A Kansas Item.

Mr. C. H. Barlow publishes in the Chicago Tribune a statement of an outrage recently perpetrated upon him in Kansas by the Mis-He says that he emigrated to souri rullans. Lawrence in March last, but took no part in the political troubles by which the territory has convulsed, and has in all respects endeavored to demean himself as a good citizen. On the 5th of June he had occasion to go to Kansas city with oxen and wagon for a load of freight, consisting of some household goods belonging to an emigrant is his employ. On his return with the load he was obliged to pass through—Westport, and a short distance from that village he came upon a camp of sixty or seventy Missourians and Alabamians. A squad of them armed with muskets, rifles and side arms stopped him, and when he produced a pass which had been given him by U. S. Marshall Donaldson, they swore it was a forgery, and proceeded to break open the boxes in his wagon nd scatter the goods about the road. He was taken into the camp and questioned, and as he owned up that he was a Free State man, they demanded that he should shoulder his gun and march with the pro-slavery party. He rufused to do this, whereupon they put a rope around his neck and dragged him to the nearest tree. Supposing that they were about to hang him, sked a few minutes to arrange his worldly affairs, which were granted. Finding a man among them called Bledsoe, who seemed to manifest some sympathy for him, he gave him a schedule of his property, and asked him to send it to his brother in law at the East. He was again dragged to the tree, and in spite of remonstrances of Bledsoe and of a Major Treadwell, he was hung by the neck with a rope to a swinging limb. In a brief period, however, he was let down by the peremptory order of Treadwell and again asked whether he would leave the Territory if they would spare his life. He demurred, saying that he had offended no law and infringed no man's right. The leader again interposed and told him that unless he would promise he could not save him. In this strait he promised, and was given just twelve hours to make his promise good. He was sent with a guard to Kansas City to see that he did not escape. His oxen and wagon were taken in possession of, and he, with only five dollars in his pocket, was forced to take the first boat and leave the country. He says in conclusion, that every man of his opinions who falls into the same hands is liable to the same abuse.

NOVEL DEER HUNTING .-- Herr Driesbach, whose mammoth show will visit Milwaukee on the 16th of next month, while traveling in Indiana, near La Porte, about a week since, observed, a short distance from the road. under the shade of a cluster of trees, a fine fat buck, whose dainty form was sufficient to whet the appetite of the most passe gotamand that ever played freaks with an inordinate appetite. Now, at the present season, there is a law prohibiting the shooting of deer, so the Herri who is said to be "some" with the rifle, had to abandon the idea of bringing him down by that method. A lucky thought glanced across the imagination of the great lion king; his pet leopard was at hand, and he could easily convert him into a lion's provider, but a provider 1855. for the lion's master. Unbarring the cage in which his dangerous net was confined, he pointed to the unconscious tenant of the forest. who was calmly browsing upon the green herbage. not dreaming of the proximity of his dangerous foe. In a minute afterwards the beautiful but treacherous animal was stealthily creeping towards his prey; who, failing to detect the faint. est noise, so cat like was the approach, was first made conscious of his hapless fate by feel. ing the fangs of the lcopard after the fatal spring. Herr Driesbach was almost immediately upon the spot, and with his hunting knife soon completed the work so successfully commenced by his spotted companion .- Chicago Times, Saturday.
