

New Railroad Route.

The proposed establishment of a new railroad route for transporting the mails between New-York and Washington, is occasioning considerable discussion in the public prints of both cities. There appears to be a settled determination no longer to depend upon the Camden and Amboy, and Philadelphia and Baltimore Companies, for the important mail services of this route, which is subject to more interruptions and greater negligence, than perhaps any other route in the United States. A well-informed engineer writes to the New-York Tribune as follows, upon this subject:

COLUMBIA, Tuesday, Dec. 23, 1852.

DEAR SIR: I have read with great interest your remarks on the delay of the mail between New York and Washington. Allow me to suggest a remedy which seems to me of easier attainment than the proposed Government road which would be sure to start embarrassing questions of jurisdiction, &c.

A Railroad is now in progress, probably finished from New York to Easton by Elizabethtown and Somerville, the distance about 70 miles; if well made and managed it could be run in a little over two hours by express trains.

From Easton to Reading, 50 miles, this road has been chartered and the ground examined and pronounced good.

From Reading to this place, Columbia, 40 miles, the shortest distance and the best ground that can be found anywhere between the Susquehanna and Schuylkill.

I have personally examined the greatest part of this route and know it to be as I have stated. It runs through a thickly settled country, the very garden of Pennsylvania, affording ample local trade and travel.

From this place to Baltimore, 70 miles, now in operation, one of the best managed roads in the United States. No company make better time and such a winter as a mail failure even in the depth of winter is seldom heard of.

The depot of this company (the Baltimore and Susquehanna) is on the same side of the city of Baltimore with the Baltimore and Washington, and no difficulty exists in connecting the two depots by a Railroad track outside of the City.

The whole distance from New York to Washington by this route would be 270 miles, which could easily be accomplished by Express trains in nine hours. The same baggage car, and if needed the same passenger cars could be run through without changing.

Another important advantage of this route is that it is in a direct line toward Harper's Ferry and the Railroad from that place to Winchester, which at no distant day will be extended South-west to New Orleans.

Here then is a short link of ninety miles through a fertile country and offering every prospect of an ample revenue, which is all that is wanting to open a new and speedy connection from New-York to Washington.

One million from Easton to Reading and six hundred thousand from Reading to this place would be ample funds, for the construction of the work. If you of New-York would build the road as far as Reading I think we of the Rural Districts may safely promise to attend to the balance. In eighteen months from this time the road ought to be made.

The writer is in error here. Separate charters for a railroad from Reading, through Kutztown, to Allentown and from Allentown to Easton were obtained some years ago. The former has expired by limitation, and an effort to revive it a year or two since, was unsuccessful. The charter for the road between Allentown and Easton, is still in force, and we believe it has been permanently secured, by the commencement of the work. But if parties are ready to come forward and undertake the construction of the road here marked out, we have no doubt that a charter, to supply the vacant link in the chain, could easily be procured.—Reading Gazette.

A Wonderful Clock.

Towards the end of the sixteenth century Jaquet Droz, a Swiss clock-maker, carried to Ferdinand the Catholic, King of Spain, a clock which was the wonder of all Europe. The King paid the large sum of five hundred thousand louis (or about two thousand two hundred dollars) for it and when it arrived, gathered his most illustrious noblemen to look at its marvellous works. The clock represented a landscape, and when it struck the hour, a shepherd issued from behind some rocks and played six different tunes upon his flute, while his dog naturally fawned upon him. To show the king that the dog was faithful, as well as affectionate, Droz, told him to touch the fruit in a basket by the side of the shepherd. The king laid hold of an apple, and the dog at once sprang at his hand, barking so naturally, that a spaniel in the room replied with great ferocity and showed signs of fight. At this all the court left, crying out, "Sorcery!" and there was only left the king and the minister of the navy. The king asked the shepherd what time it was? The clock-maker told him that he did not understand Spanish; but if he would ask him in French he would reply. The then put his question in French when the shepherd instantly replied, "This was too much for the minister, of the navy and he instantly ran away. The poor clock-maker was in danger of being burnt for a sorcerer, but he explained the wonder to the grand inquisitor who was convinced that, instead of being the work of evil spirits, it was only great ingenuity.

The Rescue of the British Sailor.

An act of great humanity and courage on the part of an American commander and his seamen was reported in our advices from Liverpool, published yesterday. It seems that the United States mail steamship Pacific, Capt. Nye, six days before her arrival in Liverpool, fell in with the ship James Stephens of Irvine, bound from Quebec to Glasgow. There was a very heavy sea running at the time it blew a perfect gale. The James Stephens was water-logged and on the point of sinking. As may be readily supposed, the rivalry existing between the companies which are contending for supremacy on the Atlantic, it was no light matter for Captain Nye to turn aside from his course. Of course we do not mean to say that as a man of proper feeling there was any alternative open to him but that of saving his perishing fellow creatures at all reasonable hazard and at whatever commercial risk. There is, however, such a thing as reluctant aid. There is all the difference in the world between assistance tendered for form's sake, and the heroic determination to rescue a number of helpless men from peril or to perish in the attempt. Captain Nye to his honor he is spoken—did not hesitate for a moment as to the course he should pursue. As the ship was described and there was a suspicion that she might be in danger he gave orders to steer straight to the spot, that her real position might be ascertained. Nothing certainly, could well be more hopeless than the situation of the James Stephens and her crew—few things less probable, considering the state of the weather, than that any effective assistance could be rendered to them. Captain Nye, however, had a life-boat lowered down, and the brave fellows who manned her, strained every nerve to approach the wreck. The sea was running too high for them, and the fury of the storm must have been great indeed when such men as these were obliged to return and confess themselves fairly beaten by the power of the elements. Still Captain Nye would not be turned from his benevolent purpose—he refused to leave the crew of the sinking ship to a fate inevitable if he deserted them, but waited for hours and hours until the weather should moderate, or some favorable chance should turn up which would give him the opportunity of taking the crew off the wreck. Again after a long delay, the life-boat was manned and again her crew pulled for the water-logged ship. This time their efforts were crowned with success, and they had the happiness of transferring the ship's company of the James Stephens from their own sinking vessels to the deck of the Pacific.

