This appointment I decline to accept. In order that my motives for so doing may be clearly understood, I will state that when those who administer this Government, readout the district. I will state that when those who administer this Government readopt the original intention of prosecuting this war for the restoration of the Union, I, together with hundreds of officers and thousands of men—at present out of service—will be found ready and willing to return. CENTRALIZATION OF POWER. The speech of Gen. McCandless on Friday evening must have surprised every candid minded man who heard it. He told his hearers, about half of whom were Republicans, that he had not come to make a speech at that time and that he did not intend to make a speech, - and yet it behooved him to address some very timely advice to "Radical Republicans," and caution them against the imminent danger of the political power of this country becoming centralized in one person or one set of persons, who would then use such power to suppress the liberties of the people, and trample under foot the sacred rights guaranteed to us by the Constitution as t was before the Rebellion. He told them cession, and then pointed to the tyrannical dwelt on the flagrant violation of our rights by means of the Registry Law of this Stateduring which time he declared no less than five or six times that he did not intend to make a speech and had no speech to make at that time, but finally said he would give his reasons at the Democratic County Meeting Saturday at Catasauqua why he is a Democrat.

Out of the chaos of opinions and theories relating to the explosion of the Westfield, we are tolerably well established: 1. There was not been kept in working order. 3. The pressure of steam must have been sudden and enormous. 4. There was a weak point in the boiler. Other minor correlative points have been heretofore brought out, but these are es-

Inspector Matthews, who examined the boiler of the Westfield on the 12th of June last, testifies that he found then no flaw nor Mrs. Edward Wharton would have proposed weakness in it; but opposed to that we have the eloquent testimony of a portion of the exinequality of expansion and contraction must have operated longitudinally on the flues themselves—which lie lengthwise in the boiler—
