POETRY.

FOR THE COLUMBIA DEMOCRAT.

The people now are waking up, And to the rescue freely rally, For Harry Clay has lost the day By his free trade and tariff sally; And from the highest lands of Maine. To Louisians's lowest shore, The cry louder and londer comes, That he shall sell their votes no more.

Four times he's tried for President, But has never yet succeeded, The reason's plain; for trattor like, Instructions he never heeded; But sold his state to Johnny Q. This case is plain as plain can be; And for that deed, the people said He would hose the Presidency.

At brag he's played for many years, 'Till time has silveced o'er his head; He cursed the speaker on the chair, When by him he would not be led; He shoused loud for Tip and Ty, And lying promises he made, And when by fraud they were got in, He quickly wish'd they both were dead

He headed mobs to break the laws, And to abuse the President, 'Disgraceful scenes of forty one, To them his aid was freely lent; In New Orleans of later day, He broke the laws of God and man, And on the Holy Sabbath there March'd thro' the streets with shouting clan Disturbed the peace of those who met To hear the word of life dispensed, And forced them to retire amid Those ranting shouts devoid of sense And on the tariff question too, He now two faces plainly shows, He at the north protection cries, And at the south for free trade goes.

The couptry's weal, or country's we With him has ever been the same; Intrigue, deceit, bargain and sale, To satisfy ambition's flame: His course is in, his course is out. And his coat he has turned for pelf, And o'er the States, from end to end Electioneered to raise himself.

For twenty years and more, he's stood To trumpet forth alone his fame ; While oft his deeds have been con demued In ways too various to name. The nation spoke in twenty eight, Too plain to be misunderstood; It said that Clay was not the man Whose acts were for the public good.

That voice again in thirty-two,
