MARK TWAIN having been engaged to conduct a new department in The Galaxy, with the first "copy" for the May number, sends the following characteristic letter to the Editor:

Mr. F. P. Church, Editor of The Galaxy, Buffalo, April 2, 1870. Dear Sir: My own paper, the Buffalo Express, does not occupy my entire time, and therefore I accept your offer, and from the present time forward I will contribute to you a "Department of Agriculture" in The Galaxy Magazine.

I have not made this choice at hazard. After careful survey of the ground, I saw that the subject of Agriculture had been wholly overlooked by the magazine, and that all that was necessary for us to do was to get in and seize this opportunity. Fortune is seldom so kind.

Without getting into the subject of Agriculture (without getting into the subject of Agriculture) I will insert a paragraph here and there, and when I have a chance I will send you a full article upon a subject which I think will be of interest to your readers.

As I have no practical knowledge of Agriculture, I will not send you any of those articles which are written by men who have never seen a plow, and who know nothing of the soil, and who know nothing of the weather, and who know nothing of the farmer.
