Miscellaneous.

A Story about Little Mary. BY AUNT ELLA.

Chapter I. "Children obey your parents in all things, for this well pleasing unto the Lord."—Colos. 11th Chap. In one of the northern counties of the State of Maine, lived little Mary Warren, the subject of our tale. The town where she lived is called Dover. You will find it by looking on your map of the Eastern States. It is on a small iver that empties into the Penobscot, one of the largest rivers of Maine. I hope my young eaders will note all the objects and places named, as we proceed, and find them on their You will perceive that not very far north of Dover there are numerous lakes, and among little farther north Mt. Katadin, 5,000 feet high, the highest mountain in the State. These surroundings serve to diversify a scene not over attractive in this high latitude, for my readers will perceive that it is five degrees colder than the southern part of Pennsylvania. There winters are long and intensely cold; yet, mitigated in some degree, by dense forest and great ex-tent of sea coast. But the town where Mary lived is far distant from the ocean and receive no benefit from that source. True, they enjoy their sleigh-rides and skating parties for some months in winter, which serves to enliven and dispel the gloominess of that season. But in Mary's home were in-door amusements, better suited to her age, and for one that had never enjoyed robust health. She had a little play room fitted up for her, opening into a large hall, where she took her daily gymnastic exercises.— In this she had a little book case, filled with nicely bound books. These she delighted t read, as they were mostly presents from her fa-ther, and were well selected, not exclusively for her amusement, but instruction and improve ment. And during the long winter evenings it was the practice of her papa to draw from her what she had read through the day and to ex plain what she could not comprehend. She had also a cabinet of curiosities; fo Mary's father had been a sea captain, and as he had sailed to many distant parts of the world, he had collected many curious specimens from the animal, vegetable, and mineral kingdoms.— These he had presented to his little daugh ter that she might study their nature and prop-Mary's mamma had also contributed, by giv-ing her each year a birth day present. At one time she gave her a large doll; at another a handsome little tea-set with a table and all its

But there are not many parents that have the means to procure so many nice things for their children. (But they ought to love, honor and obey them just as little Mary did notwithstanding.)
I am writing this story, children, to show yo how kind and indulgent most parents would be if they only had the means. But many have to labor hard to procure the necessary things to make their children comfortable, and cannot afford to lay out money for dolls, doll-houses, and toa-sets. Mary's father, after having braved the dan gers of the sea for several years, had succeed-ed in making himself very wealthy, richer than he ever expected to be; (for but few succeed after all their toils and hardships) although he intended, if his life should be spared, to have a competence before he settled down in his native Mr. W. was what we do not often find among sea-faring men; he was a christian, and as such he set a truly pions example before his crew.— And the Lord prospered him and loaded him with riches, that he might contribute to the wants and necessities of others. Some men cannot bear to be made suddenly rich. It would prove their ruin, and, perhaps, that of their families. Not so with Mr. Warren; he was as plain and humble and condescending as though he did not possess a dollar. And he never indulged his little girl in anything that would make her vain, or proud, or foolish, although she was his only child, and almost the idol of his heart. He taught her too the strict-est obedience, and she had no thought of being self-willed, stubborn, or saucy. And when she met with children of that description, she thought them exceedingly naughty.

At one time she paid a visit to her aunt's, in company with her papa. When she returned she said to her mother, "I don't want to go to Aunt M——'s any more. Cousin Willy and Emma are so very naughty. Their papa and mamma, tells them to do things, and they sometimes say they will not do it. I think though Aunty should punish them, and teach them better. She does not talk to them as papa would, or I think they would be ashamed to do so any more."

In my next chapter I will tell you some more interesting things about little Mary. The following report of matters in the moral market has been made. We hope it is not correct:

Honor-Scarce. Old stock exhausted, and he new will be a complete failure.

Virtue—Old growth nearly consumed. Young growth—prospects very unpromising.
Honesty—None in market.
Patriotism—First quality scarce; none to be disposed of. Second quality easily bought on speculation at 100 per cent, discount. Prudence-All in the hands of old stock

Modesty-Stock badly damaged. None for Vice-market overstocked. Pride-market glutted. Politeness-Cheap. Holders unwilling to ispose of stock at present rates. Scandal—None at wholesale. chiefly by hawkers and peddlers at retail.

Religion—None genuine on hand. Stock generally adulterated. Very few investments.

Love—None offered—except for green backs.
Talent—Scarce article. Sold exclusively

To Folks Who Quarrel.

