The Lehigh Register Is published in the Borough of Allentown Lehigh County, Pa., every Wednesday, by HAINES & DIEFENDERFER.

At $1 50 per annum, payable in advance, and $2 00 if not paid until the end of the year .--No.paper discontinued until all prrearages are paid.

OFFICE in Hamilton street, two doors west of the German Reformed Church, directly opposite Moser's Drug Store.

CELetters on business must be POST PAID, otherwise they will not be attended to.

JOB PRINTING.

Having recently added a large assortment o fashionable and most modern styles of type, v e are prepared to execute, at short notice, al kinds of Book, Job, and Fancy Printing.

Poetical.

------The following touching lines were written and set to music by James G. Clark, Tenore of to the circulation of all reports that may be in-Ossian's Bards :

THE OLD MOUNTAIN TREE.

Oh, the home we loved by the bounding deep, Where the hills in glory stood; [sleep, And the moss-grown graves where our father's 'Neath the boughs of the waving wood; We remember yet, with fond regret For the rock and the flowery lea, [day, Where we once used to play thro' the long, long In the shade of the old mountain tree.

In the shade of the old mountain tree.

We fire pilgrims now in a stranger land, And the joys of youth are passed, Kind friends are gone, but the old trees stand, Unharmed by the warring blast; Oh, the lark may sing in the clouds of spring. And the swan on the silver sea, Imade But we mourn for the shade where the wild bird

Her nest in the old mountain tree.

Oh, the time went by like a tale that's told In a land of song and mirth, And many a form, in the church-yard cold,

Finds rest from the cares of earth ;

And many a day will wander away, O'er the waves of the Western sea,

And the heart will pine and vainly pray For a grave by the old mountain tree.

A Capital Story. THE ADOPTED DAUGHTER

CHAPTER I.

THE SECRET.

PRRMIT us, dear reader, to usher you into an elegantly furnished chamber in one of the handsomest houses in the city of C----. Before the mirror sits a lovely young lady, and her mother, who has assumed the place of waitingmaid for the time being, stands over her, tastily arranging some ornaments in her hair.

"You need not be very particular, mother," said the former, " for Charles is not to accom pany me this evening, and you know I do not care much for dress myself."

"I hope the absence of Charles will not prevent you from enjoying the company, daughter."

"O, no. Not in the least. I am always happy with you and father, but when I speak of dressing differently when Charles is to be present, it is merely to gratify his peculiar taste. I am sorry he cannot be with us this evening : but I presume there is a good reason for his detention, and I shall not let it mar my pleasures in the least."

Mrs. Lane answered her daughter's pleasant remarks merely with a sigh, for her cheerfulness on the occasion only added another pang to her already o'crburdened heart. She knew the purest joy, that their early hopes which "and I have no more time to devote to you this the cause of Charle's absence (the affianced were so soon blasted, had been in st

if it was. But the secret had by some means | flesh and blood ? Have I not brought her up, escaped, and had been seized upon by some of and educated her for a lady? In what is she that class of busy-bodies whose scrupulous con- | deficient ?" scientiousness compels them to give an impetus "Nothing. Nothing, sir, She is a lady in every sense of the term. The only objection tcresting to the general news-scekers. Consewhich any one could raise, is that she is not quently their only course was to forestall the your legal heir." gossip, and make their own explanation to their innocently injured daughter.

The facts in the case were these. Mr. and child when at the age of six months. They had occasion to visit a sick friend who resided in a distant port, to which they were obliged to take passage by water. On their return homeward the barque was wrecked, and they escaped barely with their own lives. The babe shared the fate of most of the other passengers who found a grave in the mighty deep. It was a terrible stroke to the parents, and Mrs. Lane that her health was evidently suffering from innocent grief. It was then recom-

VOLUME IX.

