

THE GARLAND

With sweetest flowers curied... From various gardens culd with care.

THE DEATH OF NAPOLEAN

Imitated from the Italian of Manzoni. BY ALEXANDER H. EVERETT.

He too reposes from his toil... The mighty mind has fled; And motionless the mortal coil Upon the earth is laid.

From Egypt's flood to St. Bernard... His crashing thunderbolts were heard, His lightning terrors shone.

The joy of wild Ambition's dream... Its insly-gnawing care Were his, and has the last extreme Of good and ill to share.

Two worlds—the men of yesterday... And of to-morrow,—stood Engaged for years in furious fray— Drenched in each other's blood.

How oft—as some poor shipwrecked man... 'Mid ocean's raging swell With straining eyeballs tries to scan The life-preserving sail—

How often—as with downcast eyes... And folded arms he stood; When sunset stained with golden dyes The vast Atlantic flood;

Ab! then he felt his fatal lapse... From that resplendent show To his rock-prison and, perhaps, Had sunk beneath the blow,

Faith—saving Faith—the ever-blest, Upon the record-roll Of her achievements then impress'd The noblest of the whole!

O Yis! O Yis! O Yis!—Cried an Irishman in the street a few days since, ringing a bell.