"The chest of drawers will stand beautifully under the window," said Tom Lavery. "Under the window!" repeated his wife, as pretty a little woman as you'd see in a day's walk, but with a cruel tongue that would give nineteen to the dozen any day, and not think it a trouble. "Under the window!" she said again, with a scornful curl on her lip; "it shall never go under the window while I have breath in my had." No. it shall stand foregaret the window. body. No; it shall stand foreneast the window, where it will be seen and admired. Under the window, indeed! I wonder you don't say the chimney!" "It shall go under the window, Moyna Lavery; it's too aisy-going I have been with you intirely. You are never satisfied, full or fasting, and think all the world must counter to you. It shall go under satisfied, full or fasting, and think all the world must courtesy to you. It shall go under the window, and you'd better not dare hinder it." "It never shall," said Moyna, "I'll pitch the window into the street first." "And I pitch ye after it for company," said Tom. On this Moyna raised a "wirristhrue" that you'd hear from this to Bantry, and Tom's loud voice had more noise than sense in it, and Tom took the stick to his wife, and she screened murder. stick to his wife, and she screamed murder, and at the lucky minute the door opened, and there, sure enough, stood Father Barry, and as became a holy and good man, he asked them what they were at and what they were after, and as Moyna had the nimblest tongue, she said ther husband was that Omathawn that he would have the chest of drawers under the window, which she would never give into, never! she'd lay her bones in the green churchyard first!" "But where's the chest of drawers?"

of drawers?" said one. "Is it the chest of drawers?" said the other; "oh, sorra a chest of drawers we have at all-yet."

said Father Barry—and may be the fool's look didn't come over both their faces. "The chest

A Young lady's Reasons for not Dancing, 1. Dancing would lead me into crowded rooms at late hours, which are injurious to health and usefulness.

2. Dancing would lead me into close contact with very promiscuous company, and acvil communications corrupt good manners 3. Dancing would require me to use and permit freedom with the other sex, which I beieve to be wrong. 4. My parents and friends would be anxious about me if I were out late, keeping company 5. Ministers and good people in general disapprove of dancing, and I think it is not ease to set myself against them; if a thing be even doubtful, I wish to be on the safe side. 6. Duncing has a bad name, and I mean to study things that are pure, lovely, and of good report.

7. Dancing is generally accompanied with drinking, and I see drinking produces a great deal of evil. 8. I am told dancing is a temptation to young men, and I do not wish to have anything to do with leading them astray.

9. Dancing units the mind for serious re flection and prayer, and I mean to do nothing that will estrange me from my God and Savior. 10. There are plenty of graceful exercises and cheerful amusements, which have none of the objections connected with them that lie against dancing. DIFFERENCE IN "CONQUESTS."-A New York correspondent of the Albany Argus relates that a handsome orphan work-girl had been, for some time courted by a journeyman hatter. one day, she pressed him to marry, as she had received disrespectful proposals from a rich law-

"There is my hand," said she, "marry me di The lover, highly indignant at the attorney, was too glad to obey the direction. The mar-riage took place at the residence of the bride. The evening before the wedding, however, the bridegroom told Mary Elizabeth that he had a secret to tell. He was not a journeymun hatter, but one of the richest men in the city of Boston, and said he would take her, the next day, to the beautiful country scat in the suburbs of the modern Athens, which he had inherited from his father and mother, for he, indeed, was an orphan, like his bride, his Mary Elizabeth.— He had seen her at Barnum's Museum, and re-solved to make her his own when convinced of her worthiness. AMALGAMATION IN THE SOUTH .-- No, I want to say one word in regard to social equality be-tween the races—amalgamation. I want to state a fact that is attested by all the statistics, y the census and by the whole social history of this country, that in the States where the negro has been protected in his property and his rights, where the marriage relation is protected, hat amalgamation is almost entirely unknown.

Go to the State of Massachusetts, represented by the distinguished gentlemen on the stand, where the negro for forty years has voted and enjoyed every right, and you will find that amalgamation is almost entirely unknown.

If you want to find amalgamation, go to the Slave States, where the negro has been deprived of his rights. Go down there, and a million of mulattoes will testify to amalgamation.

In the North it is not known; there is no anger of it, and the danger passes away precisely as you educate the negro.

It is where you degrade him, and where you destroy the marriage relation, that union has taken place between the two races, and that is Wondens!-When a young man is a clerk in a store and dresses like a prince, smokes "foine cigar," drinks "noice brandy," attends theaters, dances and the like, I wonder if he does all on the avails of his clerkship? When a young lady sits in the parlor during the day, with her lily white fingers covered with rings, I wonder if her mother doesn't wash the dishes, and do the work in the kitchen? When the deacon of the church sells strong butter, recommending it as a good article, wonder what he relies upon for salvation?

GEN. LOGAN ON COPPEBHEADS .- The following is an interrogatory put by a Copperhead to Gen. Logan during one of his speeches in Indians, and the answer : Cop .- "A few years ago, when you was a Democrat, the Republicans called you 'Dirty Work Logan; are you doing the dirty work for the Republican party now?"

Gen. Logan.—Yes, sir; I am ekinning Cop-perheads, and it is the dirtiest work I ever did: but it's got to be done."
