Arrival of the Steamship Arabia.

The steamship Arabia arrived at Halifax on Wednesday, at 2½ P. M., bringing Liverpool dates to the 4th of of March.

The Czar's Letter to Napoleon.

The St. Petersburg Journal of the 24th contains the following as the substance of the answer sent by the Czar of the Emperor Napoleon—"If this Imperial Majesty extends his hand to me as I extend mine, I am ready to forget the mortification I have experienced, harsh though it be. Then, but then only, can I discuss the subject treated of in his letter, and may, perhaps, arrive at an understanding. Let the French fleet prevent the Turks from transporting reinforcements to the theatre of war, and let the Emperor send me a plenipotentiary to negotiate with, whom I will receive as befits his character. The conditions already made known to the Conference at Vienna are the sole basis on which I will consent to treat."

The Eastern War.

Actual operations exhibit no new feature, but, every power in Europe continues to arm—France, England and Russia, on an immense scale.

Sir Chas. Napier is appointed to the command of the Baltic allied fleets; and Admiral Seymour of over twenty ships already assembled at Spithead.

The ice in the Baltic was breaking up, and part of the Russian fleet at Cronstadt was ready to sail.

A report from a private source (as yet unconfirmed) says the Czar has laid an embargo on English shipping in Russian ports.

On the Danube, the deep snow prevented any movement by either party. The weather was becoming milder, and the Russians were making ostentatious preparations to cross the Danube.

Omar Pasha was evidently aware of their plans, and was making dispositions of his force to check them.

Some military men think that the Russians, nothwithstanding their demonstrations, do not intend to attack Kalafat, but wish to entrap the Turks to come out.

Omar has sent supplies to Varna.

The Turks no longer occupied any place but Kalafat north of the Danube.

There has been considerable fighting by small paties whenever they had come in contact, but no decisive action.

From Asia there had been no further advices. Another convoy of 16,000 men was preparing to leave Constantanople for Batoum.

The Greek insurrection was in a fair way of being suppressed.

Several British ships of war were ordered from Malta to Piraeus.

The Pasha of Jania defeated the Greek insurrectionists at Arta, but had not sufficient force to disperse them. The Pasha had issued a proclamation calling on the Scutarians and Catholic Albanians to remain faithful.

The Turkish Government, in concert with the British, French, and Prussian, had addressed a remonstrance to the Greak Court, which apologized, and dismissed the Minister of Police, but the Government is powerless.

The Turks were concentrating a force at Elbason, under command of the distinguished Halil Pasha. The insurrection does not extented futher north than Albania.

Montenegro is quiet.

A statement is current that couriers are on their way to St. Petersburg with a joint note from England and France, demanding a categorical reply within one week, whether the Czar will evacuate the Principalities before April the 30th. A refusal, or no answer by the 18th or 20th March, to be considered as a declaration of war against the Allies. The reply will be laid before Europe.

Again though such vacillation is scarcly creditable, it is said that the Czar signifies through Austria some other modification of negotiation.

The fact that Austria adheres to the allied Powers, is officially announced by the Emperor Napoleon to the French Legislature. She will not, however, be called on at present to take offensive measures against Russia, but merely to keep peace on the frontiers.

The Difficulties with Cuba.

Once every year, as regularly as the seasons come round, an attempt is made to embroil the American people in a war about Cuba. Sometimes the conspiracy takes one shape, and sometimes another; but the end to be obtained is always the same. Now an expedition, designed to revolutionize Cuba, is fitted out on our shores, in direct violation of our peaceful relations with Spain. Now a hot-headed officer, in command of a mail steamer, is sent to Havana, in hopes that he may exasperate the Captain-General into some insult to the Americans, or some aggressions on American, citizens. At one time, our government is called upon to resent the punishment of filibustors, who have been caught in arms against Spain. At another, an outcry is raised, because the Cuban authorities have confiscated a cargo, which, it is probable, was fraudulently introduced, though perhaps the practice of winking at such practices heretofore renders the confiscation impolitic and perhaps unexpected. That the agitators have never any ground for their complaints we do not pretend to say. Generally there is just sufficient plausibility on their side to prevent their being at once hissed down by the public. But, in every case, when the whole truth comes to be sifted, it is found that the Spanish authorities have been more "sinned against than sinning," and that, though excitable, imprudent, and even frequently high-handed, they have substantial grounds of complaint against our citizens.

The seizure of the Black Warior has afforded the agitators a happy chance, as they think, to embroil America and Spain, at last beyond the possibility of conciliation. On every side, from the presses in the interest of the filibusters, we hear clamors for instant retaliation. Undertaking journals, ignorant of the facts of the case, assist the outcry and swell the tide of indignation. The President and Cabinet, whether mistaking the public sentiment, or recently sympathizing with our modern buccaneers, appear, in this emergency, half inclined to break off amicable relations with Spain. Never, perhaps, were the conspirators so near success. Their exultation cannot be concealed. Their agents in Congress, their tools in our Atlantic cities, and their dupes throughout the country at large are on the qui vive, and confidently whisper that Cuba will be ours before a year. To fan this flame, it is adroitly whispered by the conspirators, that the alliance between France and England is not only to muzzle Russia, but to check the United States; and then, it is added, that Americans, in high-spirits, should resent this dictation by seizing Cuba and defying the tyrants of the Old World. In every way, indeed, a crisis is sought to be brought about. An honest looker-on hesitates whether most to admire the cunning, or deplore the reckless criminality of these filbustering agitaiors.

