

Tribute of Respect to Captain May.—Captain May is a native of Washington, D. C., and some of our citizens from that district yesterday raised a subscription, and purchased for their countryman a sword and belt, which was despatched to him last night. The sword has the following inscription upon it—Presented to Captain Charles May, of the Second Regiment of United States Dragoons, by his fellow citizens of New Orleans from the District of Columbia, as a token of their sense of his gallantry displayed in the battle with the Mexican forces, May 9th 1846.

Ringgold's Successor.—The Balt American says—

After the fall of the gallant Major Ringgold in the recent battle on the Rio Grande, the command of his company devolved upon another Marylander, Lieutenant Randolph Rubey, son of Gen R. of Ekridges. Letters from the Army speak in the highest terms of the giant manner in which Lieut R took the battery into action. He was ordered to the front and was among the first brought into action of the second battle. He gave one round and then joined the dashing May in his charge on the enemy.

COPPER BALLS.

The Mexicans use 'copper grape,' and it is represented as being most dangerous. They are made rough, and let to accumulate verdigris, and other noxious coating peculiar to copper, and when they wound they are almost fatal. We are not informed, says the New Orleans Tribune, whether the Mexicans use the copper because of its poisonous qualities or because they have no lead. We see it stated however that but few of those that have been wounded balls in the American army stand any chance of recovery as the great heat and mortification caused by the nature of the balls is rapidly carrying them off, as was the case with the lamented Major Brown.

Capt May's Charge.—The editor of the New Orleans Courier has seen a letter from Capt. May to his brother in this city, dated Point Isabel, May 12. The captain tells his brother that the squadron at the head of which he charged the enemy's battery, contained 82 men; and of these he lost one officer and 10 privates killed and 10 wounded—that is, nearly one-third of his men, and almost half of his horses hors du combat. The captain himself was not touched, which fortunate circumstance was owing to his being about ten yards in advance of his squadron in the charge.

How their names are pronounced.—A correspondent of the St. Louis Reveille says—As the names of the following Spanish officers are likely, at the present juncture of affairs, to be frequently in the mouths of our citizens, for the satisfaction of those not already informed as to the correct pronunciation of them, I subjoin the following:

Generals Arista, Ampudia, Mejia, and Canales, Colonels Casase and Carabiss, are pronounced by Spaniards, as nearly as possible, as follows, A-re-sa, Am-poo-di Ma-hee-a, Co-na-les, Ca-vas-no, Ca-ra-ve-hal—the vowel a, in each instance, having the sound of that letter in the English word far. The j becomes h, the b, v.
