Clocks, Watches & Jewelry.

Come All and Judge for Yourself!

During the past summer the undersigned—directly opposite the German Reformed Church in Allentown—has materially enlarged and beautifully finished, his Store room, and in order to make his assortment of

Clocks, Watches

AND

compare with his other improvements, he adopts this method to inform his old customers and a host of new he expects to get, that he has just returned from New York, with a most magnificent display of House, Office and Parlor Clocks, Gold and Silver Watches, of every variety, Pins, of every imaginable pattern, gold, silver, steel and brass Watch Chains, Seals and Keys, silver Tea and Table Spoons, gold, silver and steel Spectacles, for all ages, Spiggle-glasses of all sizes, gold Lockets & Chains, Music Boxes of various qualities, gold and fancy Medals, of all sizes, gold and silver Pencils, and many of the best manufactures in the United States.

In short every article kept in a well stocked Jewelry store can be got of him, and is determined to sell as cheap as can be bought either in New York or Philadelphia. He flatters himself to believe that in beauty and assortment his establishment cannot be surpassed in any country town in the state. The public is invited to call and then to judge for themselves.

He continues to repair Watches and Clocks, and since he keeps none but the very best workmen, he can afford to warrant them for one year. Gold and Silverware will also be repaired at the shortest notice and upon the most reasonable terms. Thankful for past favors he trusts that by punctual attendance and low prices he will be further able to meet with favors.

EMPORIUM OF FASHION!

Eduard Stetter,

Takes this method to inform his friends and the public in general, that he has opened a new and fashionable in Allentown, in the new building of Mr. Peter Weikel, corner of Market Square and Allen street, where he will be ready to receive those who may favor him with their custom, to whom he will feel grateful.

He is in the regular receipt of the Fashion Plates, after which he cuts and makes up; he superintends himself, and can therefore stand good for the work he turns out, and his prices will be cheaper than at any other establishment in town.

He returns his thanks to his old customers, and feels confident that the durability of his work and the moderate prices will induce a further continuance of their support.

Dr. J. P. Barnes,

DENTIST.

Adopts this method to inform his friends and the public in general, that he has made Allentown his permanent residence. He has opened an office at his dwelling, opposite Koll's American Hotel, a few doors east of Pretz, Guth & Co's Store, where he will be happy to offer his professional services in the science of Dentistry. He will call at private residences, if requested.

His terms are reasonable, and having had much experience in the profession, feels satisfied that he can give general satisfaction.

January 2, 1853.

Jim Blander and the Quaker.

There lived in a certain neighborhood not far distant from here, a blustering rowdy named Jimm Blander. Jim was "sum" in a fight—a kind of pugilistic Napoleon.

Many and bloody were the affairs he had in his lifetime and he invariably came off first best. Jim not only considered himself invulnerable, but all the fighting characters in the surrounding country considered it was no use fighting Jim, as he was considered to be a patent threshing machine, that could not be improved on. In Jim's neighborhood had settled quite a number of Quakers.

From some cause or other, Jim hated the "shad bellies," as he called them, with his entire heart; he often declared that to whip one of these inoffensive people would be the crowning glory of his life. For years Jim waited a pretext. One of Jim's chums overheard a "young" Quaker speak in disparaging terms of him. The report soon came to Jim's ears not a little magnified. Jim made desperate threats that he was going to do with Nathan, the meek follower of Penn, on sight, besides the various bruises and contusions he meant to inflict on Nathan's body; in his chaste language he meant to gouge out both of his eyes, and chew off both his ears.

Nathan heard of Jim's threat and very properly kept out of his way, hoping that time would mollify his anger. It seems, however that this much desired result did not take place. One day Nathan was out riding, and passing through a long lane, when about midway, he espied Jim entering the other end. Nathan might have turned and fled, but his flesh rebelled at retreating.

"I will pursue my way peaceably," said the Quaker, "and I hope the better sense of the man of wrath, will not permit him to molest me, or allow him to do violence to my person."

Nathan's calculations as to the lamb like qualities of his adversary, were doomed to be disappointed.

"Oh, ho!" thought the bull, as he recognized Nathan, "I have him at last. Now, I'll make mince-meat of shad belly, and salt and pickle him too!"

