CAST IRON STEREOTYPE.

The following notice of an improvement in making stereotype plates is found in > Year's day, says; foreign journal Experiments have for some years been in progress, chiefly under the superintendence of Hetr Dasse, Inspector of Mines at Ribeland, in the Duchy of Brunswick, with a view to make cast Iron as the cheaper and more durable material, applicable to the preparation of stereotype plans. The success of these experiments hough we have had a few brief spells of is attested by the publication of a cast iron stereotype edition of the Bible published as Nordhausen the price of which, with inar ginal readings, is 9 ggr , or 26 cents,'

A GENEROUS ACT.

The Monmouth (N. J) Inquirer tells the following touching story: 'One cold morn ing a young woman was observed setting on one of the many wharves that jut out into the Hudson from the western side of the city of New York. It was not far from Washington Market, While crowds of busy people were passing and repassing the end of the wharf, intent on their business, and hurried by the keen cold wind she was weeping and sobbing as if her hearwould break. Presently an honest faced man, just about to step into a steamboat, the occasional revolving wheels of which be tokened a speedy departure, toucked with pity at the woman's sad appearance, felt so far interested as to inquire the cause of her grief. She heeded not his question but seemed more than ever effected. He pressed his inquiry as to her trouble, sh now stammered in the German language Fortunately the good souled man unders.
