MOUNTAIN LIFE.
 SUFFERINGS OF RAPHAEL CARRAFEL IN THE SNOW
 Poor Tom's a-cold.—Shakespeare.
 Strange and dangerous adventures, histories of mournful interest, wild and startling tales of trial, privation, misery, bravery, feasting, fighting, scalping, adverse transitions, revelry, rivalry, &c., all glowing in fresh and vivid colors, may be picked up by any body who will carry a book and pencil in his pocket, thick as blackberries, among the men of the mountains and the white wanderers of the Wilderness. Our present sketch will embody a true anecdote of the sufferings of a poor mountaineer, by the name of Carrafel, who in the winter of 1842, was buried alone, under a frightful snow storm, and nearly perished.

Carrafel, was sent out from Fort Platte, on Laramie Ford, in February, on an important express message to the Chayenne Indians, then located on Chayenne river, or stream of some note, that assisted in swelling the grand current of the Missouri. Poor Raphael Carrafel—for such were his appellations in full—started in fine spirits from the Fort, upon his dangerous errand, in company with a body of hunters, who were only venturing out for a few days, seeking to make what is termed a "surround." This may be understood, it is presumed, without explanation. The hunters, on finding game spread themselves into a circle & close in upon the animals they wish to kill. After day or two, a successful surround was made, and the whole company encamped, upon a water course, known as "Raw Hide Creek," which glides from the Northern Hills, and rolls into the north fork of the Platte. Snow came down upon them during the night, with heavy and increasing violence, so that it was found impossible to move camp in the morning, and the hunters did not start for their return to the Fort until the next day.

Here Carrafel was left to pursue his desolate journey alone; and off he set, well supplied with fresh meat, reaching L'eau qui Court, at "Running Water," in time to rook supper and cache him comfortably for the night. The snow continued, beating down every hour faster and thicker, and swelling now five feet deep far around the solitary and trackless wilderness. The poor fellow found it impossible to proceed, and remained here two days, until, on the third, finding the meat swiftly diminishing and the storm growing worse, instead of exhibiting any indication of a change, he resolved, desperately, to risk the chances, and attempt to get forward. He was lucky enough to succeed in reaching a water course called "Hat Creek," the same day, the snow heavily and steadily increasing; and, starting again the next morning, he finally grew weak and sick, from long endurance and scant provisions, until he dropped in the snow, and buried for a resting place. The storm had now continued eight successive days, and Carrafel, after a long sleep, found strength the next day, to get up and danglely push on. Not a thing had crossed him since he left the hunters, and his wild eye now roved in vain around the white waste, in search of some sign of game. Another night in the snow, and Carrafel awoke in the morning with the horrible pangs of frost bitten feet!

In this frightful extremity, knowing the necessity of rousing himself to the utmost, to escape certain and speedy death, he fell to work beating himself furiously all over the body with his rifle, and striking his tortured feet, too, until he roared and screamed again in the bleak wild like a famished hyena. Thus brave, determined and extraordinary act of presence of mind, beyond all doubt, saved the life of poor Carrafel, as he had already commenced stealing through him, soothing the sharp affliction in his feet he would, inevitably, have sunk into his last sleep in the snow. But this enabled him to struggle forward still, as he did, staggering with weakness, and half blind with the perpetual glare of the snow. For a few hours he sustained himself in motion in this manner, falling repeatedly, and some times crawling, until the last moment of human endurance seemed to have arrived when he, fortunately, reached a spot favorable for the construction of a little shanty of boughs, which he soon contrived, and there lay for three days, quite powerless, and chewing the greasy leather that he wore which, with the snow around him, formed his only sustenance.

On the morning of the fourth day, as the miserable express messenger still lay on his back in his little shelter, his sinking spirit was aroused by the unlooked and joyful apparition of an old, worn down bull, wandering, (blind perhaps,) within a few paces of the hut. Carrafel rolled to his side and his rifle was levelled over the surface of the snow in an instant. It was a sure and deadly aim that the starving, dying man, put upon the huge brute, and the game was down on the spot, panting and melting the snow with its hot blood. The sight was new life to Carrafel, who dragged himself from his shanty & cut into the flesh of the bull ere yet the enormous head had ceased to roll, the eyes to glare, or the limbs to tremble. Raw! he roared, gnawed, and sucked the meat raw, once more reviving his strength in some measure, with this savage sustenance, but not sufficiently to enable him to butcher the tough old bull, and, dragging with him only part of a "beece," he regained the shanty, replenished his fire, reloaded his rifle, and rolled, exhausted, into his buff-robe.

Subsisting on this providential supply of meat for three days, the poor mountaineer got strength to crawl, and, after drying some of the jerked flesh, he turned and started homeward, making a desperate effort to reach the Fort. Struggling against his enfeebled and miserable condition, Carrafel made two miles that day, and fortunately, when worn down to the last gasp; found a spot of timber fit for encamping in. But the exert on had been too much for him, and the next morning he was unable to rise. In this state the wretched man remained forty one days; just managing to fire from his bed upon some game as came near, and so obtaining food. In the depth of winter; throughout its most bitter portion, and in the heart of the wilderness; an unhappy invalid; prostrate and alone, forty one days in the snow!

