POETRY.

For his Sake.

BY PRANCES EROWN.

A parting step was on the stair And nearer to ber attic pane, A weary worker draw to share The evening light, as dim with rain It darkened o'or that crowded town: The needle paused, the young lips break Their silence, with a long tora down , "Would times were butter for his sake

"The days are dressy now and cold, They pass like heavy clouds o'er as Is this what men call growing old? Ohl leaves fall early from life's tree No matter-his stand fresh and green , Though years before its both look bleak But oh | that all I mussed had been Bestowed by fortune for his same."

"Well fare the rich, their chariots roll Around my tool by right and day; I know that wealth can buy the whole Men strive for in the world's highway. I have not envied pomp and power, The friends they win, he gitts they take, But oh! that mine had been a dower Of lands and thousands for his wake!"

"Fair figos pass me on the street. With curls of jet or braids of gold, The light they bring, the love they most. How oft have these been sung and told? Yet kindred's pride and suiter's praise Hang by a thread too breeze may break, But would that I to mortal gaze Had seemed the fairest for his sake !"

"Beauty and wealth are things of price, We name them happy that have gamed, Yet fate nath many a dark device To lessen every prize obtained. I could not but the boon take leave; But what a world of woe 't would make To think his heart to such might cleave And love me only for its sake."

"Vain fears, vain wishes, how they rise At once, and I have dreamt of change My mother warned me to be wise, And said he might grow great and strange The way is steep, yet he will climb Though every helping bough shall break; But hard the toil and long the time Would it were briefer for his sake."

Another step came up the stair, The dreamer turned to work again-But ask us was he worth her earn The absent love she mused on then? I say not, yet when life and hope Had lost and won him many a stake, Upon her dreams the step came up. That came no longer for her sake.

His scientific calculations proved to be founded in truth and profound wissiom, and his row in trament, the "Goldometer," telfailed his highest hopes. In less than two months alter reaching Califernia, he struck upon one of the richest gold mines in that country, upon an obly scientific research, he obtained the aid of some lifteen or twenty simple and faithful Indians, and steadily pursued his task collecting often more than $3,000 worth of gold in a single day, which he concealed in a deep ravine, without exciting any suspicion what ver, until after the discovery it professes to be the greatest Medecine of Gold at Capt. The first named is already introduced into some tinstrument which he had invented, called the of the best Academies, and a large number of Schools, where its use has given universal satisfaction, both to Teachers and pupils. It has the claim also of being purely American in its character, based upon our own beautiful decimal system of currency-and is considered by Teachers as the beginning of a new era in this department of science, by rejecting the old English system (from which nearly all our present Arithmetics are copied,) of confining the pupil for years in the process of reducing pounds to faithings, and tarthings to pounds. This Book is strongly recommended by the Hon. Thomas H. Burrowes, the late able Superion endent of and Father of our Common school System, as one of the best Arithmetics in the market. It is also recommended by Mr. Olmstead, Professor of Matt matics in Lafay ette College; Mr. Sinever, Principal of the Preparatory Department of Gettsyburg College,together with several hundred Professors and Teachers in various sections of the country. 82 It is also the cheapest Arithmetic in the market,
