

From the Ladies World of Fashion.

MR. HENRY GOWAN.

BY MRS. O. K. FOWNELL.

'What a lovely girl Emma Wharton is,' said Charles Lawrey to a chance acquaintance whom he chanced to meet in the street, and as the young man spoke he glanced across the way to a young lady whose graceful step and elegant figure attracted universal attention.

'Ahl that is Miss Wharton!' said Mr. Henry Gowan, the friend whom he addressed, 'I've heard she's rich; but there's no knowing certainly now-a-days, since if a girl has but a thousand dollars she is made an heiress by the popular report.'

'I do not pretend to know how wealthy Miss Wharton is,' replied Lawrey with some coldness. 'She is an old acquaintance, but I have never troubled myself about her riches.'

'Faith, now, that's the first thing I would trouble myself about. There is a girl I have known for a month, a knowledge of whose fortune I hav'nt at my finger ends. It don't do to throw oneself away on an angel without a sixpence. Catch me at it.'

Mr. Henry Gowan spoke frankly. He made it his business to ascertain at the earliest possible period after an introduction the exact fortune of every single lady whom he honored with his acquaintance—we say honored, for as Mr. Henry Gowan had a few thousands of his own, and was thought to be the handsomest man in his family, he considered it quite a condescension to make the acquaintance of any lady. On marrying a rich wife he was fully resolved. That such advantages as this should be thrown away on a penniless girl, was not to be thought of, and if ever a hawk had a keen eye for its prey, Henry Gowan had one for an heiress.

From what Charles Lawrey had said the fortune hunter suspected that Miss Wharton was worth more than he had at first suspected, so he lost no time in making her acquaintance, and, as a matter of course began to prosecute his inquiries as to her wealth, with what effect will appear from the following conversation with Charles Lawrey, about a month subsequent to the preceding interview.

'I can tell you all about Miss Wharton,' said Gowan as they met in the street, 'Ahl!'

'Yes! I soon ferretted it out. Let me alone for such an inquiry as this is. Miss Wharton is worth exactly one hundred and ten thousand dollars, in ground rents, mortgages, and houses.' She has also twenty thousand dollars in stock. Her income must at least be seven thousand dollars—a pretty pill as times go. And then she's so decidedly handsome. Faith, I've made up my mind to make love to her, so if you know any body who has an eye that way you can give him a friendly hint that it's no use, and Mr. Henry Gowan pulled up his shirt collar with all the coxcomby and conceit of a finished exquisite.

There might have been seen a look of surprise on the face of Lawrey when his acquaintance first announced his intentions towards Miss Wharton, but this expression quickly subsided into a quiet smile, which also soon passed away, so that ere Mr. Henry Gowan had finished speaking, the countenance of his hearer had assumed its usual composed demeanor.

'Pray, when do you intend to bring matters to a crisis?' asked Lawrey.

'In a month at farthest. When I've once made up my mind I lose no time; I flatter myself that I've already made a considerable impression on Miss Wharton.'

'You conceited coxcomb!' muttered Lawrey to himself, and after a few common place expressions they parted.

'Emma,' said Lawrey that evening as he entered the parlor where sat his betrothed; 'who do you think is about to aspire to your hand, or rather to your fortune, for it seems he has found out that you have one?'

'Who?' said the lovely girl, 'oh! surely you must mean Mr. Gowan—he is the only fortune hunter among my acquaintance, she added laughing—and now recollect he has been acting very willingly of late, and has even gone so far as to send me this piece of verse—poetry he calls it. Lawrey took the manuscript and read the poem, laughing with Emma over it. At length he spoke.

'As no one knows of our engagement, dearest, this fellow has made me his confidant, and told me to warn any body that it would be useless to pretend to your hand, while he is in the field. What think you of that Emma?'

Emma's fine eyes flashed. 'I will brink down his coxcomby yet, with your permission, dear Charles. The impudent fellow! For the sake of my sex, I ought to expose him. Pray did he honor you with the exact amount of my fortune?'

'To the very cent, a piece of information I never possessed before. I wonder where he learned it, for his minute particularly convinced me that he spoke with authority—but to day as I was going to Court, I met the clerk of the Surrogate, who called me to him. He asked me if I knew you, and then if knew Gowan, for,' says he, 'that gentleman has been here looking at the late Mr. Wharton's will, and calculating from it the daughter's fortune. Now, I do not know Miss Wharton, but I think she ought to be acquainted with this.' So you see, Emma, your suitor has it all by the ears.'

'Oh! the wretch,' said Emma, laughingly, and he thinks himself so irresistible that he can win a lady at once.'

'And he tells me he will propose for you in a month, and that his success is certain,' said her lover with mock solemnity, and then both looking into each others faces, burst into a merry laugh which lasted for some minutes.

'A thought strikes me, said Emma at length, her eyes sparkling with mischief, and then she recounted to her lover a plan which she had formed, which only increased their laughter. What the plan was that so pleased Emma and Lawrey shall appear in due time.

The attentions of Mr. Henry Gowan to the fair Emma Wharton, soon became the theme of conversation, and many an opinion was hazarded as to whether the attachment was reciprocal. Of the sentiments of the gentlemen there could apparently be no doubts, since his attentions were constant and minute; but the conduct of Emma was not so easily unriddled, since, altho' she did not reject the attentions of her new lover, she could hardly be said to encourage them. The gossippers, however, soon came to the conclusion that 'it was to be a match' and that the department of the lady was to be attributed wholly to coyness.

A fortnight had elapsed since the conversation betwixt Lawrey and Emma, when Mr. Henry Gowan again met Lawrey in the street.

'Deuced fine girl, Lawrey, is that Miss Wharton, said Mr. Henry Gowan, 'I was never so deeply in love in my life.'

