DEATH OF FANNY FERN. The N. Y. Tribune says.

Bara Payson Willis, whie of James Parton, whose death occurred last week, though she has left few enduring literary works, has earned with her pen a wide ce obrity. Born at Portland Me, in 1811, she seems to have passed through a somewhat stormy and cloudy girlhood and womanhood, and passed into a mature life before she made and entrance into the field of literature. She was a describant of two old Puritan families of New England, and, in common with her brother, N. P. Willis. inherited from her father and mother a and, in common with her forbiner, A. F. Willis, inherited from her father and mother a large share of mental power and genius. The lather of Sara Willis was a founder of "The Puritan Recorder," a religious journal, published in Boston, and of "The Youth's Commission of the Common o issued in Boston, and of "The Youth's Companion," printed in the same city. The mother of the Willis children, Natianiel, Richard and Jaue, is described as a large-brained, greathearted woman of most lovable character. When Sara was yet a child, her family removed to Boston, where she passed all her carly years. She was educated at Hartford, Connecticut, by Miss Catherine Beccure and was recognized as a clever young lady, high spirited and eccentric, and addicted to mis chievous and comical escapades. While yet young, and soon after leaving school, she married Mr. Eluridge, of Boston. After the birth of three children, she was left a widow and in somewhat embarrassed circumstances. Of these straits came her first literary adventure.

improved, compared with those of her earlier career. She was "a good hater," and her pen gentie and mild enough when pursuing congenial themes, was pointed and galling when engaged in the chastisement of vice, cant or snobbery. She had a fierce hatred for every snobbery. She had a flerce hatred for every sort of hypocrisy, and, with the inevitable tendency of one who pursues these subjects with pertinacity, she sometimes drifted into extravagance and uncharitableness. As a writer of brief sketches and essays for the weekly press she excelled; and in the production of these she was indomunible in industry, fertile in resource, and boundless in patience. She has shown her struggling sisterhood what woman can do with the pen; for, in spite of numberless obstacles, she won herself a place in current literature, a generous income, and numeriess obstacles, all won the least a prace in current literature, a generous income, and many honest friends and admirers. Her life was not always sunny; but its closing years were unclouded save by bodily ills; and, after a long, busy wrestle with lites problems, she

Each has qualities that the other does not and never can possess, and God meant it should be so. And yet the highest idea of marriage is not yet reached. The man happily married is more capable of development than when single, and this fact is an additional recommendation and reason why he should be trusted.

The literature of the day is another sign of the times. It is no wonder our children err and make mistakes. Great crimes come by slow growth; we have utterly torgotten to keep pace in our moral culture with the development of our intellectual faculties. We do not get what we pay for; foul dealing everywhere—you must find it in the domestic circle. Woman must halt the column. It is given to her, and they should apply the remedy. You are the reserve of that army of men who are to day fighting the battle of life. We have stood and seen the battle going on; we have seen them drop down and pass away

FOR THE SAKE OF PEACE AND SUCCESS.—HOW AND SUCCESS given by Carl Sentz's full orchestra was not one of the least of the attractions of the opening night, and consisted, first, of the Star Course March, composed by Paul Sentz and dedicated to Mr. Pugh, the manager. The second piece was that hold, deshing, vigorous work, the overture to the "Merry Wives of Windsor," followed by the lively "Kuenstler Leben," by Strauss. The performance was most heartily applauded.

The lecturess was then introduced. For the benefit of lidly readers who did not have the opportunity of seeing and hearing her ils stated that Mrs. Livermore was dressed very plainly in black, with velvet trimming on the polonaise; a white lace band circled the throat fastened with a crimson bow, and lace undersleeves were seen at the wrists. Miss Stanton was not dangerously injured, and bribes, intimidation, and cajolings purporting to emanate from Sunator James O'Brien, Dempsey's intimate friend and patron, together with others high in political authority in this city, were brought to bear upon Dr. Wynkoop, in order to obtain such a certificate, Representations were even made to Dr. Wynkoop by a friend of Senator O'Brien's that if he would give a modified certificate to the effect that Miss Stanton might recover, that a police justice had agreed to strain a point of law, and release Dempsey on bail.— To strengthen the proposition, two physicians Boss Tweed's trial has been again adjourned, this time at the request of the prosecution.

A number of the friends of Hon. W. W. Kricham express a desire to see him elected United States Senator. We believe Mr. K. would prefer the nomination for Governor three years hence, which will undoubtedly be given him.

WHAT ACKER KNOWS ABOUT CONGRESS

We copy the following gems from the Nor-

The Politicians of Lettigh County, and those of the "Allentown Ring," can now behold the work of their hands. Persistent to claim the candidate for Lehigh County, and persistent to defeat the renomination of Dr. Acker, who according to all rule and precedent (as well as in Lehigh as in Montgomery County,) was entitled to a second nomination, they have succeeded in securing the cection of a Radical from their own County, in a district that ought to have given at least 3000 Democratic majority.

of the Emperor William died to day.

Prince Albert (or Albrech'), whose death is announced in the toregoing dispatch, was born on the 4th of October 1800. On the 14th of September, 1830 he married the Princess Marianne, daughter of the late William I., King of the Netherlands. By her he had two sobs, one of whom gained some distinction in the campaign in Austria and France as commander of the Prussian dragoons. In 1840, Prince Albert was divorced from his wife, but the decree failed to receive the royal sanction until four years had el psed. He formed an attachment to one of his wife's maids of honor, Fraulein von Rauch; and, on the 13th of June, 1858, about a week after the royal consent to the divorce from his first wife had been obtained, he contracted a morganatic marriage with his maid of honer, who was given the title of Countess of Hohenau. Prince Albert was a General of Cavalry in the Prussian army, and, at the time of the meeting of Emperors which took place a few weeks ago at Berlin, he was made a Field Marshall by the Emperor of Russia. A day or two afterward ne was struck with paralysis, which has now caused his death.
