Poetical.

The Airs of Autumn.

BY ALICE.

"Where art thou angel of the summer flowers?" When sighing Zephyrus, one Autumn eve, Within the silent and decaying powers—"Let me no longer o'er thine absence grieve."

"When the fair daylight shone on plain and mountain,
And Iris flung her mantle o'er the fields, I looked for thee, by every hill and fountain, And in each spot that morning incense fields.

"I have been straying by the sparkling river, Among the rushes and drooping, danced, Striving to be of living joy, the giver, Where'er the waters in the sunbeams glanced.

"And on the verdant hills, at noon, I rested, Toying amid the tendrils of the vine—
And its nectar fruit my full lips tested, Yet yearned to gaze upon thy face divine.

"Along the forest-path, when daylight faded, I for thy foot-prints sought; and o'er the heart,
Yet all in vain—although the air was faded With the sweet fragrance of the dying breath.

"Hast thou, indeed, from thy loved haunts departed?
The children of thy care—frail mortal things—Pining for thee, despairing—broken-hearted—Flung frantically to my outspreading wings.

"Return, kind angel, to thy charge! and give us A few bright days, one parting kiss bestow, Ere of the glory thou dost quite bereave us, That through the Summer circles all below."

And she has listened to his earnest pleading, She has returned, to bless with one last smile Our death-market home—and thus our spirits leading Where death, nor blight, can o'er the flowers defile.

Miscellaneous.

Premature Matrimony.

Marriage is a divine and beautiful arrangement. It was designed by Providence not solely as the means of keeping up population, or as a more social and economical convenience, but as the blending of two spirits into one—the masculine representing wisdom, and the feminine affection. When there is a true spiritual affinity between the two, then the design is accomplished.

Premature marriages are among the greatest evils of the times; and it would not be a bad idea in these days of reforms, if an Anti-marrying-in-a-hurry Society were instituted.— Now-a-days, people lead into the magic life-circle with no more consideration than they would partake of a ginney—little thinking that, when once in, they are there until their end comes. There is little, sometimes no mutual analysis of disposition, and comparison of taste and affections. They seem to fancy that, if there are any discrepancies, the fatal Gordian knot, which can be seldom cut and never untied, will harmonize all.

The numbers who have felt this truth—the numbers still feeling it to their heart's core—are incalculable. They recognize it as the great mistake of their lives. The chain is not to be torn a silken one, but a cable of iron, that tightens around them more and more, crushing out all hope and energy, substituting hate for love, and eating out with rust, the very inner life of the soul.

Boys and girls now marry to a greater extent than ever before, instead of waiting till they become full-grown and matured men and women. The young dandy, as soon as he gets out of short jackets, and finds a little jeans gathered on his upper lip—and the young miss, as soon as she emerges from the nursery and abbreviated frocks—think they are qualified to assume the most solemn responsibilities of life.
And so if "Pa" and "Ma" won't consent, they post off to some Gretna Green, and there take obligations that, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, they will never cease bitterly to repent.

Marriage should never be the result of fancy.
The ball-room and the evening party rarely develop real character. Under the exhilarating influence of the dance, the glare of lights, and the merry squib and joke, the dissolute young man may appear amiable, and the slatternly soul may appear lovable. Matches made at such places, or under similar circumstances, are not of the class that originate in heaven. They more generally are conceived in the opposite place, and bring forth only iniquity. The true way to learn each other is to do it at home, in the parlor, in the kitchen, and on occasions that test the temper. We see the result of these unions in the almost daily divorces that are taking place, in the running away of husbands, leaving their wives and children to starve and in the elopement of wives. Not only this, but we witness it in broken spirited men, made old in the prime of life, struggling on for mere food, and clothing, and shelter, and in women cross, dirty, sluggish, and wrinkled.

It would be quite impossible for us to depict faithfully the multitude of physical and moral evils that result from these alliances—for sinful they are. They ruin the body, corrupt the morals, and stultify the mind. And the result does not stop with husband and wife. There are the children. They partake of the feebleness and vices of the parents, both physical and moral, and go out into the busy world stunted and gaurled. God pity them.

We would not be understood as speaking against the institution of marriage. It is holy, beautiful, and beneficent. But let every one take his mate or none. Let not the brave eagle pair with the stupid owl, nor the gentle dove with the carrion crow. Like should have like.
It is a glorious sight to see two old people, who have weathered the storms and basked in the sunshine of life together, go hand in hand, lovingly and truthfully, down the gentle de-clivity of time, with no angers, nor jealousies, nor hatreds garnered up against each other, and looking with hope and joy to the everlasting youth of heaven, where the two shall be one forever. That is the true marriage—for it is the marriage of spirit with spirit. Their love is woven into a roof of gold, that neither time, nor death, nor eternity can sever.—The Electric.

The Climate of Kansas.

Much difference of opinion seems to exist in the accounts we receive in respect to the climate and soil of the new territory. Some emigrants return home sick and disgusted with what they have seen, while others remain and send back glowing accounts of the beauty of the land.

Rev. Mr. Nute, in a recent letter written about two miles from Lawrence, where he was living in a tent, says:

"The climate is the most salubrious ever found for the same season of the year—mornings sometimes like the beginning of one of our warmest days in the Connecticut valley; about 10 A. M., a cool breeze springs up from the north-west, and continues through the day.— We are told by those who have lived in the vicinity for some time, (Indians and others,) that there are but few days in the hot season without the relief of these cool breezes; and but few days before the middle of January so cold that a farmer would need to wear a coat when about his out door work."

Mrs. Lovjoy, wife of a Methodist missionary, located with a company at the junction of Big Blue and Kansas rivers, after describing the exceeding beauty and fertility of the country, notices the peculiar transparency of the atmosphere, a particularity that we have not before seen mentioned. She says:

"The air is so pure and clear, that objects six or eight miles distant can be as distinctly seen as those in the East at one quarter of a mile, strange as it may seem. It is hard for us to become habituated to it, and it seems a constant phenomenon to us; so healthy, too, that one can lie in the open air and realize no inconvenience from it. An instance occurs nightly in sight of our cabin. A gentleman from Maine, a graduate of Waterville, who was to all appearances in the last stages of consumption, given over by his physicians to die, as a last resource came to Kansas, has lived here through the winter, and is now so well that he labors constantly, and at night wraps a buffalo robe about him, and throws himself on the open prairie, with no covering but the canopy of heaven."

A Good Story.

A gentleman in a neighboring city in pursuit of a goose for his dinner was attracted by the sight of a plump, exercised one.

"Is that a young one?" said he to a rosy-cheeked lass in attendance.

"Yes, sir, indeed it is?"

"How much do you want for it?" asked the gentleman.

"A dollar, sir."

"That is too much, say five-eights, and here's your money."

"Well, sir, I would like to get you as a steady customer, I'll take it."

The goose was carried home and roasted, but found to be so tough as to be uneatable.

The following day, the gentleman accosted the fair poulterer:

"Did you not tell me that goose was young which I bought of you?"

"Yes, sir, I did, and it was."

"No, it was not."

"Don't you call me a young woman? I am only nineteen."

"Yes, I do."

"Well, I have heard mother say many a time, that it was nearly six weeks younger than me!"

If a girl thinks more of her heels than her head, depend upon it she will never amount to much. Brains which settle in the shoes never get above them. Young gentlemen will please put this down.

"We hate some persons because we do not know them, and we will not know them because we hate them."
