----- With sweetest flowers enrich'd, "From variants gardens cull'd with care." 141102-0212-0227 THE FLAG OF THE UNION. BY MRS. E. L. SCHERMERHORN. Oh! rend it not-still let it wave, That star-gemed flag, o'er land and sea, The cherished signal of the brave, The glorious banner of the free, Still let its eagle soar on high,

Its stripes still freeh, its stars still brigh No tempest in the smiling sky, No gathering cloud to quence their light, Oa! plant it on each glorious spot, Unfurl it wide, but rend it not-

There comes a voice from every plain-From every mount of strife and glory. Where valor's blood has left a stain. Or history found a theme for story; From Banker Hill from Bennington, From glorious York the ery is heard: From vale to mount the sounds rolls on. And e'en the ocean depths are stirred. From every fame-remembered spot The cry is heard Old read it not.

Oh! by the chief whose awful forms Are bending from the starry sky. Who bore that flag thro' war's wild storms And proud and glorious bade it fly. Their blood-bonght flag do not despise, The prondest gift a nation knews: A flag bright streaming to the skies, That droops not to its vaunting foes. Oh! be the treasure ne'er forgot, Unfurl it wide, but rend it not.

Oh! ye the sons of noble sires, Who bravely struggled side by side. Where blazed the tented field's watch-fires, Or navies pressed the surging tide, Shall petty bickerings rend the tide, The oath fisternal sealed with blood! Shall that proud banner cease to fly, A victor flag o'er field and blood? No! be the Union ne'er forgot. Unforl it wide but rend it not.