leisure in the absence of her husband. The little girl whom we have introduced as the young lady-Minnie-was some two or I have no such feeling, I assure you; but he tions, and was pleased to own her kind benefaca very poor family, who, in their indigent circumstances, acknowledged it a relief to be ridded of the child, and sympathy for the unfortu- I can do nothing, surely." nate little stranger strengthened their attachments to her, which increased daily from the hour that she was received to her new home, Little Minnie -for so she was called, in honor a very pretty child, and quite interesting for you ask?" one born in obscurity, and having lived as it were unloved ; and her gentle and quiet disposition accorded well with the pleasing appearance of her person. It required no urging to which is my only hope of support. love such a little picture of innocence, and the doting fondness with which Mr. and Mrs. Lane regarded their little charge induced them to give her their own name, and conceal from he world the fact of her adoption. This they felt they had a perfect right to do, as it was a matter which concerned none but own, is at stake."

themselves : and for the purpose of making sure of their safety in the secrecy of the business, they removed from their former place of residence to the city of C-----. As Minnie grew in years she also improved in intellect, and her lovable disposition, united to a person of brilliant and increasing charms, made her the idol of the household ; and never for a moment had who loved his daughter quite as fondly, and est from her mind. She had read of false friends, would quite as readily have declined the business had there been any alternative.

"Ah ! Then it is my fortune that you would wed. Rest assured, Mr. Ellyton, you will not be forced into a union that is not in accordance Mrs. Lane had the misfortune to lose their only | with your own wishes. My daughter is not a baggar, that she should of necessity accept the offer of a vagabond -"

"Stop, stop, sir !" interrupted Charles warmly. "I deserve no such name. It is not your wealth that I covet. If Minnie were a beggar, I should be proud to own her as a wife. You know something of my father. His views on some subjects are peculiar. I censure him for nothing but his over-indulgence, in allowing the less of the child proved so great a trial to me to grow up to manhood without obtaining any knowledge of business. He is amply able and willing to support me for life, but the stipumended by her physician that she should adopt lation places me entirely under his control, and a child ; as that would have the effect to divert | my unavoidable helplessness compels me to subher mind from her troubles, and supply at the mit. He objects to my union with your daughsame time what her nature demanded, - an ob- ter, on the ground that deception has been ject to share her afflictions, and occupy her practised, for the purpose of making a brilliant match for her ; and he declares that he will not submit to be made the dupe of such a scheme.

three years of age when she was taken into the says he will disown me if I marry contrary to family, and she soon forgot her former associa- his wishes, -- and as much as I love Minnie, I will not be the means of depriving her of the tors as father and mother. She was taken from | luxuries and comforts of life to which she has been accustomed."

" Very well ; then the matter settles itself .-

"Indeed, you can, sir, do a great deal." "What more, pray ? You asked for permission to pay your addresses to my daughter .--You got it. Now you ask leave to withdraw of the dear lost one who bore that name-was your suit. You have that. What more can

"This only. If you will settle a portion of your property upon Minuie : that will satisfy my father, and I may still enjoy his faver, "Never! never, sir, will I barter the hand of my daughter away thus. She shall be my heir if I choose to make her so ; but she is not to be sold ! Let this end our interview." "Do not be hasty, Mr. Lane. Remember the happiness of your daughter, as well as my " My daughter, sir, has a futher who is able. in purse and person, to protect her from the world. I forbid you from this hour to enter my house, or to continue any intercourse with her whatever.' " But you do not seem to understand-" "I understand all I wish to," interrupted Mr. Lane, as he arose and seized his hat, and the fond parents cause for other than feelings of left the house-adding, as he hastily departed, now all such things seemed to be of foreign ex-The following evening was appointed for the istence. Her innocent heart had conceived of dreaded disclosure. Minnie was summoned to no such intruders within her own bower of her father's private sitting-room on business of peace. Visions of terror arose before her eyes, importance. She wondered much what it and chased away the soothing powers of sleep could be, and without hesitation quickly made and ere the day dawned her imagination was her appearance. wrought up to a perfect fever of excitement, "Well, father," said she, gaily, " what have which so greatly reduced her strength that it you to say to me? Here I am." Mr. Lane could not raise his eyes from the able, where he pretended to be looking over some papers. Minnie noticed that his countehold upon her feelings. Every hope and ennance became pale, and her smiling face soon couragement were held out by her parents, but assumed an expression of anxiety at his silence. to no avail. It seemed to her that her fortune "Speak quickly, dear father," said she; had changed, and everything conspired to sink what has happened to you ?"

