Therefore I deem it proper to make the following facts known. 1st. The dam at the water works has a height of six feet, and is about 4800 feet remote from the blow the dam at the water works and ought therefore to have a fail of about 2 feet. 2d. The mills near my place have over two feet more power than the water works. This shows plandly that the river between my dam and the water works, does not have less fail than it has above the latter's dam.

Another very clear, and and also conclusive fact is—that at the water works, the distance be-tween the date, water and the head water is fully as much as the power claimed, amounts to. But many ask, how is it that so much slack water is under the wheels at present? The answer is. Herause at this season the river is wollen, and the water below cannot flow off faster than it comes from alove, therefore, if there is much water above, the same quantity must be below.
