Our Relations with Spain.

The Artic, which departs from New-York today for Liverpool, will convey a special messenger from this Government with instructions to our Minister at Madrid to demand, in emphatic terms, immediate and ample reparation from Spain for the outrage committed by authorities at Cuba in the instance of the Black Warrior. We shall impatiently await in common with every American citizen, the answer which will be given by the Spanish Ministry to this demand. If it be favorable and prompt, and if Spain shall consent, within a reasonable time, to our opening diplomatic relations with the captain General of Cuba, for the adjustment of any questions which may hereafter in our intercourse with that Island, then there will be no disposition on the part of the United States to disturb the peace which exists between the two nations.

But if any hesitation on the outrageous procedure against our flag and the property of our citizens, and if the contingencies be not removed by which similar occurrences may be occasioned, we shall advocate the employing of all the power which the Government can command in support of our rights and interests in Cuba. The world would consider us as weak as we would in reality be mean, if we were to suffer even the first Power of the earth to offer insult, added to injury, as repeatedly as they have been perpetrated upon us by Spain during the last five years. The time has arrived when forbearance to even an imbecile nation, whose obstinacy or ignorance has brought it to the verge of ruin, ceases to be a virtue. We must not only receive redress for the past, but we must have abundant security for the future. Its relations with us will have to be better, or they will have to be discontinued.

It has, we are aware, been as formally as pompously announced in the British House of Lords that England and France are of perfect accord with respect to the affairs of this hemisphere. This was intended as a threat by that Government, which has ever been engaged in sowing the seeds of discord, in one way or another, in this Union, and in conspiring against its expansion whenever she could elicit in her service a formidable ally. Great Britain tried her hand at intimidation when she formed the entente cordiale with France, and put forward Getztor to announce the balance of power doctrine on the American continent at the time Texas asked for admittance into the Union. We disregarded her machinations now just as we disregarded them in that instance. LOUIS PHILIPPE was not France, nor is LOUIS NAPOLEON.

The entente cordiale adverse to this Republic evinced in the detronement of the one; it may upset the throne upon which the other reposes. Let the inmate of the Tuileries meditate well before he endangers his amicable arrangements with this country. Frenchmen have almost a paramount interest in our well-being. They sympathize against Russia. That interest and that sympathy their ruler, whoever he may be, cannot dare not arrest. He is acting in obedience to it in the East. In the affairs of the West it will, in due time, make itself known.

In the case of the Black Warrior, England is, to a great degree, responsible for the wrongs committed by Spain. The authorized speech of Lord CLARENDOON, to which we have adverted, was at the bottom of the temerity of the Spanish authorities. It instigated, under British dictation, to the ruthless butchery of our citizens on our frontiers in the War of 1812.

We tell Queen Victoria's Government frankly that, as Cuba is the key to the Gulf through which a large proportion of our commerce passes, we cannot consent to its exercising the slightest control over that Island. The idea of her having any other interest in the matter than that of throwing obstacles in the way of our prosperity, is too absurd to be entertained for a moment. She may envy our growth, but she shall not close our doors. She permitted Austria, contrary to the stipulations of the treaty of Vienna, to which she was a party, to obliterate the free city of Cracow, because, as was alleged by the Emperor, it was a dangerous neighbor. She now encourages Spain to consummate acts of bad neighborhood which are little better than positive piracy, and enlists LOUIS NAPOLEON to cooperate with her in supporting the offender! This is the downright old-fashioned British policy.

Sir John Franklin Expedition.

The appearance of a Narrative of the U. S. (Grinnell) Expedition, from the pen of that scientific and courageous genius, Elisha Kent Kane, M. D., U. S. N., who, it will be remembered, went out as Surgeon in the Expedition, has served to call to our mind vivid recollections of the exploits of that valiant little band of Uncle Sam's boys, who spent a season or two among the icebergs in search for that long missing commander, Sir John Franklin, whose genial face we never expected to meet again in this world.

The project of an American expedition to search for Sir John Franklin was first suggested, we believe, by S. E. Burrows, Esq., a well known, and long noted in this city for his benevolence and enterprise. Having, unfortunately, a limited purse, Mr. B. could not perfect the arrangements for the expedition himself, and therefore proceeded immediately to invite the attention of several of our wealthiest merchants to the project. He met with no very favorable cooperation until he called upon Henry Grinnell, Esq., a member of the celebrated firm of Grinnell, Minturn & Co. Mr. G. evinced his willingness to give his attention and means to the enterprise, and proceeded without delay to prepare suitable vessels. The Advance and Rescue, a brace of small, but well-built schooners, were under his supervision, fitted for the icy voyage; and application having been made to the Government a full supply of seamen was ordered, and two young and skillful lieutenants appointed to the command.

