Most men have their idiosyncrasies. Many who are monomaniacs are, through deference for their feelings, termed by their friends eccentric. They, having a pet ambition, is, so long as it be a reasonable one, not a thing to be deplored. But what is to be said of one who like Mr. Sevmour, suffers from a chronic desire for political prominence; while all that can be urged in his behalf is the intensity of his desire. We can but sympathize with him in what we consider his greatest misfortune, the placing of himself in the hands of his Unlowelle Bo "friends," who have indeed brought him into a "sea of troubles." Hosts Boggs. Burnside, of his former friends, and amongst them, his ablest supporters having lost confidence in the man, have forsaken him; and those who are at Harris, Howard township, 142 present acting as his backers, have, regardless of his finer feelings, gone into the menagerie business, using him as the "wonderful animile," and patton, Penn, Penn, Poeter, Type Type Penn, P are now perambulating the country; Snow Shoe, their bill stickers just a little way in Taylor, advance, announcing the "great Walker, moral show," and Mr. Seymour as "the only living specimen of the kind in America." In nautical language we might say of him, that with main mast and mizzen mast gone by the board, the shrouds in tatters and cordage in a snare, the pilot left behind, having parted with his anchor, he is now scudding under bare poles, before the wind of popular dissatisfation. The World, Intelligencer and others of his most respectable supporters, have more than intimated their lack of confidence in the man; they have given over all hope of his success, while his immediate friends and acquaintances darkly hint of hereditory insanity. Indeed, we understand delphia Post, "was the largest ever that the immediate object of those cast in an American city.
