of any kind.

Not long since a man, who proved to be Captain John Brown, of Onswattonic, Kansas, arrived in Washington County, Maryland, and renting a farm their, near the grand natural scene where the Potomac passes the Blue Ridge, ostensibly settled down to cultivate the earth. Nothing was thought of this, because it has do the county and till land in Virginia with a view of raising crops for the markets of Philadelphia, New York, and Boston. Subsequently there arrived a man, notorious as connected with the abduction of slaves through Ohio.

Brown was accompanied by his sons, and there seems also to have gradually assembled around him other white men, either from Kanand roofs of houses, and the sheds in the vici him, so far as we can judge by his subsequent act, bold, violent, unscrupulous, reckless and turbulent. Not content with the peace which has been established in Kansas, he attempted a desperate raid upon the Missouri border, and it is wonderful that he escaped death. Revenge upon the southerners seems to have taken complete possession of Brown. As he could not free the slaves in Missouri, which he tried. he hit upon this last scheme of freeing the slaves in Maryland and Virginia.

freak of a man whose wits had been crazed by his domestic calamities. And yet he seems to have found followers as reckess as himself; how many is still uncertain. to arm all the slaves who might rise. To prepare for a rising. Brown and his associates organized a secret conspiracy among the ne grees, and about two thousand were expected

Everything must have been carefully arrange ed, for on Sunday night a band of insurgents was collected together, and before daybreak, had moved so silently and expeditiously that the whole town was in their possession; and especially they had seized the government armory, areenal, and pay office, in which it is stated there was a large sum of money deposited. 12. M. There must have been at least fit and roofs of houses, and the sheds in the vicinity were alive with human beings, many paying to the government at Washington that trouble was brewing at Harper's Ferry. No attention was paid to it. An agent of the conspirators appears to have been in Baltimore and bought great quantities of percussion cape, and, perhaps, other military amunition. Brown's haps, other military amunition. Brown's auch as is seldom seen together in any place arm seven as a secure rendezvous, and there. haps, other military amunition. Brown's farm served as a secure rendezvous, and there, it would seem, blacks and whites assembled cautiously and planned that dreadful thing, a murderer, drawn there out of curiosity. Missembled factoriously and planned that dreadful thing, a Bartlett had six bridesmaides, two in white two in blue, and two in red. Upon her per everything else in the same proportion. I was dressed in a rich suit of black. Not ha ing a seat where I could see the entire ceren ny. I will leave that for some other pen describe. I was very much disappoint

the appearance of both of them. He is about sixty years of age, a little, dried up, wrinklylooking man, not over five feet high, with dark skin, a negro countenance and frizzly head; in fact I should put him down as at least three fourths negro. His being of Spanish birth ac counts for this. I am told by a reliable source On the that he is so illiterate that he can hardly write his own name but he has money—that covers a multitude of faults. Miss Bartlett is only about twenty years of age-a difference of only though twenty or thirty would probably be neck, with blue eyes, and is far from being the largest number of whites concerned in the what she has been represented, as great beauforty years—is alim built, thin face and spare neck, with blue eyes, and is far from being what she has been represented, as great beautoutbreak. So far as we can make it out, the plan was to seize the town of Harper's Ferry and the Government armory and arsenal, and hold them as a fortification; to which the slaves hold them as a fortification; to which the slaves and hold them as a fortification; to which the slaves as a fortification; to which the slaves and that she speaks. The news, however, was taken to Baltimore by a train which they allowed to go through in order to carry the warning not to send any more cars.

At first the intelligence of this rising was discredited, but, as soon as it was ascertained to be trae, the Administration at Washington took prompt measures to send troops to sup press the disturbance.
