Pure Water the best Drink.

There is no axiom of health more just than that 'men never have a true appetite till they can eat with relish any ordinary food.' It is told of John Bailes, who liv ed to the age of 128, that his food for the most part consisted of brown bread and cheere, and his drink water and mink .erage of all animals; whole nations, as Ma of April, 1834. hometans, and Hindoos, use it plore as a beverage, and unlike other drink, it does not stale the appetite, but the contrary; indeed, it was observed by Hippocrates, above two thousand years ago, that water drinkers tiers generally keen appetites. It is a fluid that requires no digestion, for it is not necessary that it should undergo any changes; it is the natural menstrum which holds in solution both what is essential for the nutrition and healthy functions of the body, and what has become refuse after having served its destined office and intention in animal economy. Water, therefors, from its congenial qualities can never much disturb the symme, and when it does, it is speedily expelled by its natural outlets, the skin and knineys. It is told of Lord Heathfield, so well known for his hardy habit of military discipline and watchfulness that 'his food was vegetables, and his drink water, never indulging himself in animal food or wine;' and Sir John Sin clair in his work on longevity, says in the account of Mary Campbell, then aged 105 that she preferred pure water to any other

THE MECHANIC.

What class of men are more useful than the mechanics? To them we are indebted for many of the necessaries, and nearly all the luxuries and comforts of life. They are generally well informed; because, as the evening is, with many of them a leisure time, they have opportunities for reading and conversing on scientific subjects, and thus lay up stores of information, and ac custom themselves to reasoning and inves tigation. They are also hardy and strong by the salutary exercise of their employ ment. In the war of the revolution, and in the last war many of the most distinguished officers had been mechanics, And, for love of freedom and for love of our country, they have always been conspicuous. A temperative, industrious, and frugal body of mechanics, is the mainspring of a city's prosperity.

Russian Remedy for Drunkenness .- 1 consists in conlining the drankard in a room and furnishing bim at discretion with bran dy ordered with two thirds of water, and as much wine, beer, and coffee as he desires but containing one third of brandy; all the food-the bread, meal, and meat, &c., are steeped in brandy and water. The poo wight is continually drunk and dort. Or the fifth day of this regimen, he has an ex trome disques for brandy, he earnesdy en treats other diet, but his desires must no be vielded to till the poor wretch no longer desires to eat or drink -- he is then entirely cured of his penchant for drunkeness. He acquires such disgust for brandy that he is ready to vomit at the very sight of it.

I believe I'll go Ashore .- A story is told of an apsophusheated Yankee who once took passage on a Loke Erie schooner, in the spring sime of the year, when the winds and the waves are disposed to be hoisterous. The story is thus related, by one who is supposed to know all about its Soon after the barque had weighed anchor, the wind began to blow, and in a short time it was found necessary to take in every stirch of canvass and with bare poles th schooler flew over the waves with light more explained. She was now lifteen miles from shore-the wind was blowing treper lously -- and the night was dark as a stack of cats.' The danger was imminent; fear was legibly written in every face. At Amo this moment the Yankee came on deck, with his baggage strapped closely to his back. Walking up to the captain, his face as long a a yard stick, and laving his hand on the shoulder of the latter, he remarked, with all the gravity of a philosopher, Captain, I believe l'il go ashore '

A Frenchman wishing to take the stage at Untica, was asked by the driver if he had any extra baggage. 'Extra baggage! vate you call dar? I have no baggage at all but my three trunks, five dogs and von black girl.
