Sanders' School Books.

The subscribers who are largely engaged n the publication of School and other Books, have lately made arrangements for the Pubication of one of the best Series of School Books,—being seven in number,—ever pubished in this state. They are calculated for the gradual progression of the pupil in the ordinary branches of popular education. The illustrations are admirably adopted and cannot fail to fix the mind upon sound moral principles which is ever the foundation of a ood education.

On the whole they believe Sanders' series of School Books by far the most complete, that has ever been published and would respectfully recommend them, for adoption in all the free schools in the State.