He once killed a bull so near him during the night that the legs of wolves immediately besetting the carcass, assailed himself; also, and he only escaped destruction by driving them back fire with brands. In the morning he was glad to secure the marrow bones, and such meat from the mangled bull as the voracious dogs of the prairie had left him, and drying the flesh, he once more attempted his way to the Fort. He made some distance, and reached a creek, which rose upon him during the night. On the flood he saw a drowned buffalo calf floating down; but was too enfeebled to make an effort in securing it. But in the morning he eagerly followed the bank of the stream, and had the unhoped for luck of finding the calf lodged among drift wood not far from where it had passed him. From this most fortunate chance a new supply of provision fell into his hand, as if sent to the poor starveling from heaven, for at this time he had but three rifle charges of ammunition left!

Again, better fortune attended him as he slowly and wearily made his way back to wards his friends, for two elk crossed him, and, with two well managed shots, he killed them both, leaving himself now, for the rest of his desolate journey, to depend upon what meat he could dry and drag with him, and the last solitary charge in his rifle. For nine days longer, he resolutely worked onward, and the poor fellow was saved!

One morning a sudden cry ran through Fort Platte of "a bear! a bear!" and a half a dozen hunters were out immediately, making toward the spot where, from the walls of the fort they had seen some living thing moving through the snow. It was poor Carrafel! crawling feeble homeward on his hands and knees, gasping with joy at once more seeing the fort, and fainting at last at the sight of his friends.

One day longer, and the unhappy wanderer must inevitably have perished. He had crawled; literally dragged himself, through whole distance homeward, over ice and snow, through streams and broken ravines, tortured with the pangs of frozen feet, a starving and debilitated body, and progressing only at the miserable rate of from two to four miles a day. This is one case of, perhaps, as been prolonged suffering as was ever known among mountains.

Carrafel continues a cripple for life and a pensioner at Fort Platte; having entirely lost the balls from both feet. He was under care two months at the fort before he could touch his frost bitten extremities to the ground at all, and the succeeding September when he gave himself, his relation to the writer, he moved on crutches, but otherwise quite restored.

A clergyman declared, that hypocrisy is the mock turtle soup of the Christian banquet, and the false calves and bustle of the wedding garment.

Marrying a buoyant, bright eyed, rosy cheeked girl of 18 to a crusty; uncomely old bat-helor of five and forty, is placing a jewel in a hog's snout.

POLITICAL COURTSHIP.
 The New York Mercury tells the following anecdote: Jonathan walks in, takes a seat and looks at Sukey, Sukey takes up the fire, blows out the candle, and don't look at Jonathan. Jonathan hitches and wriggles about in his chair, and Sukey sits perfectly still.

At length Jonathan masters courage and speaks—
 Sukey?
 Well, Jonathan,
 I love you like pizen and sweatmeats,
 Dew tell?
 It's a fact, and no mistakes—wi—will—now—will you have me Sukey?
 Jonathan Higgins, what am your politics?
 I'm for Polk straight!
 Well, sir, you can walk right straight hum, cots I won't have nobody that ain't for Clay—that's flat.

Three cheers for the 'mill boy of the slashes, sung out Jonathan.

That's your sort! says Sukey. When shall we be married, Jonathan?
 Soon's Clay's elected!
 Ahem! A h-e m!
 What's the matter, Sukey?
 Sposin he ain't elected!
 Jonathan didn't go away till next morning, but whether he answered the last question, this deponent knoweth not.

EYES RIGHT.
 Brag's a good dog,
 But Holdfast is better.

THE undersigned would return his sincere and humble thanks to the citizens of Bloomsburg and vicinity, for the favors thus far bestowed upon him, and would still further ask a continuance of the same, so long only as satisfaction is rendered. He would not say, Come one come all, but come as many as conveniently can. Neither would he promise, (as others have,) to do his work better than can be done in any other shop in the place—but in short, he would neither brag nor hanker, but defy any one who does brag to do work nearer than he does, in all cases. He has also lately received the

☞ In fact, whatever offer is made, by any other Family Journal, at all approaching in worth, beauty or pretensions, to the Saturday Courier, will be furnished by us.

The Courier has become so well and favorably known through a triumphantly popular course of fourteen years, that it would be superfluous to say much on that subject here. We may remark, however, that to the industry, talent and enterprise which have for years kept this paper a bright exemplar for all its imitators, will constantly be added the productions of every available writer, and continued judicious and liberal expenditures will continue to be made, as well in the Literary as the Typographical departments. Our means will always enable us to be in advance of all others, and we shall be so.

HISTORIES OF MODERN REPUBLICS.
 A new and important announcement for the coming year, in addition to our already numerous popular features, will be a series of Condensed Histories of Modern Republics, by a fresh and vigorous writer, who will impart a world of important instruction to the rising generation, in this new and entertaining Romance of History.

