

Triumph of a Travelling Mesmerist.

The author of "Sam Slick" observes, in the course of a work he has just published, that the trials to which travelling Mesmerists are put in America are at times humiliating and painful enough, albeit they afford infinite sport to the unbelievers: One poor fellow, on arriving at a town near Detroit to lecture, was surrounded by several citizens, who told him there was a rheumatic patient up stairs who must be cured, or he himself would be escorted out of town astride of a rail, with the accompanying ceremonies. We had better give the rest of the story as it was related by the disciple of Mesmer himself.

Up stairs I went with 'em, mad as thunder, I tell you; first at being thought a humbug, and next that my individual share of the American Eagle should be compelled into a measure, by thunder. I'd give them a fight, if they hadn't been for the science, which would have suffered any how; so I jest said to myself, let'm bring on their rheumatiz! I felt as if I could have mesmerized a horse, and I determined, whatever the case might be, I'd make it equal by thunder!

"Here he is," said they, and in we all bundled into a room, gathering round a bed with me shut in among 'em, and the cussed big unlightened heathen that did the talking drawing out an almighty bowie knife at the same time. "That's your man," said he. Well, there lay a miserable looking critter, with his eyes set and mouth open, and his jaws got wider and wider as he saw the crowd and the bowie-knife. I tell you! "That's the idea," said the old Big Injun. "Raise up in that bed," said I, and I tell you what, I must look at him dreadful, for up he jumped on an end, as if he'd jest got a streak of galvanic. "Get out on this floor," said I, with a wuss look, and I wish I may be shot if it didn't come, lookin' wild, I tell ye!

"Now, cut dirt, dirt you!" screamed I, and Juhu General Jackson! if he didn't make straight for the door, may I never make another pass. After him I went, and after me they cum, and perhaps there wasn't the orfullest stampede down three pair of stairs that ever occurred in Michigan! Down cut old rheumatiz through the bar-room; out I cut after him; over went the stove in the rush after both of us. I chased him round two squares in the snow; then headed him off, and chased him back to the hotel again, where he landed in a fine sweat, begged for his life, and said he'd give up the property. Well, I wish I may be shot if he wasn't a feller that they were offerin' a reward for in Buffalo! I made him dress himself, cured of his rheumatiz, run it right out of him; delivered him up, pocketed the reward, and established the science, by thunder!

Death of Pizarro.

Three hundred and thirty years ago, Pizarro was murdered in his own house. A writer in Blackwood thus notices the event: "They that shall take the sword shall perish by the sword." By the sword he had risen; by the sword he was to perish; not on some well fought battle-field, with shouts of victory ringing in his ear; but in his palace-hall, by the assassin's blade. In his own fair capital of Lima, the city of Kings, the gem of the Pacific which had sprung up, under his own auspices, with incredible rapidity, for Pizarro seemed to impart his vast energy to all about him, a score of conspirators, assembled at the house of Amalago's son, plotted his death. It was on a Sunday in June, 1541, at the hour of dinner, that they burst into his department, with cries of "Death to the tyrant!"

A number of visitors were with him, but they were imperfectly armed, and deserted him, escaping by the windows and his half-brother, Martinez de Alcantara, two pages and as many cavaliers, were all who stood forward in defence of their chief. They soon fell, overpowered by numbers and covered with wounds. But Pizarro was not the man to meekly meet his death. Alone, without armor, his cloak around one arm, his good sword in his right hand with a vigor and intrepidity surprising at his advanced age, the old hero kept his cowardly assassins at bay.

"What, ho!" he cried, "traitors! have you come to kill me in my own house?" And, as he spoke, two of his enemies fell beneath his blows. Rada, the chief of the conspirators, impatient of the delay, called out, "Why are we so long about it? Down with the tyrant!" and taking one of his companions in his arms, he thrust him against the Marquis. Pizarro instantly grasping with his opponent, he ran him through with his sword. But, at that moment, he received a wound in the throat, and bleeding, sunk on the floor, when the swords of Rada and several others were plunged into his body. "Jesu!" exclaimed the dying man; and tracing a cross with his bloody fingers on the floor, he bent his head to kiss it when a stroke, more friendly than the rest, put an end to his existence.

Livery Stable.

The subscriber informs the public that he has purchased the entire stock of Horses, Carriages, &c., comprising the Livery Stable of William R. Leh, in the borough of Allentown. "Place none but Americans on Guard."
WASHINGTON.
This large weekly, which is now being published in Baltimore every Saturday, advocates the following:

PLATFORM OF PRINCIPLES.
An extension of the term of residence required for the naturalization of foreigners to at least twenty-one years.
The passage of laws to prevent the immigration of foreign papers from becoming a burden upon our people, and to put a stop to the introduction of foreign convicts into this country.

Opposition to the attainment of political power by the Church of Rome, or by any other Church.
The passage of such laws as will cause these institutions of the Roman Church, which are adverse to the spirit of our Government, to become amenable to the supervision and authority of our civil jurisdiction.

And, to sum up all in a few words; our great end and aim is to place the Government of America in the HANDS OF TRUE AMERICANS.
