THE RIVAL SISTERS.

CHAPTER I.

A BEAUTIFUL BUT DANGEROUS HEROINE. Miss Cranston, a very accomplished woman, Miss Cranston, a very accomplished woman, kept a femule school near Blanton, a quiet town in New Jersey. This place had been selected by Mṛs. Blake, the mother of one of the Rival isters, as her home, on account of the reputation of the school. Mrs. Blake made her dvent in Blanton in the character of a widow who had recently lost her husband, and she brought with her a daughter ten years. of age, named thester, who was placed with Miss Cranston as a pupil. Hester Blake was a remarkable child.

Miss Cranston found her a curious study. "It she is not tempted, all may go well with her," thought the old lady: "but if she is-" and the ominous stake of the head expressed conjecture. No amount of pumping has been suggessful in extracing such information from a suggessful in extracing such information from a cher mother or daughter.

For a few years the stranger lived almost alone, for her friendless advent among toem had not inspired her neighbors with much conflicture in her antecestents; but as time went on, she won upon the good opinion of those around her, and at the time my story opens, Mrs. Blake was received as a guest by the best mailtes in the village.

People did not trust her, but they admired and pitted her; for they said "she is goodly to look at, and such has evidently been a suffer; er in the battle of life." Ab l if they had known how, and under what cheanseness that but le find been waged, I am inclined to think that the reputed widow would have lound few frachs or defenders in that strait had elighborhood.

The cottage occupied by Mrs. Blake stood about a mile from the town. It was a comfortal behous, with a veranda in front, overwhich flowering vines were trained, and the large yard that surrounded it was shaded by clim trees.

She was now dreamily regarding her daughter, who shoot in front of a mirror combing out a mass of black glistening her.

The figure of the girl was modelled after that of her mother; there was the same periods and representation that among the her was accompanied by insidualities, the bale-sister of H. ster, and she had been stunned by a blow on the head. They were both lying at a farm-house near by, and Mr. Leadry, knowing that he must die, had requested that Hester should visit him the next mo ning, that he might inform the root the period where the period where the period was a comment of the surrounded.

On the return of Dr. Macon he called upon Mrs. Blake and surprised her with the information that among the hert was Armand Landry, mortally injured! He was accompanied by his daughter, the bale-sister of H. ster, and she had been stunned by a blow on the head. ALLENTOWN, PA., WEDNESDAY MORNING, JUNE 19, 1872.

CHAPPER II. A PHYSICIAN IN LOVE WITH THE DAUGHTER-Mrs. Blake had fifteen hundred dollars a year, which she stated was derived from property in the South; but where it was situated, and in what place she had lived before she made her advent in Bianton, was a matter of conjecture. No amount of pumping had been suggessful in extracting such information from e ther mother or daughter. A FIENDISH PLOT.

On the return of Dr. Macon he called upon her of the p cuniary provision which he had made for her support.

She suddenly turned, and facing her mother, said:

"The dull monotony of this place is be coming unendurable to me. I wish to see something of the world—I mest's ear, mother."

With a sigh, Mrs. Bake said:
"Sit down on that low chair, and tree to be drived when the Dogotor should be kept in a state of imbeellity by made for her support. should be kept in a state of imbeelilty by drugs which the Doctor should skillfully ad-minister to her for that purpose, and Hester-whose resemblance to her was so close as to termined never to reveni to you."

Hester sat down, an 1 prepared to listen to defy detection—should usurp her place as what she had so long desired to know.

Glancing toward me with his sharp eyes, to see if I was quiet, he took a step for ward and went sprawling upon all-tours. I don't know to this day how he managed to save the lamp as he did, but it was not broken in the farll, and burned as brightly as ever.

My wits came to me here. I sprang as lightly as a cat out of bed, and before he could get upon his feet, I had the door of the closet shut and locked upon him. He grow lamblike in a moment.

"You've done it now, haven't you, my law of the county of the closet shut and locked upon him. He grow lamblike in a moment. "You've done it now, haven't you, my charming crea ure? I swear I'm in love with you from this hour to the end of time. You've got me tight and fast. What's the use of