Biographies and notices of Distinguished Literary and Scientific Men
 Among the interesting essays and sketches of value, which we shall continue to present in the Courier, will be a full and interesting account of the life, progress, and present elevated standing of distinguished men, of the Past and Present, (at home or abroad,) in all departments of Art, Science, Literature, Statesmanship, Poetry, Mechanic, Painting, Agriculture, Printing, Merchandise, &c.

This will be a very interesting feature for the Young. It will be a department of the Courier which it has ever been our aim to render of inestimable value to those for whom we feel so deep an interest as we do for the Young Men of our great and growing Country. The Lives of Distinguished Men are of such value to those who are yet forming their own characters; for the purpose of ennobling their parts, correctly, on the Great Stage of Human Life.

Indeed, we hope that this Department of the Courier will be worth more (each year) to every family who have sons and daughters to be reared than five times the amount we ask for a year's subscription to the Saturday Courier.

Incidents, Histories, Scenes, Battle Grounds, &c., of the American and all other Revolutions.
 Under this head, which is, by the way, not at all new in the Courier, we shall hereafter give graphic and interesting accounts (occasionally beautifully illustrated) of the thrilling incidents, so profoundly studied through the deeply important history of the American Revolution, and of all other revolutions that we may regard of the least interest of value the readers of the Philadelphia Saturday Courier. This will be of deep consequence, also, to every member of any family of the American Republic, who may choose to do themselves, and us the favor of securing, regularly, the visits of the Courier at their Family Fireside.

POPULAR TOPOGRAPHY.—To gratify the growing appetite for a better knowledge of the important features of our great and glorious country, our past exertions shall be redoubled in future to present vivid pictures of American cities, towns, mountains, lakes, rivers, caves, scenery, &c.

Our original domestic Tales, Essays, Poems, &c. will continue regularly to be furnished by the quills and pens in the country. These choice productions are acknowledged to be the best, for useful instruction at the family fireside, that appear in any periodical.

OUR SUBSCRIBERS comprise subjects in all branches of Art and Nature, suitable for the family circle, and appear in rapid succession.

OUR TRAVELLER is constantly traversing the world, in search of the wonderful and instructive.

OUR AGRICULTURIST occupies weekly an important space, with all matters of interest for the noble tillers of the soil.

Our European Correspondents, in Liverpool, London, Ireland, the East, &c. keep us regularly advised of all subjects of special interest.

Our Markets and Prices Current embrace all the earliest advices in reference to the prices of all kinds of Grain, Produce, &c. the state of Stocks, Banks, Money, and Land, and our extensive arrangements will hereafter render our Prices Current of inestimable value to the Traveller, Farmer, and all Business Classes whatever.

EMBRACING the present opportunity of expressing his thankfulness to his friends, and the public generally, for the liberal patronage he has heretofore received, informs his friends and the public in general, that he still continues to carry on the above business at his old established stand, on the corner of Main and East streets, where he hopes, by strict attention to business, to receive and merit a share of public patronage as heretofore. He deems it unnecessary to go into the game of brag, or to use any soft adjectives about his SKILL in the PROFESSION OF CALICUTTING; he is fully conversant with the art of cutting, and he thinks will speak for itself, and far more loudly than words. But he would merely say that, he warrants his work done with neatness, durability, and in the latest fashionable manner, and will ensure a good fit in all cases.

Brandreth's Pills.
 PICTURE OF HEALTH.

HEALTH is characterized in the body's stately absence of all pain, suffering, or affliction in any part of his body; by the free and regular exercise of his functions without any exception. They consist in having a good appetite at all times, an easy digestion, free evacuations, without looseness or constiveness at least once in every twenty-four hours, and without heat, dryness, or tumour at the passage, the free issue of the water which acrimony or burning, and without a reddish sediment which is always a sign of a present, or an approaching pain; quiet sleep without agitation or troublesome dreams; no taste of bile or other bad taste in the mouth upon rising in the morning; no sickness or disagreeable rising of the stomach; a clean tongue; a sweet breath; no itching, pimples or spots on the skin; no burning heat upon any part of the body; no excessive thirst; no exposure to labor or other known cause; no interruption to any natural evacuation, nor pain at their periodical return.

Where the state of the system does not harmonize with the above picture of health, it is of the greatest importance that no time be lost in sending for a doctor, or in the use of foolish remedies, to often the result of speculation; instead of this, procure a dose of BRANDRETH'S PILLS be taken, which will not deceive, but will at once restore health to the organ or part that requires it.

All who wish to preserve their health, all who are determined to defend their life against the encroachments of disease which might send them prematurely to the grave, will, without hesitation, have recourse to the Brandreth Pills, when the state of the system does not harmonize with the above picture of health.

Those who live in a country where contagious or other diseases prevail, should often think of the true picture of health, and observe himself with particular attention, in order to act accordingly. The wise and rightly directed will follow this advice, the unwise are left to their own destruction.
