From the New Orleans Bulletin. NEW ORLEANS STREET MARKET.

Umbrellas-rise with the rain, and fall with the sun. Holders uneasy; calculating on a spread of business. Articles apt to

Hats-Stock of a light nature, and people looking for a change in quality with the first cool weather. Few sellers crawned with success, and none of the producers eaught nap-ping. Great distress presumed to be felt from efforts to "pull wool over their eyes."

Leather, shoes, &c .- Great netivity in these articles just before bank closes. Dans siso discover a desire to move in the commodity. Boots brisk, but no pumps in the market, as there should be-to carry off the Hose-Owing to a close stocking of the market, holders do not anticipate a riseshove the knee. Some difficulty in getting rid of wet socks, which, as yet, cannot be unravelled.

Pantaloons-Holders are in a tight place, but are unwilling to let go. Like most merchants, they evince considerable saxiety about the state of their drawers.-People have an eye to buttons for convent-

Suspenders-Business in this article is partly over the lest shoulder. Holders are apxious to let go towards bed time, but are ready for "buckling to" early in the morn-

Stocks-It is "neck or nothing" with dealers in this article. Holders get uneasy in the middle of the day, and in transactions are perfectly willing to "throw off."—
Stocks were stiff last week; but the weather affects them considerably at present.

Waistcoats—No transactions; people have no money to in-vest in this article, and pockets are empty.

Gloves-The commodity is very little hand-led. He who fingers in them finds it hard to get clear. The chief dealers are among the a wrist-octacy.

Canes—These articles rise and fall.—
Attributable to hot wenther. Many holders seem determined to do well, (duel.)

Handkerchiefs-Much son for, and holders inclined to hold on. By a lise discovery, the threads in some of them are found to contain specie. It is anomaly that shees hang heavily on hand. Everything

TENNESSEE.

The Democratic members of the Legislature of Tennessee are alive to the interests of the party; and; in several meetings have boldly avowed their determined adhreence to democratic principles, and their firm resolve to stand or fall by them. We are pleased to see their determination on the Presidency—THEIR UNANIMOUS RECOMMENDATION OF A NA-TIONAL CONVENTION. Their pro-ceedings of meetings exhibit a zeal and patriotism worthy the representatives of the democracy of that State. The following is the resolution in relation to a National Convention :

·We [the democratic members of the Legislature of Tennessee respectfully propose to the democratic party in their States a Democratic National Convention, to be composed of delegates elected or chosen by the democratic party, in the manner, and necording to the usages observed in the several States respectively, and that the said Convention assemble at the city of Baltimore, in the state of Maryland, on the 5th Monday of the months of November, 1843.'

A WORD ABOUT THE PRESS.

The Philadelphia editors, with one or two exceptions, are, without distinction of party, an honor to the country. A political opposition with them is never made personal; and the whole city is aware that though they may be actively and even vigorously opposed to each other in politics, they never forget that they are gentlemen-never so far transcend the bounds of propriety as to make a meeting afterwards unpleasant. It is to such as these that we look as to the stars which must lead the Press of the country from a path where nothing but personalities and criminations abound. can meet a whig editor in Philadelphia with the same cordial feeling as if he were a Democrat, and we know that many of the editors there who are, politically opponents are warm and sincere personal friends .- How different is not all this from the violence and the abuse of too many of the papers and editors in the interior ! We think. however, that even those who prefer this kind of warfare will be mollified by the example of the gentlemanly conductors of the Philadelphia Press. At least we most fervently hope so .- Lancaster Int.

The Great Cattle Show and Fair of the New York State Agricultural Society commenced at Albany on Tuesday last. The variety of farming implements and articles of domestic utility entered for exhibition promised an unusual and highly interesting display. Among the objects of interest not immediately connected with the Fair, is a drove of buffaloes (twenty eight in number) from Missouritan ox from Syracuse, weigh ing four thousand pounds and opwards, and a hog weighing fourteen hundred.

The New York Express says that six hundred thousand dollars of the United States Loan have been taken in that city by different individuals, within a few days past, and that the amount recently taken in all is one million of dollars.