The vessel soon departed on their perilous voyage, and the Yankee flag was carried further north than ever before, by the Grinnell expedition. We have all knowledge of the bravery and endurance of our American seamen, and well did they display their characteristics in their sojourn among the icebergs. After quite a long absence, the expedition turned its way homeward, having been unable to meet with any tidings of Sir John and his gallant crew.—The skill of Dr. Kane was manifested throughout the voyage; his keen observation and study of the icy regions fitted him well to act as the historian of the journey; and his capital publication, to which we now allude, proves one of intense interest and ability. He describes the Arctic territory in a manner far more definite and plain than that of other writers, and has proven that the Yankees have as yet taken the lead in the exploration of the country round about the invisible poles. Our readers are aware that Kane is now in command of an expedition sent out from our shores to continue the search for the missing Franklin. We doubt not that he will prove himself well suited to his position, and soon settle the question as to the whereabouts of the long gone ships and British mariners. If they still exist, the Doctor will visit them. If they have perished, he will be ready to prove the fact beyond a question. We look with anxiety for his return, and cordially commend his book to the attention of the community.

Two Men Shot and Another Hanged.

The Land Claim difficulties between Messrs. Ferman and Cartwright, which less than a year ago, terminated in the murder of the former, had hardly passed from the memory among the chronic tragedies of the day ere we are again called upon to announce another similar one in that neighborhood, rendered more shocking in that three men have been murdered in cold blood—two men shot, and one hung, strung up in regular California style, till dead. The facts of the Cartwright and Ferman affray have gone to the country. The latter was shot, pierced with two balls, from the effects of which he survived but a short time. Cartwright was arrested for the act, and lodged in jail to await his trial. At the last term of the Wauhsara Circuit Court, the trial of the cause was continued to the coming May term, and the prisoner remanded back to jail. Ever since the murder of Ferman the greatest indignation has prevailed in that neighborhood against Cartwright.

Last week he was bailed out, and against earnest remonstrances, returned home, with the avowed determination, it is said, to avenge himself in the death of others.—

When it was ascertained that he was in their midst, the inhabitants, to the number of near one hundred, repaired to his residence, intent on lynching him. He had taken refuge in the chamber, and repelling their advances, shot from his retreat, and killed two of the party—James Langdon, a hoar headed wife and child, and a Mr. Troop, both of middle age; and then being sensible that further resistance was useless, surrendered himself into the hands of an officer, with the assurance of protection; thence he was removed to a justice's office for examination. By this body of men he was forcibly taken from the officers, tied hand and foot, and but a short distance from where he was seized, and suspended by the neck until dead. He was hanged last Sunday, about 5 o'clock in the afternoon, and the body was allowed to remain until about 10, when the friends were permitted to remove it. Mr C. was a man of about 60 years of age he leaves a wife and large family. Thus, within one year, have four lives been sacrificed, all for the paltry item of a 40 acre claim. May we not now hope that it is the last affray of the kind. Ocas, in the county of Wauhsara, will long be remembered as the "bloody ground."

Seeds Before the Reformation.

To Romanist writers, who say there were no disputes about religion at the time when the Reformation brought sects and heresies into the Church, Archbishop Whately replies:—

"On the contrary, there never was such a swarm of sects in the world as then prevailed: Not to speak of Wycliffe, and Huss, and Jerome of Prague, and the Waldenses, who were endeavoring to reform the Church, there were strange sects and heresies without end, such as have scarce ever been heard of since the Reformation—so wild in their opinions, and so abominable in their practice. There were Manicheans, and Fratricelli, and Turlupins, and the Brethren of the Free Spirit, and the Apostolics, and in myriads more besides; and though the Church of Rome bestirred itself to the utmost to put down these sects by fire and sword, massacring them often by thousands at a time, yet it could never wholly root them out; because the ignorance of the people left them open to be imposed by crafty and fanatical teachers.

Let not Roman Catholics then pretend that it is the reading of the Scriptures that has brought in wild and extravagant sects among us; they had a thousand times wilder sects among themselves long before the Reformation; and though we have many differences among us; yet our old extravagant sects have either soon become quiet and rational, or else quite disappeared; and the new ones do not, generally, rely on Scripture at all, but—like the Southcoians and Mormons—on new Revelations. Now, as for New Revelations, the Church which sanctions the Revelations of St. Briget, and St. Simon Stock, and St. Catharine, has no right to laugh at Protestants as enthusiasts when they talk of such things."—Fitzburgh Presbyterian Advocate.

MURDER DISCOVERED BY A DOG.—A man named Lipmann, residing at Phalsburg, France, says Galignani's Messenger, left his house a few days since on some business, and not returning at the time expected although he had been seen by a neighbor on his road home, his family began to be seriously alarmed. Two days elapsed, and although every search was made, no clue could be found of him. A gendarme at length conceived the idea of making use of a famous dog belonging to a person in the neighborhood, and with which he proceeded into a wood, and had not gone far before the animal, by his barking, gave notice that he was on the scent of something. On the gendarme coming to the spot, he saw the dog scatching in a place which bore the marks of having been recently turned up, and on digging, the body of Lipmann was found buried there, after having been murdered. This is not the first time that the dog has rendered similar service to the gendarmes. A short time since a prisoner had escaped from the time, and he was turned out on the scent, and soon discovered the fugitive, who was kept fast hold of, but carefully avoided injuring. What is singular is, that the dog will not allow itself to be fondled by any one but his master and the gendarmes, for whom it appears to feel a strong partiality. The police are actively endeavoring to discover the murderer or murderers of Lipmann.
