isement from H. Doan, in which he not only dvertises me as a runaway, but as a rogue Duty to myself requires that I should nor rect this unjust charge and base insinuation. I come to live with him about 4 years ago. The first year he treated me tolerably well. In the exercise of his enlarged benevolence he allowed me the privilege of doing over work after 9 o'clock at night, so that by being very industrious, I was enabled to cover myself tolerably decent. For the last three years he was not only exceedingly ross and pevish, but even cruel to me. compelling me to work to an unusual late nour at night, and rendering my life bur densome. He says, 'can't tell what clothing he had on,' &c. There is one very good reason for this, because for the lastwo years, I believe, he has not purchased received. As it respects 'a guilty look,' good new BAKN, and other out houses, and which he says I have, I only remark, if a man's innocence or guilt is to be established by his looks, I am perfectly willing to compare faces with my Old Master, and I do eel confident that I shall not suffer by the omparison. Mr. D. charges me with be ng a Rogue. In proof of the falseness of ever required. this charge, I appeal to all who know me. This charge coming from the source it does reminds me of the saying of an Irishman that was accused before a dutch Magistrate. who after hearing testimony on one side only, replied 'well Pat you must be a great rogue.' To which Pat replied, Not so takes