'With her fortune, you mean,' drily said Lawrey.

'Oh, faith, with herself—I confess, between you and I, it was her money that induced me to pay attention to her, but I'm afraid I'm more deeply interested in her than would be prudent if there was any danger of a refusal.'

'So you think your success is certain.'

'Why, yes, I may say so—I fancy there is little doubt. Emma is a little coy, to be sure, but aside from that, every symptom is favorable! Ah! but here comes the angel herself—good bye—don't you wish you were as happy as I am?'

'A precious rascal!' said Lawrey to himself as he bowed to Emma, and exchanged with her a meaning smile.

Mr. Henry Gowan hastened to join the side of Emma, and accompanied her home. Soliciting a few minutes tete-a-tete with her as she entered the parlor and took his seat by her side—Then, in a set speech which he had duly composed and committed to memory for the occasion, he tendered her his heart, hand, and fortune. Emma heard him out gravely and then replied.

'I certainly ought to feel myself honored by your proposal, sir; but as I attribute it wholly to my fortune and not to myself, I cannot be so highly flattered as I should under other circumstances. Excuse me for declining your proposal,' she said, rising, and take a word of counsel, Never go again to the Surrogate's Office to learn a lady's wealth. Good morning sir.'

These words, without the tone in which they were pronounced would have been sufficient to discomfit even a greater coxcomb than Mr. Henry Gowan. He left as if he could have wished the floor to open and swallow him from the scornful look of Miss Wharton. Seizing his hat he hurried to the door, and before night was on his way to the Springs.

A merry laugh had Emma and her lover that evening over the discomfited fortune hunter. And when, a few months later, Mr. Henry Gowan saw their marriage in the newspaper, and recollected that he had made a confidant of Charles Lawrey, he wisely concluded that even the Springs would not save him from ridicule, and sailed at once for Europe.

LIBERTY ON BOTH SIDES.

A ragged militia officer, and still more bandy legged negro, met at the bar of a public house, where the following conversation took place:

'Cuff, you'r a good honest fellow, and I like to compliment a man what's lived an honest life if he's black; you shall take a glass of drink with me Cuff.' 'Well, Capt'n, I's berry dry, so I won't be ugly 'bout it; some niggers is so proud to drink with militia officers; but when he's sober he jits as good as nigger—specially if de nigger's dry.'

Good Advice.—Be content as long as your belly is full and your body warm—remember the poor, kiss the pretty girls—don't rob your neighbor's hen roosts—never pick an editors's pocket, nor think that he is going to treat—kick dull care to the devil, and black your own boots.

Shooting Stars.—The New Haven Savans kept a sharp look out for the 'Shooting Stars' on Monday and Tuesday nights, the period of their annual arrival; and much to the satisfaction of the watchers between 11 and 12 o'clock Tuesday evening 79 Shooting Stars were seen. The exhibition it was thought would be continued on Wednesday evening.

A Fruitless Search.—There is a man at Wheeling who has set out in search of the individual who first nominated John Tyler. The number of aspirants to that honor, who sprung up a year ago, have satisfactorily proved that they were not entitled to the honor. Where is 'the man who nominated John Tyler?'

ANOTHER GREAT WONDER IS FORTHCOMING!! A LEVIATHAN NEWSPAPER,

The subscriber, publisher of the Boston Notion, feels a degree of honest pride in being able to announce that he is now making the most extensive arrangements, for the publication, at an early period of a

STUPENDOUS PRINTED SHEET

OR QUADRUPLE NOTION!

SIZE, BEAUTY AND VALUE,

any of his previous efforts at newspaper publishing, and to which he will challenge the world to produce an equal! It will contain printed matter, to the amount of near sixteen thousand square inches, or one hundred and four square feet! employing over three million seven hundred thousand letters! It will be embellished with over 200 Splendid Engravings!

The Letter Press Contents, will be of the most valuable character, and no article will be allowed a place in its columns that has previously appeared in any American publication—as it will be filled with entirely new and fresh matter. The next steamer from Europe, will bring us a large quantity of materials sent for by us, expressly for the columns of this stupendous sheet.

A large number of splendid Tales, Romances, Stories, Biographical sketches, Memoirs of distinguished characters, Poetry, Anecdotes and fun enough for a year, &c. &c. will fill up its columns.

Though the promises we have made above may appear to the readers of the prospectus, too liberal to be fulfilled, we can assure them in perfect sincerity, that we are not only able to accomplish all we have proposed, but that we have in view other striking features and novelties, which will materially enhance the value of our sheet. The public has pronounced a favorable verdict on our former Mammoth Notions, but we have taken measures for rendering the forthcoming 'Leviathan' a still greater prodigy than any of its predecessors. We have engaged the assistance of several of our most distinguished literary men, both by making selections, and furnishing original articles, and such a right censorship will be exercised in making the sheet, that nothing unworthy of being cherished and preserved, will find a place in its columns. It will be emphatically an

It is attempted by Quacks and Impostors to introduce their vile and dangerous nostrums by assuming for their name that of 'BLOOD PILLS' knowing that the Blood Pills manufactured by Dr. Leidy have obtained the greatest reputation of any Pills in existence, and think by such trickery to impose upon the public by selling their trash upon the popularity of Dr. Leidy's Blood Pills.

The public are therefore particularly requested to be cautious when purchasing, to ask for DR. LEIDY'S BLOOD PILLS.

The public are assured that Dr. Leidy's Blood Pills are the safest, best, and most effectual of any now in use, containing neither Mercury or the Minerals, and may be employed by young and old, male and female at all times and under all circumstances without fear from taking cold, or strait from diet in living or occupation.
