

Famine Prices.

The prices of many of the leading necessities of life are high, almost without precedent. Coal is selling at from eight to nine dollars per ton. Yet there is no good reason why this article, considering the inexhaustible supply in the mines and the cheapness of transportation to sea navigation, should not be sold in the principal cities on the seaboard as low as four or five dollars per ton. At this price it ought to pay a large profit to all those engaged in the business of mining and sending it to market. There is nothing in the quantity received from the Maryland mines up to August 5, 103,000 tons more had been received than had reached tide-water at the same date last year; by the Reading Railroad the increase has been 308,000 tons, by the Schuylkill Canal 82,000 tons, making a total increase from these three principal sources of supply of 460,000 tons, or about 25 per cent, over last year. High prices tend to diminish the consumption, and the natural price for the article during the remainder of the year, cannot, in view of the largely increased supply, be higher than that of last year. Coal sold in London the year round at from three to four dollars a ton, and the cost of conveying it there from the mines is quite as great as the cost of transportation from our mines to New-York. The charge for transportation over the Reading Railroad, about 90 miles in length and all the way on a descending grade, is but little over a dollar a ton, while the actual cost in only about 40 cents a ton.

Flour is another article of general consumption which now bears an exorbitantly and unnaturally high price. The chief business of this country being agricultural, and the quantity of fertile land under cultivation almost boundless, and the price of the best land extremely low, with every facility for the cheap and speedy transportation of produce to market, it would seem that four or five dollars per barrel for flour in the principal cities ought always to be a sufficient and remunerating price. This year the price has been carried up to a very unusual rate by peculiar circumstances. The crops in Europe last year were very deficient, and we have drained our own supplies to supply their deficiency. We have exported flour in such quantities that prices in Europe have been reduced to a point which would admit of its reshipment to this country at a profit. The crops in Europe this year both in Great Britain and throughout the Continent are generally represented to be abundant, and the prospect now is that a very small quantity of breadstuffs will be wanted from this country except at very low prices.

The wheat crop throughout this country generally, is spoken of as being above the average, and in the course of a few weeks, when it begins to come to market freely, the prices of flour and wheat must undergo a material decline. With respect to the other great agricultural staples, corn and potatoes, the prospect of a decline is not so clear. The yield of the potato crop throughout New England is said already to have been seriously affected by the long continued drought. Throughout the West, the accounts from different sections concur in stating that the aggregate corn crop will be reduced by the drought at least one-half below its ordinary yield. In six of the principal Western corn producing States, the aggregate quantity of corn produced annually, according to the last census, was 316,000,000 bushels. If one-half of this crop is cut off this year, the loss to the country in various ways cannot be estimated at less than eighty millions of dollars. After making every allowance for the tendency of farmers and the local country presses to exaggerate the extent and severity of such calamities, this estimate of the probable loss from the failure of the corn crop does not appear to us very wide of the mark. Such an unforeseen and enormous deduction from their accustomed resources, necessarily cuts across the Western people who depend upon the sale of produce for their incomes, and make a great hole in their ordinary means of discharging their debts and paying for the large supplies of merchandise which they buy from merchants at the East.—N. Y. Weekly Times.

Trading and Overtrading.

Trading benefits alike the buyer and seller properly conducted; but overtrading on both sides is injurious. For instance the system of monopoly or controlling the trade in a certain article for the sole purpose of making unfair exactions is apt to enhance the price of others, and thus the monopolists as well as the trade is ultimately injured.—Another folly of overtrading is adopted in the credit system. He who avails himself of this system especially to procure the comforts and necessities of life is overtrading and pays daily more for the same article than the millionaires who buy in large quantities and for cash. So, too, this system compels printers, publishers, merchants and others to put a high cash price on their articles than they would do by cash payments and thus the dealer in cash and credit are both injured. In large operations the credit system may sometimes be profitable to those who use it. But for farmers, merchants, printers laborers, etc., cash payments will "tell" at the end of the year, in the pockets of buyers and sellers. The merchants and printers especially, must calculate for lost debts and these always enhance the price of their goods; but "cash down" would enable them to buy and sell their goods cheaper, and thus all parties would be better suited. This species of overtrading is a "crying evil" in all cities, and should be abated. Pay your employers in cash and demand cash for your goods, and all parties will complain less of "hard times." PERHAM'S GREAT GIFT ENTERPRISE.—Nowwithstanding the thousand and one reports to the contrary, this great enterprise, we see, has been flourishing like a green bay tree. In the present issue we publish the proceedings of the Shareholders, in Mass Meeting, held on the 27th of July. They are of the most interesting character, and will repay a careful perusal. Mr. Perham's card also should claim the attention of all, being liberal in the extreme, and cannot fail to ensure the sale of the remaining tickets in a very limited time. Send in orders for tickets without delay and thus hasten the desired consummation of the enterprise.

THE GREAT STATE FAIR.

Amount of Premiums Offered $7000
The Fair Grounds—The Horse Course.
Philadelphia Manufacturers and Mechanics invited to exhibit.
The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society's premium list adopted, and its Members admitted.
COMPETITION WITHOUT THE STATE.
Life Member's and Members' Tickets.

The State Agricultural Fair and Industrial Exhibition of the Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society, at Philadelphia, will open on the 20th day of September, and continue four days. $7000 will be distributed in money, medals and silver plate to the successful competitors in Agricultural, Horticulture and the Mechanic Arts.
The Fair Grounds comprise twenty-five acres, and are located in the 24th ward of the city, upon the Powelton and Bingham estates, West Philadelphia. Large buildings will be completed for the reception and display of all articles designed for exhibition and five hundred covered sheds for horses, cattle, sheep and hogs.
A Course one-fourth of a mile in circumference will be properly arranged for the trial of horses. Steam engines will be on the ground for the running of machinery. The grounds have been laid out and buildings erected at considerable expense for the accommodation of exhibitors and visitors.—The exhibition will be Mechanical as well as Agricultural, and the Manufacturers or Mechanics of Philadelphia particularly invited to send in specimens of their productions of their manufactures and workshops. The competition being thrown open to the citizens of all the States, it may be expected that many of them will compete with Pennsylvania for the prizes.
The Pennsylvania Horticultural Society having determined to hold no exhibition this year, the contributors of the Society are invited to exhibit in the horticultural display of the State Society upon the same terms and conditions as were required by the Horticultural Society.
The State Society, in addition to their own schedule of premiums, have also adopted that of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, as published in their printed list. The annual members of the horticultural society will be grounds for admittance upon the presentation of the admission tickets which they hold from the society.
The Secretary is prepared to issue Certificates of Life Membership of the Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society. Price $10. Tickets of annual membership, price $1, can be had of the secretary, at his office at Patchal, Morris & Co.'s Agricultural Warehouse, corner of Seventh and Market streets Philadelphia.
Members' Tickets can be had at the Treasurer's office, at the Fair Grounds, on the opening of the exhibition. Single tickets price 25 cents, will be issued at the grounds on Thursday, the 28th of September.
The books of entry will be open on and after the 1st of September, at the Secretary's Office, and until Monday the 25th of September, when they will be opened at the Business Office, at the Fair Grounds.
Exhibitors must become Members of the Society.
Premium lists are for distribution at the Agricultural Warehouses of Paschal, Morris & Co. corner of Seventh and Market, and David Landreth, Nos. 21 and 23 South Sixth street, between Market and Chestnut street.
