THE SABBATH SCHOOL WORK. The monster meeting of the friends and workers of the Sabbath School cause, which has just dispersed, has shown the increased amount of interest taken in this work in the State of Pennsylvania. Sabbath School workers from all parts of the State were pres ent. From the large and wealthy city school and from the humble little village school house, representatives, animated by the same love for the little ones, came to gather that fresh courage and inspiration for the prosecution of their work which the sight of each others faces and the utterance of inspectawords, from the speakers among them, is sure to inspire. No man or woman could be present in that vast assembly and not feel the greatness of the cause to which they and their friends were devoted, and be animated by a new zeal as they received ocular demonstra tion of the magnitude of the army of which they formed a part. It cannot be that too much stress will be laid on the importance of this meeting, for it will be felt in every part of the State. A greater devotion of the teacher in the Sabbath School to his work, and, as a natural result a larger, growth in Christian knowledge among the children of this State will be the result. They will be better fitted for the home circle, better fitted for the studies of the common school and better prepared for the more active duties of life which will shortly be theirs, by the kindly voluntary services of the Sabbath School teachers. Every parent who has a real love for his or her children, ought to realize and usefulness. In consideration of these things, we desire to bring this subject prominently before the people of our county. We do not consider that in doing so, we shall be encroaching on the peculiar province of the religious press. A subject that bears with such pressing force on the well being of the whole ation, ought to be taken hold of, fostered and encouraged by the whole power of a press, which elects to be the great guardian of the people. The nearer we bring our children to the perfection of Christian excellence, the more indelibly we impress on their young minds the love of truth, honesty and true manliness, the greater surety we have of the great mission of the American Nation being carried triumphantly forward by our immediate posterity, ' So, therefore, it becomes the duty of all those who love the young, of all those who love their country, to join in this work with heartiness, and to strengthen the hands of those who are bearing the burden and heat of the day.

in the House, it must be confessed that Gen. Banks made altogether the most brilliant figstriking. His denunciation of the wrongs done American citizens, and of the failure of the Government to protect them, was pungent, and too well-deserved. His comparison of the dangers besetting American non-combatants in Cuba with the security of British citizens, similarly situated, called out applause from the galleries, but might better have business is to rush and scrape and hurry to get brought blushes to the cheeks of those who rich, wearying, wearing and harrying himlove the good name of our country. With something better than children's noisy fire crackers let us commemorate the fourth. Let all our local societies and City authorities conspire to fitly celebrate the day. The most zealous advocates of economy admit that there is a time not far distant when all the improvements desired must be effected, but they want to wait till this thing and the and let us have appropriate speeches from our public men, recalling to the people's minds the greatness that has passed awny and the enduring monuments it has left behind. other thing "gets off our hands" before they "improve." more to the fact of the present expenditure Ir is pleasant to know, however, that the debt is in process of diminution. It is a question now whether Congress ought to re-duce taxation so as to provide only enough But they have used their caution lately not wisely but too well. In one instance at least they have delayed an investment that would be a paying one and doubtfully hesitate about revenue as may meet the current expenses a proposition that is certainly worth acceptthe Government and pay the accruing interes on the public debt, but none of the principal of it, or to allow things to remain as they are, and hand over to our seventeen year old boys, in 1884, when they shall have attained lawful age, a nation free of debt and with inexhaustible resources. What reason exists for the longer that does not equally demand the shorter term? Will our credit be better under the scheme that pays the debt in fourteen than it would be under one that would extinguish it in fifty? And as to the effect on the prosperity and development of the country it self, what is in taxation laid on to the very verge of endurance that it should be persisted in? With each year the tax bearing and debt paying capacity of the nation increases, and with time and development the rate of taxation diminishes. With our caof the payement, compared with our streets under the present system. Taxation in the city is high, but not so high as to frighten us from enterprise in making it a more acceptable place for investment and for residence, when such enterprise is compatible with pradence and economy.

THE DIGNITY OF LABOR.

A New Orleans jury, unable to arrive at unanimity in their opinions, is said to have substituted chance for justice. The case was Clay agt Blandin, for the office of State Tax Clolectorship of the Third District. Eleven of them favored Blandin, one of the 11, a colored citizen, declaring that he would sit there till the hair turned white before he would find Clay. But Clay's sole supporter was equally immovable. At length it was conceded by the latter that a game of 'Seven's substrained for several years. one of those things that it will pay to invest would find tay. But thy s so, support was equally immovable. At length it was conceded by the latter that a game of "seven-up" between him and a Bhandin man, if it went against the Blandin man should secure 3 more votes for Clay; but if he—the Clay man—lost it, he would yield his opinion to that of the start. It is a remark often made and, unfortunate ly, with considerable truth, that the great all-pervading idea of the American man of Cards were sent for, the game wa catched with intense interest, and when it was announced that the Blandin 11 won, a yell of triumph went up from their juridicial throats that shook the court-house and aston-ished the waiting court.

OF REAL ARREST SERVICES.

VAN BUREN, ARK., June 10th, 1870. Shortly after mailing my last, an affair occurre n front of the Planters House, which reflected very little credit upon the principal actors. McDonald, one of the party, during the late trial of the seizure of Major Boudinot's tobacco factory had occasion to call the latter a liar, which he (Boudinot) regarded as an insult, and resolved to resent it as soon as a favorable opportunity presented itself. After the adjournment of court, and while the General was engaged in conversation with Gen. Thomason, Boudinot walked up and struck him in the face. After a great deal of fancy blackguarding Mae "went for" Boudy, threw him on the pavement, and pounded him until bystanders interfered. A city policeman was soon on the spot and attempted to arrest both parties, but they wouldn't arrest worth a cent, and in a few minutes after the occurrence the General, accompanled by Col. Joyce, Judge Caldwell and others, started for Fort Smith. Ah the prisoners (excepting Col. Coolbaugh, who was too ill to be removed) who were sentenced to imprisonment in the penitentiary at Little Rock, were taken to their new quarters last week. They were all chained together, and upon the arrival of the steamer Fort Smith they were placed aboard, and we were soon floating down the Arkansas. The river was lower than it had been for a number of years, and as it was still falling we expected a rough trip, and were not disappointed in our anticipations. The numerons snags in the river render it one of the most dangerous navigable streams in the United States, and the many steamboat wrecks which we passed on our downward trip proved such to be the case.

After proceeding about ten miles, our boat before she could be got off. The second and third nights we spent on sand bars, the boat striking them after sunset, and owing to the darkness of the night, we were compelled to remain until the appearance of dawn, before any attempt could be made to get her off. Our prisoners were jovial, and enjoyed themselves playing cuchre and seven up. Of the seven whites that composed part of the number all, excepting a former Confederate scout from Texas, were from the North. One, George Bancroft, from Schuylkill county, Pa., expressed a desire to hear from his friends, but said he did not wish them to know that he is now a convict. California Joe, of whom I made mention before, will probably be released upon appli cation of Gen. Sheridan. He has rendered incal-culable frontier service, and would still be at liberty to roam over the plains, had it not been for a brutal officer who arrested him near Camp Supply for alleged violation of the Intercourse law. This same officer ordered his men to fire upon a number of prisoners who were under his chare, killing several, alleging that they had attempted to escape. This is a matter which requires investigation, and if any of the soldiers are guilty of murder let them be punished. Arriving at Little Rock four days after leaving Van Buren, we disembarked, and after delivering our prisoners into the custody of the penitentiary
