generation can be if it chooses, glance into futurity through the glass of experience, and prepare in advance for future consequence.

Singular.—In Cincinnati, last week, the daughter of Mr. Weyman, a child seven years of age died suddenly, and of a singular disease. She rose in the morning with a flushed face, complaining of a violent headache. Her pain soon increased, and large, red blotches began to appear upon her body, shortly after which, she fell to the floor. She was picked up and laid upon the bed, where after two or three spasms, she ceased to breathe.

ANOTHER SCIENTIFIC WONDER.—Pepsin an artificial Digestive Fluid Gastric Juice.

A great Dyspepsia Curer, prepared from Rennet, or the fourth stomach of the Ox, after directions of Baron Liebig, the great Physiological Chemist, by J. S. Houghton, M. D., No. 11, North Eighth Street, Philadelphia, Pa. This is a truly wonderful remedy for Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Liver Complaint, Constipation, and Debility, curing after Nature's own method by Nature's own agent, the Gastric Juice. See advertisement in another column.
