THE MARCH SESSIONS OF CON-GRESS.

Considerable time has been spent in the House of Representatives at Washington this week in discussing an amendment to the Deficiency Appropriation bill providing for the abolition of the March sessions of Congress. The Senate adopted this amendment, and it was finally adopted by the House by a majority of one. It was supported in the House by a few Republicans and by the Democrats, but the vote adopting the amendment is likely to be reconsidered and reversed as it has developed into a political question. A Washington dispatch says that the unanimous action of the Democrats is occasioned by the hope they entertain that they will succeed in electing the next President. If they carry the Presidential election in 1872, it is clearly for their interest that the next Congress-in which the Republicans will surely have a majority in one House, and probably in both-should not be able to convene until December, 1873, instead of meeting in March, to act as a check upon the new Administration. The Democrats do not mean, if they elect a President, to have him tied up by the Republican majority in Congress as Andrew Johnson was, and they have set about preventing such a misfortune in good time. They say that if their AN Alabama editor takes the pains to write President can have nine months to manage to the New York Tribune that the Ku Klux affairs, without the interference of Conbands of men which have inaugurated a com gress, he will be strong enough to manage plete reign of terror in Alabama and elsewhere Congress afterward, and so they want are composed of negroes. We advise every young man who wants to make headway in the world to buy this volume, read it carefully and thoughtfully and practice its precepts. He will find a deal of good advice in it, advice too which is worth following, because it is practical and not simply theoritical. Here, for instance, is a passage which deserves to be framed and hung up in the counting room or office of every hard working and honest business man in the land ; "Much has been said about the pleasures of a good conscience ; and among these I reckon the act of that man who, having weakly lent certain moneys to a casual acquaintance, was in the end called upon to advance a sum which transcended his honest means, with a dark hint that, if the and predict it will certainly be well to try it, for the casual acquaintance to do-that is, to money was refused, there was but one thing commit suicide. Indeed, a courageous merchant must ever be ready to face the fac that he will be called a curmudgeon, if he will not ruin himself to please others, and a weak man if he does.