We are told that the passengers by the steamer who witnessed the exertions of the men, and who were therefore, in the best situation to appreciate their merits—instantly entered into a subscription to reward the crew of the life-boat, and $500 were collected on the spot. This is as it should be as far as the men are concerned; but it would not be amiss that Captain Nye should receive some mark of the opinion entertained in this country of his humanity and singular energy under such trying circumstances. It is by his resolution that so many of our countrymen have been rescued from a watery grave. A pecuniary reward to such a man and for such an act, would of course be simply offensive but it is possible in many ways to evince our gratitude to this gallant seaman for the service he has performed.

Mr. Pettin's Balloon Ascension.

Mr. Pettin, the French Aeronaut, made an ascension from New Orleans on Saturday, Dec. 5th, with three companions. We learn from the Crescent of Monday that they reached the city in safety at four o'clock on Sunday morning. Mons. P. informs the editor of the Crescent that he attained the great elevation of twenty thousand feet, at which height the pressure on the lungs was so great that it was with difficulty they could speak. During the ascent he encountered no less than six different currents of air—that from East to West being the strongest, but that at no time did he find any difficulty in directing the course of his frail bark at will. It was the intention of the Navigator to have made a landing on the coast of Florida, but upon throwing over a bag ballast for the purpose of lightening his car, the hook of the bag caught upon some of the rigging attached to the Balloon, below and out of his reach, thus rendering his descent into the waters of Lake Borgne unavoidable. The point at which they struck the water was near a hundred miles from the city which space had been traversed in less than one hour. Upon touching the water, the car, which was heavily ballasted sank immediately, immersing the voyagers in the water, but with presence of mind they clung to the fastenings of the balloon, until the car having discharged itself of its contents, rose bottom upwards, when they seated themselves upon the bottom and there remained until rescued from their perilous position—after being twenty-five minutes, in the water—by the steamboat Alabama.

"Young America" on Gen. Cass.

Gen. Cass's declared approval of the policy of the administration on the Cuban question has provoked the ire of the Richmond Examiner, the New York Sun, and other exponents of filibustering Democracy. We extract passages from the Examiner to exhibit the nature of the harmony which is alleged to exist between the various sections of the party, and more especially to show the treatment which the conservative section may expect at the hands of those who claim that their actions achieved the victory:

"Gen. Cass followed Mr. Mason in an oration which had neither taste, justice, statesmanship or oratory to recommend it. The same may be said of his public performances for a long time. But his fraternization with Mr. Fillmore renders his present display peculiarly attractive of notice. It is but a few months ago since he took of his coat at Tammany Hall and appeared in the character of Young America, to the astonishment of many and the amusement of all. It would appear from his present position that General Cass, having given up all hope of getting a Democratic nomination, now has his designs upon the mutilated remains of the dispersed Whig party; and, for aught we know, he may possibly succeed in gathering under his shadow that disconsolate company, with the old fogey admirers of his sophomoric rhetoric, and forming the whole into a rope not less tough than one of sand. He may succeed in doing this and the feat will entitle him to be the grand marshal of that procession of wolves and lambs which is to usher in the millennium.

"The truth is, this venerable but vacillating old gentleman has nearly played out his hand, and has wholly forgotten what the trump is; and, although he may 'grow thin' by walking in and out of the Senate Chamber' to dodge important questions, we hope that the next four years will afford him an opportunity of expressing his opinions on subjects that will link his name decisively with one party or the other. Adopting for the present his own doctrine, we object to his absolute conquest by Federalism; but will admit that he can be obtained by purchase, and are ready to negotiate a sale of our interest, if he is not effectually sold already."

New Cabinet Speculations.

The Baltimore Patriot says: THE NEW CABINET—BUSINESS OF CONGRESS.—The following letter from Washington comes to us from a source that gives authenticity to its statements: WASHINGTON, Jan. 3, 1853. The last rumor in regard to the Cabinet—and it comes from a source to challenge belief—is that Mr. Senator Hunter, who can certainly have any place in the Cabinet he will select, is about to go or has gone, to Georgia, there to see Gov. Cobb, with authority to offer him the office of Secretary of the Treasury provided, on the source from which the report comes says, he be found orthodox on points deemed by Gen. Pierce and Senator Hunter, as material in the administration of the government. If Gov. Cobb, then takes the office of Secretary of the Treasury, Senator Hunter will take the head of the State Department, and the rest of the Cabinet will be selected from among the others who have been named in various places for it.

In EXTACIES.—The editor of the Boston Commonwealth, is "tickled to death"—almost—his wife having presented him with two more little responsibilities—a boy and girl. This last addition makes eighteen little cherubs the happy man has had the pleasure of providing for—one regularly every eleven months! Only think—an editor! with eighteen little responsibilities! O, tempora! O, mores! O—the women? We believe Mrs. Wright is a (W)right-minded, well-disposed woman, and an advocate of Woman's (W)rights, and moreover, is determined to have her (W)rights, confident no doubt, in her husband's ability to maintain, them. Well, we suppose it's all, (W)right—God save the Commonwealth.
