

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT
On the Camden and Amboy Railroad.

SEVENTY-FIVE PERSONS KILLED!
Seventy Persons Wounded!

One of the most shocking Railroad accidents ever recorded, happened last Wednesday morning, on the Camden and Amboy Railroad near Burlington, N. J., resulting, as nearly as we are yet able to ascertain, in the death of twenty-five persons, and serious injury to some seventy others.

The circumstances of the catastrophe are briefly as follows: The 10 o'clock train from Philadelphia left punctually on Wednesday morning, and consisted of five passenger cars, baggage-cars, and locomotive. Israel Adams was the engineer and Isaac Van Nost-rand the conductor. The train reached Burlington station (20 miles) a few moments past 11 o'clock, and waited the arrival of the New York train from five to ten minutes. The train not making its appearance, the Philadelphia train moved onward at a moderate rate—the engineer keeping a lookout for the other train. It had progressed about a mile and a-half, when the expected train came in sight, and immediately gave two loud, sharp blows of the steam-whistle, which is the signal for the brakes and to reverse the engine. The engineer of the Philadelphia train, alarmed at this desperate position, instantly commenced backing, and got under a headway of between twenty and thirty miles an hour, for Burlington again. To comprehend this reverse movement, it must be remembered that the passenger-cars, usually placed behind and coming after the locomotive, were now in front and pushed forward by the locomotive. Thus the engineer was of course ignorant as to what was in advance of the backward-going train. He had run but one-half of a mile when the first passenger-car came in contact with a light wagon driven by Dr. Heincken of Columbus, N. J., who attempted to cross the track in front of the cars.

The pole of his carriage breaking, the occupants, consisting of the Doctor, his wife, two children and wife's father, escaped unhurt.—One of the horses was dashed to pieces, but the carcass of the other, falling across the rails, turned the first car off the track. The subsequent destruction can be readily understood when the rapid rate at which the train was impelled is considered. The first car being driven backward, the second was thrown diagonally across the track, and its centre literally smashed into atoms by the concussion with the third. Both of these cars fell down the embankment, a height of about seven or eight feet. There were five cars torn to pieces. A more complete wreck was never witnessed. One of the cars was reduced to splinters; another was cut in twain, one end being reversed, and the other end in an upright position, frightfully shattered. The other cars were ripped from one end to the other and beyond repair. Some of the heavy iron axles were twisted into a bow. The heavy T rail was bent in some places and torn from its fastenings, the inside flanges being cut as if by a sharp axe.

The scene which ensued baffles description. The cars piled upon each other, in shattered fragments, from beneath which myriads of human beings were crawling, maimed, broken, and reeking with blood like perspiration, the shrieks groans, nay, absolute howlings of the wretched beings thus entombed as it were in destruction—mangled forms of men and women huddled together with broken panels, bars of iron, massive wheels, and scattered baggage—all combined to render this fearful scene even more terrible to the imagination. One of the passengers—Mr. George Ridgeway—jumped from the train, and the next instant was buried beneath it a lifeless, disfigured mass. Those persons who came to the rescue knew not where to begin the work of assistance from the urgent calls which arose on every side. The unhurt and the least injured were crawling up to the banks, many of them being able to walk to the house in the neighborhood, where they prayed for a glass of water—their sufferings being fearfully aggravated by thirst. On every side could be heard the sobs and wailings of those who had just recognized a dear friend or relative among the mangled and conglomerate mass. Wives for their husbands, husbands for their wives, parents, children—all joined in swelling this vast aggregate of agony and horror.

As soon as the accident was known, John S. Frick, one of the Directors of the Burlington and Mount Holly Railroad, the depot of which is close to the scene of the disaster, got ready a train of cars and proceeded to the spot. He nobly assisted in extricating the wounded from the wreck, and took the cushions and doors of the cars for beds on which to lay them. He then started the train down to Burlington and prepared quarters for them, where they received such care and attention as their injuries required. He then returned with the train and brought down the dead, who were placed in coffins and taken to the Lyceum.

While the details of this horrible catastrophe were heart-rending to a degree, they were yet characterized by an amount of resignation and self-sacrifice on the part of the victims which reflected credit upon humanity. Patiently and uncomplainingly did they, in the majority of instances, bear their sufferings. "Go," said the heroic Mr. MacLay to a friend who was anxiously endeavoring to relieve his agonies, "there are others who require your attentions more than I do; attend to them, Least wait!" Nor is this a solitary case of magnanimity; there was many an instance among the sufferers which manifested the finer traits of man's nature.