her the deeper in the pool of adversity. Three "Sit down, my daughter," he began, affectdays after the disclosure of the secret, she reing a calmness which was evidently, with difceived a letter from Charles, relinquishing all ficulty, forced. "I have a secret to reveal to claim to her hand, and stating that he was soon you, and I may as well say it at once. But to embark for a foreign land. He also expresslet me tell you in advance that you have no ed, in the warmest terms, his unchanging love, cause for regret on account of it, for no harm and referred her to her father for further explashall come to you while I live, and you shall be nation; adding in conclusion, that he hoped at the mistress of all my property when I die." some future day to make himself worthy of her

"Do not speak of property, father; let me favor. know the secret," urged Minnie, with much auxiety.

"You have been brought up with the idea (and we have wished you might retain it to your grave), that you were our own child ; and his voice fultered to a whisper at the close of the sentence.

"Your own child ! and am I not ?" exclaimed Minuie springing to her feet. " Do not get excited, my dcar ; be calm. It is my painful duty to inform you that you are our adopted daughter, but-" "And you not my father ? And my dear mother not mother? I never; never will believe it ! Where is she ? let me go to her !" and she would have rushed from the room had not Mr. Lane detained her by force.

"Be calm, I entreat you, my dear," conand propose a compromise in regard to his union tinued he, "for your mother is suffering all she can bear on your account already."

"But, why have I not known this before ?" "Because we loved you like our own, and meant you should never know us in any other felt that on her happiness alone depended his relation.. But the tongue of scandal has cruel- own enjoyment of life. ly invaded our fortress, and we are compelled to defend ourselves in the premises. The mere fact of your being an adopted child will not affect your position in the least. You are just as ed that a stranger at the door requested her atmuch our own child, to all intents and purposes, as if you were born of our own flesh and blood, and all the powers of earth can never rob you of your rights, which I shall guarantee to you. But there is one point in which it may affect you, still I hope your good sense of honor will never allow you to act differently than if you were our own child. "I have received a hint that Mr. Ellyton, senior, objects to the union bety

such things before, and I knew they were worth a great deal. I offered them for sale, and they threatened me with imprisonment. I never dared to offer them afterward. I can say no. more." Here the poor woman's voice failed, and she gasped for breath.

Mrs: Lane had listened to the story with preathless anxiety, and at the mention of the ornaments she was so much overcome that she scarcely had power to speak. The thought, too, that the woman was dying, and leaving her in such distressing doubt, rendered her almost frantic ! The most important part of the story remained untold. Seizing a cup of water that. stood beside her bed, she applied it to her lips, and begged her to try to speak once more; but By the second se

NUMBER 19.

she had heard of the deceitful world, but until

CHAPTER IV.

THE DISCLOSURE.

A single week had passed since Minnie Lane life," and she was scarce the image of her former self. A livid paleness overspread her

Mr. Lane slowly paced his room, deliberating upon the probable result of the flerce conflict listurbed his peace. He was some time in de-features, and a dull melancholy hung on every leave her room.

fibre of her frame.

was many days before she was again able to This was Minnie's first trial, and it took deep

"My Minnie ! My own Minnie ! Why did!

I never see it before ? You have every feature of my precious babe !"

It was all Greek to Minnie, though. She unlerstood not a word, but stood in utter amazement.

"What is the matter, dear mother?" said she. You are over-excited. Pray compose yourself, and tell us what has happened."

