

INCORPORATED

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 24, 1838.

To Correspondents.

A "Journey to the Tamarack Swamp," is received, and shall appear in our next.

CANADA.

Since our last we have received a budget of news from Canada. Although the statements of the various transactions are contradictory, yet they all agree, that a bloody sanguinary war is being carried on between the Royalists and Patriots to an extent that almost staggers belief. Québec, burning and devastation, appears to be the order of the day by both parties—the path of each tracked by blood, and lighted by the lurid blaze of dwellings. The Royalists murdering and burning wherever they find any resistance from the patriots, and the patriots taking revenge by committing like acts of devastation. Under these circumstances what will be the fate of the patriots time alone can determine. Believing that every thing relating to them will be interesting to our readers, we have made copious extracts from our exchange papers, and shall continue to keep them advised of the progress of the revolution.

Theller, whose mysterious escape from the prison at Quebec. In company with Dodge and others, a short time since, created so much speculation; has arrived in New York city. His account of his hair breadth escapes from detection and arrest, form a concatenation of events almost incredible. He was secreted in Quebec, after his escape from prison, by a day laborer, although a reward of $6,000 was offered for his apprehension.

The Antimasonic National Convention which lately convened in Philadelphia, nominated Gen. Wm. H. Harrison, of Ohio, for President; and Daniel Webster, of Massachusetts, for Vice President. This will make the union complete between the Harrisonites and the Hartford Conventionists, provided the godlike Daniel will consent to play second fiddle to the Ohio granny.

The Massachusetts and Delaware elections, says the Washington Globe, make it manifest that the great principle on which the Administration rests its policy is making new conquests, and must in the end, prove irresistible every where. Even in New York, where so many sinister and selfish interests, and such a mass of money and fraud were concentrated against it, its progress since last year, has been wonderful. We have no doubt thirty thousand suffrages beyond those of the last year, have been thrown by the Democratic party, and a gain of 8000 made on that of the Opposition, notwithstanding the additions made to them by fraud and corruption—by false ballots and imported voters. So in Massachusetts the Democratic party has gloriously vindicated its principles, and made at least ten thousand proselytes since last year. Delaware is revolutionized, and for the first time sends a Democratic member to Congress, and a majority of Reformers to the State Assembly.

The November Number of the Gentleman's Magazine came to hand yesterday. We have had no time to read its contents, but from a hasty examination of its pages, we find it retains its usual interest to the miscellaneous reader.

A New Continent.—A new continent has been discovered by the French Exploring Expedition to the South Pole, situated in the south of South Shetland. This discovery is considered of real service to the nautical and geographical science.

The State of Delaware has elected Colonel Thomas Robinson, Democrat, to Congress. Mr. Robinson's majority over his federal opponent is forty-three. The democrats also claim a majority in the Legislature, so that after next March we will have a democrat in the United States Senate from Delaware, in place of R. H. Bayard.

A short session.—The Rhode Island Legislature closed their session on Saturday night, after a session of eight or ten days.

For the Columbia Democrat. FOR THE "UNION CLUB."

Prose and Poetry. A Council was held of the chief parts of Speech, Who indignantly vow'd that the smaller they'd teach.

Says the Noun to the Verb, "I declare it's too bad That the small parts of Language such favors have had,

That they're set down beside us as large as my Lord. And first in a sentence have claim'd to be heard."

Quoth the Verb, "My Lord Noun, I with you do agree,

(And these little Pleistons my resentment shall see.) That Preposition and Adverb, and Article too, Are too poor to hold converse with great me or you.

Participle, my cousin, is also quite poor, And has but three changes of dress to be sure; Howe'er your Attorney you'll certainly want, So the Adjective passes the' certainly sent.

If you, in your greatness, will be condescending, And suffer my cousin Levees to attend, I vow she shall never insult your degree, Or publicly name thy Attorney or thee.

And then, in return, I expect not to see Your low-bred Attorney a gallanting me."

Said the Noun, "To the bargain I gladly accede, With one slight addition if you are agreed. If I should be sick, (I acknowledge your charms,) I'll send my Attorney, with my coat of arms.

And I hope my fidelity you'll not dispute If my son should address you 'till he be dead! For I know do assure you that Pro is as good And as true to your love as his father has stood.

But being at leisure, I sure will attend And make my obeisance, nor deputy send— If Pro lacks for this best your cousin's aid And sure he in private beside her may stand."

"Agreed," said the Verb; "and let's add one thing more.

Not discard the Person who cries Ah! encore. Our friend Interjection we'll suffer to pass, And alone he may sob and cry, Oh! Alas!

This plea was adopted in the Autocrat's hall That he and his mistress should rule over all. But the sly Preposition over-hearing the scheme, Quickly summoned his friends who of harm did not dream.

He disclosed to the Adverb and Article too, The plan which the Noun and the Verb had in view. Says the Article, "I am so little and poor, That I can do but small matter save wait at the door.

