THE HORSE DISEASE has obtained a firm foothold in Philadelphia. Many of our citizens who visited that city yesterday had a difficulty in geting down town. The Fifth and Sixth streets line had no horses in condition to run and all their cars were off. The dummles were tried, but required some alteration before they could be used n the main line. Towards evening one of the machines was put on the track, with three, cars following, which presented an unusual sight for a city railway. All day yesterday crowds of people vere collected at Sixth and Chestnut and othe points waiting to see the dummy, but they waited FURS! in vain, unless they stayed there until about six o'clock. If they had been country people they would have been laughed at for their curiosity but they were not. The Fourth and Eighth, and Bethiehem Correspondence.

BETHLEHEM, Nov. 4th, 1873. I would gladly send you a readable item but othing noticeable has transpired. Even the Presidential election does not stir up any excitement. Still the coalitionists will poll nearly their whole October force, though some of them are reported Invite attention to their large and well se to vote for some local characters for the fun of the thing, while others will not vote at all. Most of them give up in despair, and by voting merely wish to make a party show. There is some excitement about our Post-Office, Robert Pelsert the resent incumbent wishes to retain, while other parties wish to get a hold of the same, among whom Jos. A. Weaver, bookseller, is an active aspirant. It is rather early yet to bother about

What that body of persons is doing on this side of the river seldom appears in our p pers, but we hope they will never come into disrepute by following in the tracks of their confrere across the bridge. Business men are sending out bills in all directions, and are complaining about tightness of money. They say that the banks cannot accommodate their depositors. This week Ielselmoyer, Allen Bastlan, Jonathan Bickel, the new National Bank on Main street is said to be ready to issue notes, and we hope this will al-