"But what is this ?" interrupted Mr. Lane, who had just discovered the necklace lying on. the floor. " Speak quickly !" said he, growing excited as the truth flashed upon his mind.-That was my baby's necklace ! I bought it and had it marked myself! Where did it come from ?"

encountered the first storm in her "voyage of The peu of an angel could scarcely describ the feelings of that trio when the plain and simple tale was told as Mrs. Lane had received it from the dying woman. The evidence was conclusive and satisfactory. They had adopted their own child ! and it may be safe to conclude. that the care and affection which they had bebetween pride and conscience, which greatly stowed upon her, was to them a cause of no regret !

ciding which should have the preference; but It is needless to add that Charles's journey at length his noble heart gained the ascendency was postponed to an indefinite period; and. over his carnal nature, and he had about made without any compromise, or sacrifice of dignity up his mind to sit down and write to Charles, on the part of Mr. Lane, was most happy torenew his claim to the hand of his daughter. with Minnie which would be satisfactory to all The bloom scon returned to Minnie's cheek, concerned. At first the thought of such a thing and joy beamed from every countenance, as seemed altogether too humiliating for one in his Charles Ellyton led to Hymen's altar the lost high position, but Minnie was his idol, and he and restored, the adopted and real daughter of what is Geography ?"

when a servant entered the room, and announctendance on a poor woman who was very sick. etts ?" "Tell him I cannot go," she replied. "I am "All right, two to one on the Know-Nothnot well enough to go out this evening, but I

"Silence-next-Robert, how is the State

The messenger departed, and in a few moments returned again, saying that the woman could not live till morning, and she was very anxious to see her.

From the urgency of the request, Mrs. Lane

Mrs. Lane sat alone in her own chamber quite as deeply absorbed in the same subject, will try to call on her to morrow."

the wealthy Mr. Lane. ----

CLASS IN GEOGRAPHY STAND UP .--- "James,

" Jography is a scription of the eirth." "Good, where is the State of Massachuings-daddy jined 'em last week."

of Mass. bounded ?"

"Bounded by the Maine Liquor Law and Atlantic Ocean on the east and norf, on thesouth and west by wooden nutmegs, abolitionists, railroads, Nebraska meetins and so forths.

A PAULLY JOURNAL ---- MRUTBAL BN POLLTICS.

Devoted to Local and General News, Agriculture, Education, Morality, Amusement, Markets, &c., &c.

ALLENTOWN, PA., FEBRUARY 14, 1855.

KRIGH REGISTER.

