LYONS' PURE GATAWBA BRANDY.
HAYING received the agency for the sale of this Brandy in this section, we confidently offer it to the public as a pure and unadulterated article, as the following certificate will prove:

Certificates of Analysis of the Brandy, as analyzed by the Chemist, Inspector's Office, Allentown, Pa., March 18, 1860.

This will certify that I have this day inspected two separate lots of GATAWBA Brandy, one in Bottles and one in Barrels, manufactured by LAURENCE LYONS, and sold by his Sole Agent, J. Jacob, at 148 West Third street, Allentown, Pa., and find them both pure and free from all poisonous deleterious ingredients, and as such have confidence in the quality of the same. Given under my hand at this office.

THE OHIO CATAWBA BRANDY is equally pure and of the best quality. It is therefore fully entitled to the patronage of the public. It is the only one of the kind in this State which is so valuable as that which it has met with in the West, and is a superior article to any other of the kind. It is a beverage which will be found equal to any other of the kind.

It is a sovereign and sure remedy for Dyspepsia, Flatulency, Low Spirits, Indigestion, General Debility, &c.

These Wines are made in the neighborhood of Cincinnati, and are generally called "the wine of the grape," and are eminently calculated for invalids, and persons who require a gentle stimulant, or a beverage which will be found equal to any other of the kind.

Retail price for Brandy, $1.25 per quart. Bottle. A liberal discount made to the trade.

IF WE KNEW.

If we knew the euras and crosses
Crowning round our neighbor's way,
If we knew the little losses,
Sorely grieved, day by day,
Would we then so often sigh
For his loss of shirt and gaiter—
Loving on his heart a shadow,
Leaving on our lives a stain?

If we knew the clouds above us,
Held by gentle blessings there,
Would we turn away all trembling,
Lying on the dewy grass,
While 'tis only birds of Eden,
Just in mercy crying past?

If we knew the silent story,
Quivering through the heart of pain,
Would our womanhood deem them
Back to haunts of guilt again?
Life has many a heart-craving;
Joy has many a break of woe:
As the cheeks, tear-washed are whitened,
This blessed angel know.

STEPHEN GIRARD,
THE MONEY-MAKER.

About the year seven hundred and fifty, in the environs of Bordeaux, in France, there lived an old sea captain, named Girard, who had three children—two boys and one girl.

They had already grown to manhood, and were engaged in various occupations. The eldest son, a young man of name, had just returned from a voyage to the West Indies, and was bringing home with him a large sum of money.

in appearance, that he was known as "Old Girard." His business could not have been very prosperous at this period, considering the disturbed and depressed state of the country.

He was quietly biding his time, and his store was well filled with old blocks, shills, pieces of corrago, and other materials useful for ship-building.

In 1780, Stephen Girard again commenced his business in New Orleans and St. Domingo. In two years he had progressed so far as to be able to purchase a ten years' lease, with renewal, of a range of brick and frame stores, one of which he occupied himself.

The rents were low at the time, and the purchase very advantageous—perhaps the turning point in his fortune.

In 1780 his wife, Mary Girard, from whom he had been divorced, was admitted an inmate into the Pennsylvania Hospital. Here she remained shut up twenty years and one month, while her husband was busily pursuing his one object in the world; at last she died in the year 1816.

On being told of her death, Stephen Girard selected her burial place, and requested that he should be called as soon as she should be buried, and that he should be present at her funeral.

He was present at her funeral, and was deeply affected by the sight of her remains. He was present at her funeral, and was deeply affected by the sight of her remains.

chair, remarkable for its age, and marked with the initials "S. G." drawn by a faded horse, was used when he rode about the city. He had no sense of hospitality, no friend to share his house or his table. He was forgetful in appearance, to make and family violent and passionate—only to one man old and faithful clerk named Robergot. His theological opinions were heterodox in the extreme, and he loved to praise his splendid vessels after Voltari and Rousseau. He was devoted to the improvement of his adopted city and country; he was a determined follower of ostentatious charity.

No man ever applied to him for a large public grant in vain, while he was a miserly beggar, and was invariably sent from his gate. He was steadily rising every morning before the dawn, and unceasingly laboring, was the daily habit of his life.

Thus he attained his eighty-second year. In 1830, he had nearly lost the sight of his eyes, and used to be seen groping about his Bank, disregarding every object around him. Crossing one day, by a passing wagon, he was knocked down by a passing wagon, he was knocked down by a passing wagon, he was knocked down by a passing wagon.

He gradually wasted away, and his health declined. On the twenty-sixth of December, Stephen Girard expired in a back room on the third floor of his house in Philadelphia, leaving behind him a fortune of a million sterling—to found charities and to benefit the city and country in which he had acquired it.

He left his monument in the "Girard College"—that marble roofed palace for the education and protection of the orphan children of the poor, which stands, the most perfect model of architecture in the New World, high above the buildings of Philadelphia, visible from every eminence of the surrounding country. Every detail of the external arrangement of this Orphan College was set forth clearly and carefully in his will; showing that the design upon which he had lavished the mass of his wealth was not a hastily developed fancy of a few hours or days, but was the heart-cherished subject of his whole life.
