THE RICH MERCHANT.

It was late at night, and the streets were nearly deserted, the more especially as it was snowing fast. A single traveller, however, might have been seen; wrapped in a single overcoat, urging his way against the tempest, by the dim lamps. Suddenly, as he passed a ruinous tenement, the figure of a girl started up before him.

'Please, sir,' she said, 'it's only a penny—mother is sick, and we have not nothing to day.' The first impulse of the moment was to go on; his second to stop. He looked at the girl. Her face was thin and pale, and her garments scanty. He was a man of good impulse; so he put his hand toward his pocket intending to give her a shilling. She saw the act and her fustle eye brightened. But the traveller had forgot that his overcoat was buttoned tightly over his pocket.

'It is too much trouble said he to himself, and this wind is very cutting. Besides these beggars are usually cheats—I'll warrant this girl wants the money to spend in a gin shop.' And speaking aloud he said somewhat harshly, 'I have nothing for you; if you are really destitute, the Guardians of the poor will take care of you.'

The girl shrunk back without a word and drew her tattered garments around her shivering form.—But a tear glistened on her cheek in the light of the dim lamp. The man passed on, and turning the next corner soon knocked at the door of a splendid mansion, through whose richly curtained windows a rosy light streamed out across the storm. A servant obsequiously gave him entrance. At the sound of his footsteps the parlour door was hastily opened, and a beautiful girl, apparently about seventeen; sprang into his arms kissed him on each cheek, and then began to assist him in removing his overcoat.

'What kept you so long, dear papa?' she said; 'If I had known where you were I would have sent you the carriage. You never stay so late at the office.'

'No my love, I was at my lawyer's—busy very busy, and all for you,' and kindly patted her cheek. 'But now, Mary, can't you give me some supper?'

The daughter rang the bell; and ordered the supper to be served. It was such a one as an epicure might delight in, just the supper for a traveller on a night like that.

'Pa said the daughter, when it was finished, 'I hope you are in good humor, for I have a favor to ask of you, & she threw her arms around his neck, and looked up into his face, with that winning smile and those beautiful dark eyes of her's.'

'I wish to give a ball on my birth day—my eighteenth birth-day—it will cost, oh! a sight of money, but you are a kind, good papa, and I know you have been successful—or you would not have been at your lawyer's.'

'Yes! my darling,' he said, fondly kissing her, 'the cotton speculation has turned out well. I sold all I had of the article this afternoon, received the money and took it to my lawyer's, telling him to invest it in real estate. I think I shall soon give up business.'

'Oh! do, do papa. But you'll give me this ball—won't you?'

'You little tease!' said the father, but he spoke smilingly; and putting his hand in his pocket book, he took out a note for five hundred dollars, and placed it in his child's hand. 'Take this—if it is not enough you must have another, I suppose. But don't trouble me about it any more.'

The next morning broke clear but the snow was a foot deep on the level, and here and there, lay in huge drifts, blocking up the door ways. At ten o'clock the rich merchant was on his way to his counting room. He turned down the same street up which he had come the preceding evening. A crowd had gathered around the open cellar door of a ruined tenement. The merchant paused to enquire what was the matter.

'A woman sir, has been found dead below there,' said one of the spectators. 'she starved to death it is said, and they have sent for the coroner. Her daughter has just come back after being out all night.—I believe she was begging. That's her moaning.'

'Ah!' said the merchant, and a pang went through his heart like an ice bolt, for he remembered denying a petitioner the night before. He pushed through the crowd and descended the cellar steps. A girl covered over an emaciated corpse, that lay on a heap of straw, in one corner of the dark apartment. It was the same girl he had feared it would prove. The merchant was horror-struck.

'My poor child!' he said, laying his hand on her shoulder, 'you must be cared for—God forgive me for denying you last night

Here—take this!' and he put a bill into her hand.

The girl looked up and gazed vacantly at him. Then she put back the proffered money.

'It will do no good now,' she said, 'mother is dead and she burst into hysterical tears.'

And the merchant at that moment, would have given half his fortune to have recalled her to life.

The lesson thus learned he never forgot. The merchant personally saw that a decent burial was provided for the mother, and afterwards took the daughter into his house educated her for a respectable station in life and on her marriage presented her with a proper dowry. He lived to hear her children lip their gratitude.

THEM YANKEES.