lover of Minnie), but her daughter did not.	per partially restored		yourself, on account of the recent disclosur	was inclined to believe that her assistance wa	"What are its productions?"
Inc parents possessed a secret too which then		Charles quickly retired, feeling much grieve	d land a second disclosur	e really needed, and she was not the person wi	"Snow-storms, hard-up authors fish oil had fondly hoped to keep forever, as they had	CHAPTER II.	at the result of his interview, for he had hope		ever turned a deaf car to the call of charity	clambakes, Know-Nothings, yaller dogs, news-done for many years, buried in their own		to interest Mr. Lane, in his hehalf, With	a liter in action in the ar he will be-as to	² It was then quite dark, and following her guid	papers, and Bunker Hill monument."
bosoms. Circumstances had of late made it	THE LOVER.	heavy heart he returned home, and sought with	pur circ,	through several dark and filthy streets, she	"What are its animal productions ?"
expedient that the daughter should be a sharer	Mr. Lane, after accompanying his wife and	as little success the sympathy of his hard-heart	and the set with perfect independence, and		"Mince pies, sassages, doughnuts, dandies in the information. It was an affair which	daughter to the house of their friend, left, as	ed parent. It seemed cruel that he must the	and that you are not to be the		and swaller-tailed coats."
more immediately concerned her, and it was	we have before stated, to fulfil a previous en-	suffer for the sins of his ancestors, for such wa			"Sit down-Class in Geography take recess.
but fair that she should know the truth at once.	gagement.	really the case, and his faulty education was the	you are to inherit all my property, but this fact	and and any miere, without farther ceremony	Robert you go home and tell your father I'll
There was a probability that the disclosure	He returned home, and seated himself alone	means of placing him in a dependent position	finuse not be named to any one out of the		take some animal productions fo dinner."
would be the manne of	in his library. Presently the door bell rung,	and subjecting him to all the caprices of a mis	family. If he marries you, it shall be for your.		o take some animal productions to dinner."
would be the means of anxiety and trouble to	and Charles Elleter sently the door bell rung,	guided parent. But for the deprivation of al	self alone."	the appearance of the most abject poverty, sh	e "Yes sir-We've got some bunkum sassa-
her, and the tenderness of a parent's heart	and Charles Ellyton was shown in. Mr. Lane	those privileges which he should and might have		discovered its only occupant on a low bed in th	ges-our brindle terrier died last week."
shrank from so unpleasant a task.	invited him coolly to a seat, knowing his busi-	enjoyed big for the being and might have		, and the conner, apparently asideb. The sound
Mr. Lane accompanied his wife and daughter	ness, and not exactly relishing his present	enjoyed—his father being a merchant of exten-	calm.		NOT SO VERY GREENA young and appa-
to the residence of their friends where at 2	predicament.	sive trade-he might have been master of his		faintly asked, "who's here ?"	rently verdant slip, who gave his hailing place were invited to pass the evening, and loft them.	1	own fortune, and ranked with characters of the	sigh. "That accounts for Charles's about	"It is Mrs. Lane," answered the visitor	as " old Varmount," found himself surrounded, for a time, saying he had an engagement else-	JUUI DARLICULAR DUSINGE this oroning 2 "THE	highest standing ; for he was truly a generous-	sigh. "That accounts for Charles's absenting himself so entirely from me of late. It is all	"You sent for me, did you not ?"	upon a certain occasion, by a crowd of quizzing where.	must be brief. You are aware that I act in	hearted fellow, and his natural intellect was of	i i i i i i i i i i i i i i i i i i i	"O, yes, my good lady. I am dving, and 1	upstarts, who seemed bent upon displaying
The company was very pleasant, being com-	your place as gallant this evening, and my ab-	no inferior cast. It was not on account of	is proud, and very sensitive where honor is	cannot go in peace until I confess my sins. De	their own smartness, at the expense of the posed of the best society in the place and	sence from the party will be noticed This is	Minnie's prospective fortune that he won her	is proud, and very sensitive where nonor is	you know me, ma'am ?"	Yankee.
Minule enjoyed the season finely. Wherever	rather an unmanly way of doing business, in	allections. He loved ther : and he entered the	concerned.		"Hello, Jonathan !" says one, "where are
she went she was courted and caressed as the	my opinion."	proud satisfaction of knowing that his affection	- Due when is Unaries : A how that ha	before."	you bound ?"
daughter and sole heiress of the rich Mr. Lane,	I Have not right, on I have not come, here	was returned.	should fray a childish trick !	"You have, ma'am. I never have lost sight	"Deoun to Bosting, on a little tramp," was
and her position was envied by many of her	to find fault with any one. I am well aware of	It was a heart-rending thought that he must	"Do not censure Charles without cause, dear	of you. I have followed you wherever you	the reply.
associates who seemed to be less fortunate. Her	my position, and I assure you, sir, that it is in	abandon his fair scheme, and witness the much	Lather. I think I KIOW IIIM. I do not know	went, and always meant to tell you the secret	"What's your business in Boston ?" contin-
good fortune was not her chief recommendation	no way a comfortable one."	of all his bright prospects ; but the risk of out	the precise position in which he is placed with	before I died."	u ed the inquisitive gentleman.