But now, to plague 'em, you surely are bent, I'll do what I can too, to make them relent. If they order the hackney, I'll fetch them a horse That's bulky and spry and any thing worse.

If they come in their grandeur, and say, "In an hour We intend to set out for a long merry tour," The "n" from the "an" before hour I'll take; And cause 'em the particular tour to make."

The Adverb declared, if her power was small, The more fierce she'd use it, and tender it all. If the Noun and his mistress resolve now to walk, "Now" shall be missing at tomorrow shall balk.

If they purpose to be timely, unobtrusively shall wait, And their Lordships shall feel what it is to be late. If they hope to be greatly obliged by a friend, A factor most secretely I surely will send.

And when they declare that they fairly have earn'd, The "fairly" to foully shall surely be turn'd. Tho' now to the Noun the Verb lovingly appear, I'll change the word "lovely" in less than a year.

And he, and some others, shall shortly find out, That all is not golden that glitters about. In short, I will alter time, manner and way Till rights are restor'd that were plunder'd to-day.

The Conjunction appeared and declar'd his resolve To plague them as long as the earth can resolve. My limits are small as you all know full well, But still if sense turneth, they onward shall tell.

But if it continues by adding some more, A Disjunctive I'll send to destroy all before.

That cunning old Fox, Preposition then rose And said he had power and will to oppose, Says he, tho' my office is not of high grade, My power resembles a Ruler by trade.

My class ministerial can ne'er legislate, But govern by rule quite as certain as fate. And e'en if Lord Noun should come into my range, He'd feel that his case was beyond hope or change.

And when Mistress Verb consequential doth talk, And sets out alone, unattended, to walk, Without either Noun or his noble son Pro, The lack of my gallantry quickly she'll know: She tells that my name has been chang'd to be spite Of the my companionship ne'er could endure— She then says Em Doctor, her pride to sustain, But the moment she goes, I'm Preposition again!

And so she will find me, unchanging, unchang'd, For thus in a sentence my pleas is arrang'd. And when they proclaim they will rule over thee, I'll strike out the 'over' and write under me.

And when they set out with a coach in fine state, Commencing the journey, they pass the large gate— Instead of a through, an against I will send 'em; And thus a misfortune will surely attend 'em. And when they start forth to go over the run, And under the chesnut-tree yonder, for fun, My subjects I'll change in an instant you see.

They shall pass the run 'under' and 'over' the tree. And when they request me their garden to save, By lying around it, I'll fight through it I'll save. And if they should go upon couch to repose, They'll likely lay under the sun may suppose.

And when towards their home they would gladly advance, And the weather is stormy and freezing by chance, 'Towards shall give out, and a from take his place, Just in the middle of this rainy race.

And when they go quickly to mount on a horse

Will set them right, unless of something ill worse. Or when before carriage, sulky or pig,

The horses are order'd, with servant to rig, I'll muster my forces with virtues so kind, And neatly the horses all fasten behind.

In short, the ten thousand such pranks that I'll play Will make them repeal all their laws of to-day. And thus they will feel, as the great folks should know,

That the poor are their equals while living below."

Eruption of Mount Etna.—Mount Etna, according to a letter from Messina, has been in eruption during the whole of August.—The volcanic emission appeared on the eastern side of the Cone, on the summit of the grand crater, and the lava ran in a direct line towards Casz Inglese; but, when within the distance of a gun shot of this place, changed its course, and fell into the Val del Rove, where however, it did no great damage.

For the Columbia Democrat. The Pennsylvania Reporter AND STATE JOURNAL.

Is published at Harrisburg twice a week during the session of the Legislature, and once a week during the recess.

THE Reporter will continue to be (as it heretofore has been) an unyielding advocate of the principles of the Democratic party—a supporter of the great and vital questions of free government identified with the success of the Administration of the General Government—and an untiring opponent of the Federal aristocracy, which seeks, in the election of one of its favorites, to inflict upon the country the curse of a National Bank, to be governed in its operations by no other views than the advancement of the interests of a favored few at the expense of the interests, rights, and liberties of the many. Against such a party and such an engine of political evil, the Reporter will be found acting with the body of the people.

As the ensuing session of the Legislature will be one of more than ordinary interest to the people, the Editors of the Reporter have made arrangements which will enable them to give a more full and complete history of the proceedings in both houses than they have heretofore been enabled to do. Every exertion will be used to make the Reporter a medium through which the people shall receive a full record of the doings of their representatives.

Per annum $3 00 For the session 2 00 Any agent or other person forwarding $10, or becoming responsible therefor, shall have six copies forwarded as may be directed, during the session of the Legislature.

Persons forwarding names of subscribers are requested to be particular in stating whether the subscriptions are to continue for the year or for the session. BOAS & COPLAN. Nov. 5, 1838.