"Will you please to dismount from thy horse?" said Jim, seizing the bridle of Nathan's horse, minding his style; my heart yearned above all things to give thee the biggest mauling that ever a man received."

"Friend James," replied Nathan, "thou must not molest me, but let me go on my way in peace. Thy better judgment will surely tell thee that thou cannot possibly be benefited by personally injuring me."

"Get down, in a moment!" thundered Jim; get down, you canting lying, mischief-making hypocrite. I'll drag you down if you dont dismount."

"Friend James, I remonstrate against thy proceeding, and against thy language," replied Nathan. "My religion teacheth me sincerely. I am neither a liar, a mischief-maker, nor a hypocrite; I am no coward, but a man of peace; I desire to pursue my way quietly; let me pass on."

"Get down," persisted Jim; "down with you I want to beat some of you—I must give you a flogging before I leave you. I think by the time I am through with you, you will pass for a tolerably honest man. I will teach you, in a short, easy lesson, the importance of minding your own business, and the risk in slandering your neighbors."

"I will not dismount," said Nathan, loose your hold from the bridle."

"You won't, won't you?" said Jim, "then here goes"—and he made a desperate lunge to collar the Quaker.

Nathan was on his feet in an instant on the opposite side of the horse.

The Quaker although of much smaller proportion than his persecutor, was sinew and muscle and his well knit form denoted both activity and strength. His wrath was evidently enkindled.

"Friend James," he implored, "thy pertinacious persistence in persecuting me is exceedingly annoying, thou must desist, or peradventure I may so far forget myself as to do thee some bodily harm."

"By snakes!" said Jim, coming towards Nathan, "I believe there is fight enough in Broad-brim to make the affair interesting. I wish some of the boys were here to see the fun." "Now," continued Jim, "friend Nathan, I am going to knock off the end of your nose—look out!"

Suiting the action to the word, Jim, after various pugilistic gyrations with his fists, made a scientific blow at the nasal formation of our friend, but Tom Hyer could not more scientifically have warded it off. Jim was evidently disconcerted at the ill success of his first attempt—he saw he had undertaken quite as much as he was likely to accomplish. James, however, straightened himself out, and approached Nathan more cautiously. The contest began again. Nathan stood his ground firmly, and skillfully warded off the shower of blows which James aimed at him.

"Friend James," said Nathan, in the heat of the contest, "this is mere child's play. It grieves me that thou hast forced me into resistance, but I must defend myself from bodily harm. I see there is but one way of bringing this scandalous and wicked affair to a close, and that is by my conquering thee; in order to do this, I will inflict a heavy blow between thy eyes, which will prostrate thee."

Following out this suggestion, Nathan struck him a tremendous blow on his forehead, which brought him senseless to the ground.

"Now," said Nathan, "I will teach thee a lesson, and I hope if will be a wholesome lesson, too. I will seat myself a straddle on thy breast—I will place my knees upon thy arms, thus so that thou cannot injure me when thou returnest to consciousness. I hope I may be the humble instrument of taming thy fierce and warlike nature, and making a better and peaceful man of thee."

As the Quaker concluded, Jim began to show some returning signs of life. The first impulse of Jim was to turn Nathan off. He struggled desperately, but he was in a vice—his efforts were unavailing.

"Friend, thee must keep still until I am done with thee," said Nathan. "I believe I am a humble instrument in the hand of Providence, to chastise thee, and I trust, when I am done with thee, thou wilt be a changed man. Friend James, does thee not repent attacking me?"

"No," said Jim with an oath, "let me up and I'll show you."

"I will not let thee up, thou impious wretch," replied Nathan. "Darest thou profane the name of thy Maker? I will check respiration for a moment."

Nathan, as good as his word, clutched Jim by the throat. He compressed his gripe—a gurgling sound could be heard—Jim's face became distorted—a tremor ran through his frame. He was evidently undergoing a process of strangulation. The Quaker relaxed his hold, but not until the choking process had sufficiently as he thought tamed the perverse spirit of Jim—I took some moments for Jim to inhale sufficient air to address the Quaker.

"I knock under," said Jim, "enough! let me up."
