In an hour's time the provoking bit of iron availed itself of that liberty, but for some minutes Dr. Radford declined to stir. SECULAR LECTURES ON SUNDAY.—There is deep significance in the following extract be worked by shifting weights from one side from a Boston letter, and the subject of which it treats deserves more than a passing notice. Are not six days in the week enough for the delivery of secular lectures? "Altogether the most notable event in the Boston lecture field is the successful establishment of secular Sunday evening lectures, with hardly a whisper of dissent from either the orthodox press or the pulpit. It shows how the faith as it was delivered to the fathers has gradually lost ground in Boston, if not in New-England generally. Not only has Miss Kate Field appeared at the Globe Theatre, but a regular course has been established at the Boston Theatre, opening with two lectures in succession by General Kilpatrick, followed by Mr. George William Curtis, on "Charles Dickens," and to be further continued by Nasby -thus giving up the last vestige of Sabbath sobriety. There is nothing either in the before they cease to be goat men. node of conducting these lectures or in the ectures themselves, to show that the evening is not that of a week-day, though the audiences show, as yet, a slight timidity about applause. It is reported that a formidable movement is to be made against this innovation, the Young Men's Christian Association, it is said, purposing to unite the pulpits against the movement; but as large matters move slowly it is unlikely that this opposition will have any practical result, except, indeed, to a fresh and perhaps fierce agitation of the whole Sunday question. But the fact that the matter has gone so far without any opposi

SENATOR CAMERON ON FREE TRADE. ator Cameron, in a recent letter says of free

If my mind were yet open to controversy If my mind were yet open to controvery as to the policy of free trade or protection for our nation, I think events now passing in Europe would decide the question for me. France yielding to the very advice which England is so lavish of to us, is a pittable example of even comparative free trade. Her resources melt before the hostile encounter of a people in Cocion in numbers, not braver, and without before the hostile encounter of a people in ferior in numbers, not braver, and without the exalted military fame of the French peo-ple. But her weakness bears no comparison to the absolute prostration of the British mili-tary. The exhibition of England's weakness is amazing! She stands as the laughing stock of the great powers of Europe. Free trade has brought her down to the dust. She was your own shoulders. I am a poor man working hard for my living, but no one ever knew me neglect a patient because he could not pay me. Two thirds of my work is done for nothing, or next to nothing, and those who can afford it ought to take some share of the burden, more especially you, the lord of the manor, under whose protection the whole poor are placed by Providence. Thackeray as a Procrastinator.

Mr. Fields, in his recollections of Thackeray thus speaks of the author's habits of procras tination . "As he wrote from month to month. and liked to put off the inevitable chapters till the last moment, he was often in great tribulation. I happened to be one of a large company whom he had invited to a 5 o'clock dinner at Greenwich, one Summer afternoon, several years ago. We were all to go down from London, assemble in a particular room in the hotel, where he was to meet us sharp at into his econsulting room and lighting the steamer and gathered ourselves together in the reception-room at the appointed time. When the clock struck six our host had not figure was yet waiting among the company assembled. As the guests were nearly all strangers to each other, and as there was no one present to introduce us, a profound silence fell upon the room, and we anxiously looked out of the windows, hoping every moment that Thackeray would arrive. This untoward state of things went on for one hour, still no Thackeray and no dinner. English reticence would not allow any remark as to the absence of our host. Everybody felt serious and a great gloom fell upon the assembled party. Still no Thackeray. The landlord, the butler, and the waiters rushed in and out the room, shricking for the master of the feast, who as vet had not arrived.