good fortune was not ner chief recommendation	"It appears to me that the choice of happi-	Jecting her to the disgrace which the month	his father, but I will never believe that he is	"What secret have you to disclose ? Pray	"Oh, I'm deoun arter my pension money," though, for a more amiable disposition than	ness, or the reverse, lies with yourself alone .	attaches to poverty, seemed to him an act of	false without convincing proof."	tell it at once, while you have strength."	responded greenv.
hers, was seldom known, and her gentle man-	but let us proceed to business. You have had	unpardonable presumption. Sooner than he	At this moment Mrs. Lane entered the room	The poor woman seemed almost exhausted,	"Pension money !" ejaculated whiskeree-
pers won all hearts.	the audacity to tell me that I have decoived	come the perpetrator of such a crime he mould	and another scene ensued. In an instant the	and Mrs. Lane feared she would die before she	"how much do you get, and what are you
The state was in at ease during the absence	Top and the object of mean and it is a	choose to sacrifice his only carthly home and	mother and daughter rushed to each other's	had said all she wished to.	drawing pension money for ?"
of ner husband, and it was with much difficulty	The second manage of the second secon	submit to the fate that overruled his unhappy	arms.	indu said all she wished to.	"Oh !" answered the countryman, "I get and the mas able to conceat ther reenings from	Odvonco what my nonly will be These less	destiny.	"My dear daughter !" was all that Mrs.	"I gave you a little girl some fourteen years	four countryman, "I get od wow in nothing that man 11 and 1	· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·	Lane could utter.	ugo	four cents every year-tew to mind my own with her usual grace, but it	Wise affected noun interacts on handlense	CHAPTER III.	"I am your daughter, and you are my mother,	"Indeed," said Mrs. Lane, "I did not re-	business, and tew to let other folks' business
		THE CONFESSION.	and I never will own any other parents !" ex-	cognize you. Well, go on. What have you to Minnie as an own child, and as such she had	as I have had no intent to wrong you, and have		claimed Minnie, with a spirit of pride, and an	say about the little girl ?"	The crowd had no more remarks to offer treated her from her infancy. Minnie had not	not wronged you, I have no restitution to	Mrs. Lane's worst fears were realized when	carnestness of manner well portraying her true	"You thought she was my child, ma'am-"	The answer was entirely satisfactory.
to learn that those she looked upon, and loved	make.	she learned from her husband that the engage-	woman's heart.	"Certainly. You told me so. Was she
	"I understand you, sir, and am satisfied that	ment of marriage between their daughter and		not ?"	The waters of the Upper Sacramento, you have meant no evil by your course, yet the	Charles Ellyton was severed. This new trial	The conversation was protracted to a late	"No, ma'am. I don't know whose she	California, are teeming with the finest salmon, news to all of her friends and accounter the	disclosures which have been made of late re-	to her, after so many years of undisturbed on-	hour, and the unfortunate position in which.	was."	which are caught and carried to San Francisco, news to all of her friends and associates, too, for it was universally believed that she was the	garding Miss Lane, have affected my happiness.	joyment, was even harder to bear then the god	Minnie was placed, was as keenly felt by her	"But, where did you obtain her ?"	where they are sold at three cents per pound.
for it was universally believed that she was the daughter and only heir of one of the wealthiest	and are likely to form a barrier against our	misfortune which was the means of placing the	parents as herself; and it was not till she had	"I came from H- sixteen years ago in the	So plenty are they that many spoil and are men in C	union."	dearly-loved child under her protection.	promised them that, come what would, she	"barque Fortune," which was wrecked. I	thrown away before being sold.
It was from no sinter the	"How so, sir? What disclosures do you	The next forbidding task was to communicate	would not allow any unfavorable circumstance	supposed all were lost, myself with the rest.	Mr. George W. Curtis, in a lecture at
It was from no sinister motive on the part of	allude to ?"	the fact and its causes to Minnie. Mrs. Lane	to overcome ner better judgment, and disturb	but I found myself safe on the land the next	New York, spoke of those pious people who
Mr. and Mrs. Lane that this fact was kept a	The same that I hamed to von. Nothing (had have the state of the state of the state	her usual happy state of mind-that she was	morning, having been rescued from death by	clasp their hands so tight in prayer that they secret, but merely to gratify their own feelings	except that she is only an adopted daughter "		permitted to retire. It was easy to make that	some kind hand I summand That little ability	could not onen them when the states of the
he made rublic supposing that the truth would	"What of that ? Is she any the less virtuous	der til en de become too much irritated to en-	promise, but harder to keep it. For the first	Wag gaved too but its memories mana last	came round.
be made public, or considering the consequences	and worthy, because she is not one of my own	the mainful duty devoluted insue; consequently	time in her life Minnie's sweet slumbers were	I claimed it for the sake of a valuable necklaca
	owa]	me Immut duty devotvea upon her husband,	disturbed by thoughts that were ever the farth-		15 number of metanic via bounds will absorb
			· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·		15 pounds of water in six hours.
		•
				•	