The Death Warrant.

Authory Martel was as brave a young soldier as ever bore arms on the battlefield. He was an almost universal favorite in his regiment. He loved his country and a maiden named Cadeline, who was consider the prisoner.

There was not a brave soldier in the whole regiment but would have been proud to have shed his last drop of blood to resent an insult to the bright star of Viselle. Many were they who worshipped at her shrine, but only one received any return to his passion, and he was the gallant Anthony Martel.

On several occasions he had made infamous proposals to Cadeline which she had resented with scorn, but still he became more importunate, until finding himself baffled in all his endcavors, he determined to adopt a new mode of procedure, hoping to be more successful in his designs. Accordingly he called on Cadeline one evenng when she was alone, and made an apology for his former rudeness, and asked her forgiveness, which she readily granted, presuming that he would trouble her no further; but in this she was disappointed, for he immediately made new overtures of love to her, promising if she would listen to his suit, he would load her with presents, and
