evening week they went out visiting and left Mis-Catharine Frederick, Mrs. Ruhe's sister, in charge of the house with the baby. About quarter past seven a knock was heard at the front door and Miss Frederick responded, but before opening the door asked "Is that you, Jane ?" Receiving an affirmative answer she opened the door, when a man stepped quickly inside, shut the door and grabbed the wrists of the young lady. He then struck her, she thinks, but she escaped to the sitting room. He gave chase and in trying to get away from him she fell, striking the back of her head on the stove. He then administered chloroform and when she became unconscious went up stairs to rausack the house. While he was hunting for valuables Miss Frederick recovered consciousness and ran out of the house, giving the alarm and the burglar becoming frightened decamped without having secured anything valuable.
Mr. Ruhe was soon called home and upon going up stairs found the light in the back room turned un bright and the letters and other articles which had been in the stand drawer scattered around on the floor. The burglar had not been in the front, as the jewelry there was safe. Miss Frederick and brother, who reside at Harvey's Lake, were on a visit to Mr. Ruhe. Miss Frederick was too much frightened to give a full description of the man's ppearance, but she says he had on a straw ha and wore his beard long. A man answering that description called at Nonnermacher & Smith's cigar store previous to this affair and inquired if ie could get into Walnut street, between Ninth and Tenth, by proceeding up Hamilton street.