It is gratifying to notice the prompt and efficient aid administered by the citizens of Burlington. The ladies were foremost in the work of charity, and to their efforts is many a wounded man and woman indebted for life. They were the first to summon their male relatives to assist in removing the helpless to a place of shelter; it was their hands which prepared the bandage and the cooling draught; it was their voices and kind attentions which soothed the feverish pillow of the wounded and the dying.

The following is a list of the killed: Edward P. Bacon, residing near Spring Garden and Seventh streets, Philadelphia; Alex. Kelly, residing in Market street, near Seventeenth street, Philadelphia; Mrs. Mary Prescott, of Salem, N. J.; Mrs. Clement Barclay, residing at 267 Locust street, Philadelphia; Jane Pringle, of Ellicott Mills, Md.; Charles Bottom, of Trenton, N. J.; Thos. J. Meredith, of Baltimore, Md.; Wilson Kent, of the firm of Kent & Dyott, Second street below Chestnut, Philadelphia; John Dallam, of Baltimore, Md.; George Ingersoll, Philadelphia; John M. Connel, of Wilmington, Del.; Catharine Brown, (colored,) Washington, C. D.; Jacob Fisher, of Fislerville, N. J.; Jacob Howard, of Lebanon, Tenn.; Baron De St. Andre, French Consul, resided in South Fifth street, Philadelphia; Mrs. Jane Lincoln; Wm. Ridgway, of New York City; Major Wm. Boyce, of Washington, D. C.; Name unknown—body at City Hall; George W. Ridgway, Oil Merchant, North Wharves, Philadelphia; Harry Rush, of Georgetown College; Name unknown—body at City Hall; Miss Boyce, daughter of Maj. Boyce, died of the wounds received. Two other bodies were discovered beneath the ruins of the cars, which have not been identified. One is believed to have been a man about fifty years of age; and, from the fragments of clothing, had apparently been respectfully dressed. The other was evidently a laboring man, poorly dressed, and of Irish origin.

Among the wounded were Hon. Wm. McClay of New York; Hon. Mr. Wheelan of Washington, D. C.; Commodore John M. Smith and S. McCorkle U. S. coast survey—seventy in all.

HUNTING A MURDERER WITH BLOODHOUNDS.—The Danville, Virginia, Register gives an account of the capture of a negro who murdered a colored girl recently, belonging to Capt. Munnally, of Caswell county, North Carolina. The dogs were taken to the place where the negro was last seen, the elder one barked and put on trail with ease, and the whole party followed in pursuit. After winding about in various directions, through plantations and woods, over hills and dales, they finally came to a halt at a pen some seven miles in a direct line from where they first set out. Here they found the monster snugly stowed away under cover. He made a faint effort to escape, but was brought to a stand by the dogs, after running some fifty yards.

DEATH OF A MAN WHO VOTED FOR PRESIDENT WASHINGTON.—Mr. Benj. Blackford died at the residence of his son, Mr. Wm. M. Blackford, in this city, Monday afternoon. He was one of the few men living who enjoyed the proud recollection of having voted for "The Father of his Country" for President, and he has also voted in every succeeding Presidential election. Mr. Blackford was a gentleman of fine intellect and very extensive information, both of which he retained to the last. He has left a name without a reproach.—Lynchburg Virginian. August 22d.

PHILADELPHIA MARKET.
FLOUR AND GRAIN.—Flour—The market continues drooping; about 1000 barrels have been disposed of mostly to the East, at $3.25 for standard superfine, and $3.00 for 75 per cent. Rye Flour and Corn Meal remain inactive at previous quotations. Grain—The receipts of Wheat continue moderate, and the demand, which is mostly for prime lots, steady at previous prices. Some 7 and 8000 bushels, principally good to prime Delaware and Jersey reds were taken at 173 and 175c., including inferior lots, which are neglected, at 15c. less, and some fair Southern white at 180c. 185c. a prime is worth 190c.; part of the purchases were to go out of the market. Rye is unsettled, and about 1500 bushels have been sold at 105c. for Delaware, and 110c. for Pennsylvania, mostly at the former rate. Corn continues in good demand, with further sales of 4 and 5000 bushels, in lots, at 98c. for Southern yellow, float, which is an advance, and 96c. for Pennsylvania, in store. Oats are better, and sales about 11,000 bushels Southern are reported at 41c. for inferior, and 42 and 42c. for good and prime Southern float.
CATTLE MARKET.—Prices, from $9 to $11 for beefs, 4c. per lb. or $2 to $4 50 per head for sheep, lambs $2 to $4, cows and calves $25 to $65. Total stock in market, 1150 cattle, 4000 sheep, 140 cows and calves. Sheep scarce and in demand at the above prices.