The Ship Howque, just launched at New York is to be commanded by Captain N.B. Palmer. He has been attached to ship sailing out of that port, and has been Admiral of several of the Atlantic packets. Several years ago he sailed out of a port in Connecticut in a small clipper schooner, and discovered several islands in the South Seas. About that time the Russian Government fitted out a squadron of discovery which was sent to the same seas. Early one foggy morning, the Russians found themselves near some uninhabited islands, which the Admiral in command could not find laid down in a chart. This delighted him beyond measure, and he was preparing to land and take possession thereof in the regular way, when the fog lifted, and he discovered a clipper schooner bearing down towards him. The little clipper ran along side the Admiral, and her captain, who was none other than the daring Palmer, hailed the Admiral thus wise—

'Ship ahoy! Are you in want of a pilot?' 'Satan and marlin spikes!' said the Russian, 'Are there pilots here before us?' He mounted the side of his ship and cried out through his trumpet—

'Schooner ahoy! who are you, and where are you from?'

Schooner Hero, from Stonington, Connecticut, on a piloting cruise, replied Captain Palmer 'Do you want a pilot?'

'Good gracious,' exclaimed the Russian, 'these Yankees are every where. How could that little craft get here?'

He made the best of the adventure, however, invited captain Palmer on a board his ship, and named the newly discovered land 'Palmer Island,' and to this day and for ever, they have been and will be known as such.

Stump Speaking in Arkansas.—About nine o'clock the voters, numbering near one hundred, presented themselves, and a round shouldered, shock-haired man arose and addressed them as follows:

Feller Citizens—This is a day for the people of Wolf's Mouth, and I mouth say, if I warn't modest, that our carnal cranchas men, (that's a hard word, but I got through with it) depends on our heterogeneous exertions! Bill Sculpin are our candidate, and Jack Jones swears that he's bound to shoot every man that don't vote for him! Feller Citizens—I'm going to sand my speech with quotation from Seizem, the celebrated Latin cricketer, when he addressed the Cathagenians and Rocky mountain cuds at the battle of the Cow Pens! Look out! I'm comin'—cock your rifles and be ready!—'Est ye burute E' as the immaculate feller said when he got stabbed in the back in the House of Representatives!

Long and loud were the shouts of the orator's party; and it was with difficulty silence could be maintained, until at last the opposing speaker mounted the stump. He commenced in the following classical manner:

Feller Citizens—There arent no one skeered in this crowd! I'm not afflicted like Charley Cuppliver with the disease called E plorusus unim! 'Tempt us fregit,' by the concordat and evacuating nabob of Jerusalem! Old Jim Grimes thought he'd frighten me with his Greek! but I can put on the big licks and pile on as much agony as he ever heard of! 'Pae stuitus!' 'Sana Parissima Block; Island Point Judiah Lex taglions!' 'Historia Sacre! and fiducet et Broadsaxe!' What does the fellow think of himself now. He's a travelling synagogue; but he can't catch me with his high feutin words! Vote for Tom Cressey, he's a horse and so am I! 'Ecco signum!' 'Abinito!' 'Dejure sine dum spire, spere.' Hurrah for Tom Cressey!

We stood at Wolf's Mouth for nearly three hours and had the satisfaction of seeing Tom Cressey elected; all through the superior learning of the last speaker.

A clergyman, who was reading to his congregation a chapter in Genesis, found the last sentence on the page to be: 'And the Lord gave unto Adam a wife.' Turning over two leaves together, he found written and read in an audible voice, 'and she was pitched without and within!' He had unhappily got into the middle of a description of Noah's Ark.

Pride loves always to be seen in the light other vices choose to be in the dark.

Brandreth's Pills.

PICTURE OF HEALTH.

HEALTH is characterised in an individual by the absence of all pain, suffering, or affliction in any part of his body; by the free and regular exercise of his functions without any exception.—They consist in having a good appetite at meal times, an easy digestion, free evacuations, without looseness or costiveness at least once in every twenty-four hours, and without head-achiness, or burning at the passage, the free issue of the water without acrimony or burning, and without a reddish sediment which is always a sign of a present or an approaching pain; quiet sleep without agitation or troublesome dreams; no taste of bile or other bad taste in the mouth upon rising in the morning; no sourness or disagreeable rising of the stomach; a clean tongue; a sweet breath; no itching, pimples or spots on the skin; no piles; no burning heat upon any part of the body; no excessive thirst when unopposed to labor or other known cause; no interruption to any natural evacuation, nor pain at their periodical return.

Where the state of the system does not harmonize with the above picture of health, it is of the greatest importance that no time be lost in sending for a doctor, or in the use of foolish remedies too often the result of speculation; instead of this course to a dose of BRANDRETH'S PILLS be taken, which will not deceive, but will at once restore health to the organs in part that requires it. All who wish to preserve their health, all who are determined to defend their life against the encroachments of disease which might send them prematurely to the grave, will, without hesitation, have recourse to the Brandreth Pills, when the state of the system does not harmonize with the above picture of health.

Those who live in a country where contagious or other diseases prevail, should often think of this true picture of health, and observe himself with particular attention, in order to act accordingly. The wise and rightly directed will follow this advice—the unwise are left to their own destruction.