We appeal to the independent press, in this state, to come to the aid of their country. Of all national crimes, an unjust war is the most flagitatious. We appeal even to the partisan press, or that part of it which still holds patriotism above personal ambition, to raise their voice against hasty action in this matter. Hostile proceedings once adopted, war will be almost inveritable.—How would conscientious men feel, if, after war had been declared, chiefly, perhaps, in consequence of their philipies against Spain it should be found either that the Cuban authorities had a right to confiscate the cargo of the Black Warrior, or that the steamer was sent to Havana expressly for the purpose of creating a difficulty? The conspirators have tried so many expedients to embroil America with Spain, that we would never be surprised at any scheme they might set on foot. Subtle, reckless, and intriguing, they will yet dupe the nation unless it keeps carefully on its guard. At any rate nothing can be lost by waiting. Better to pay two hundred millions for Cuba, better even go without Cuba forever than to obtain the island by an unjust war, or even by any war at all, unless a defensive one. It is easy to commit a crime. But a crime once committed, how difficult to expiate.

If there had been no practical expeditions against Cuba, if there was not known to be an active faction of filibusters in our midst, the subject would present itself in an entirely different aspect. We might then feel more indignation that we can now justifiable allow to ourselves. But the fact that such a buccaneering spirit is abroad, that active agents are engaged in propagating it, and that those foremost in the affair are men who "stick at nothing," to use one of their own phrases, teaches us to be cautious. The interests the dignity, and the honour of our country are too dear to us to suffer a few conspirators to juggle them away. We wish, with old Crockett, to be sure we are right before we "go ahead." As independent journalists, we look to the well being and reputation of the twenty-five millions of Americans, and not to the personal interests of this desperate speculator, or that outlawed exile. We seek truth and justice. As we would resist, with what little power heaven has given us, the attempt of England and France, should it ever be made, to dedicate to us what we should do, and what we should not, so we now resist this insidious plot to make us, and the nation with us, the dupes and tools of a band of conspirators, who seek their own personal fortunes at the expense of the blood of their countrymen and the honor of America.—Ev. Bulletin.

Romance in Real Life.

Mrs. Gwin, wife of Senator Gwin, of California, it is stated, has just come into possession of not less than 50,000 acres and probably as much as 100,000 acres of land in Texas, advantagously located, covered with settlers and worth from $2 to $20 per acre. The property formerly belonged to her first husband, Mr. Logan, a wealthy citizen of Texas, who some years since died suddenly, without a will, but it has for several years been in the hands of an administrator. Recenty, however, a case instituted by some of Mr. Logan's heirs, against the administration in the Supreme Court of Texas was decided, and Mrs. Gwin declared to be entitled to the whole estate. Mrs. Gwin, it is also said, knew nothing of the decision until Dr. Gwin received a letter signed "Justice," calling his attention to it, and subsequently received conformation of the intelligence from Senator Rusk. The New York Times, from which we condense the following, says:

Upon inquiry. Dr. Gwin became satisfied that the author of the anonymous letter calling his attention to the right of his wife to this estate, was Richard P. Robinson, Helen Jewet memory, who as is well known to many persons, settled in Texas years ago, where he is a respectable and wealthy farmer, enjoying the confidence and respect of the community where he resides. He insists upon it that, many years ago when he was an outcast from the world, which persued him with scoffings and denunciations, Dr. Gwin, then residing in Mississippi, took him by the hand, and by his counsel and aid, taught him to hope. By a singular coincidence, the lady who is now Mr. Robinson' wife, was also indebted to Mrs. Gwin for kindness manifested towards her, when in trouble years ago.

Culture of Celery.

Mr. Editor—Sir:—As a knowledge of facts is as essential requisite for the proper cultivation of plants, and particularly so when we attempt to inprove their flavor by the use of specific manures, I will give a brief detail of my experience in cultivating celery. In the spring of 1852 I prepared a trench for celery plants in the usual way, using plenty of well-fermented manure, &c. The plants were transplanted about the 20th of June, and with copious waterings grew to a good size. When taken up for use, the stems were well bleached crisp and tender, but the flavor did not please me — it was strong and rank. When preparing my trench last spring, I burnt a barrel of old bones that I had collected during the season (by the way, all the bones I can find I take especial pains to scatter in my garden,) and scattered them in the trench to the depth of about half an inch, using much less manure than previously. The plants were set out about the 10th of July. They commenced growing much sooner than during the year previous, and all through the season they ware of a much darker green. When taken up for use on the first of November, I was highly gratified with the success of my experiment. Their growth was not as luxuriant as formerly, but in crispness, juiciness, and agreeable flavor, they were superior to any that I had ever before eaten.

I would like to know the chemical constitution of the plant, in order to determine the accordance of my experiment with the theory of specific manures. — [A.D.W.—Rochester.
